AROUND THE COUNTY.

BROOKLYN.

The annual visitants are here, and camping out is in order.

Culver, who is imprisoned behind a counter the year round, is renewing his acquaintance with the frogs, expanding liberty of conscience, tearing pantaloons, and spoiling his coat and complexion over at Wampler's lake. If he had not chosen to recuperate waning energy in that fashion and Rev. Wilson of Ypsilanti, given us a sermon to-day, there would have been nothing to tell of until some news could be made, a thing not likely to happen in this place, unless, as some predict, the Clinton printer comes to stay, and brings the machinery for manufacturing song and story.

Just now a small sized jack-knife murder, would fail to distract attention from Dr. Bliss' revision of diet. If the president gets well, I have no doubt he will consider his escape from death the one great mistake of his life. National blessings, like all others, brighten as they take their flight, and if hindered from departing, there is a posibility of the shine getting dim. Does anybody suppose Mr. Garfield could ever wear an additional glow after suffering such a burnishing as he has received for ten days past? As near as can be by human agency he has been made ready. If all sorts of condolence, administered with quinine and tokay, cannot revolutionize man's nature enough to make him long for transmigration, there is no use in depending on any outside aids of providence. The usual surmise and indignation meetings have been held here as elsewhere, and there is to be a praise meeting if the symptoms continue favorable. Please allow a margin for this last, because I get my information mostly second handed. My copy of the Evening News is snatched at the back gate, crinkled out of square, traveling up street, squeezed into a wad under the corner lamp, and when Billy pokes a fragment through the picket fence next morning, he says, "Pa is sorry it got tore a little, but Dr. Bliss has examined that pistol again, and says he is going to pull the President through it." The doctor has all the help he will require while performing the experiment, so I shall not volunteer any assistance.

It will be doubtful if the simpleton in jail can retain the merit of even inaugurating an assassination, unless Heaven interferes to save the poor fellow from his friends. I am sure that no one ever worth christening wants the President to be an Angel, but what benefit will accrue to common sense, by spelling enthusiasm with a ty, or sympathy with a flourish of twaddle.

The way that little red-roan tailoress made tracks for the sidewalk, when she felt that about three hundred pounds of irate female vengeance was close on her heels with broomstick lifted high in air, would have beat O'Leary's best gait three to one.

A lawn social was held last evening (Tuesday) at the residence of J. S. Kies, for the benefit of the Episcopal church. A large company gathered, partook of ice cream and other refreshments, and had withal a very enjoyable time.

Trains from the north continue to run on the old time through the corporation, viz: at the rate of not less than from twenty to twenty-five miles an hour, notwithstanding our village ordinance.

Frank Divins met his girl for the first time last Saturday, had an introduction, said he felt like getting married, said she did the same, asked her if she would have him, said she thought she would like the taste of his ears for a spell anyhow and would try it, were married the next day, Sunday, and are now as happy as a couple of Hottentots. Frank is one of our most enterprising citizens and believes in short preliminaries.

Schaeberle's Comet.

J. M. Schaeberle, the assistant in the observatory, who discovered the new comet last week, obtained a fine observation of it Monday morning, the cloudy weather of the past few days having hitherto prevented this. The comet rises about 1 o'clock A. M. and can be best observed between the hours of 2 and 3. It has grown considerably brighter in the last few days, and is probably approaching the earth. Prof. Harrington, knowing just where to look for it, was able to observe it Monday morning with an inch opera glass, and it may become visible to the naked eye. It has a stellar nucleus, is five minutes long, and its head is four minutes in diameter. It is moving north at the rate of a quarter of a degree daily, and increasing in right ascension at the rate of sixty-seven seconds. In reply to telegrams asking for information regarding the comet from Cincinnati, Boston and other cities, Mr. Schaeberle sent several dispatches on Monday.

WE have received a copy of the Legislative Manual of Michigan for 1881. It contains much useful information and is a very valuable book of reference.

Godey's Lady's Book for August

Is a beautiful issue of this old favorite, and is fully adapted to the midsummer season. The Colored Fashion Plates form a picture worth having, and the Steel Plate Illustration, from a design by Darley, is alone worth the price of the Book. There is a novelette by Mrs. De Bubna entitled "A Midsummer Drama," which makes a very pretty love story, and the usual rich array of shorter stories, poems and sketches, Recipes, Puzzles, Games and the ever reliable Fashion and Work Department richly illustrated. There is also given a Diagram pattern for a lady's evening bodice. Any of our readers who do not take the Lady's Book can be supplied, promptly, by leaving their orders at this office.

A Lady Correspondent.

Mr. Editor:—In a recent issue of your paper "Daisy B." writes to know what to do when she has the "blues." Now, I have been troubled with that very unpleasant and essentially feminine complaint in the past, and I am quite sure my experience will help her. I dont believe those indigo feelings come because things don't go right around us, but because matters don't go right within us. Every lady understands this and knows the cause. For years I suffered terribly, and I now see that I might have avoided it all had I known what I do to-day. I tried taking Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure as an experiment, and it did for me more than I could even have dreamed it possible to do for any woman. I would not be without it for the world, and I earnestly advise Daisy B. or any lady troubled as she was to use the means which I did and I am sure it will have the same effect.

The August number of the North American Review devotes a liberal share of its space to a polemical duel between Col. Ingersoll, the great exponent of the unbelief of the day, and Judge Jeremiah S. Black, the eminent jurist. Col. Ingersoll is master of some of the most effective arts of the rhetorician and the popular orator. As an assailant of revealed religion he has more chance of success in confirming the skeptical and carrying away the wavering than perhaps any other infidel of modern times. He is engaged in constant aggressive attack, and the audiences which applaud him afford evidence that he is producing effect. Judge Black is distinguished alike for his steadfast faith in orthodox Christianity and for the power and skill with which he is able to sustain any cause in which his convictions are enlisted. Of the merits of the battle it is for an interested public to judge.

Blissfield Advance: A report was current on the street on Tuesday evening that two men were killed by lightning at Palmyra during the storm. We have taken special pains to learn the particulars, and find that the report grew out of the following facts: During the storm Fred Warner and James Hyde were setting up wheat that had been blown down by the wind. When the rain came on young Warner took shelter under a tree. He had scarcely got under shelter when the tree was struck by lightning. The electricity ran down the trunk of the tree, tearing down a strip of bark over five inches wide till it came parallel with his head, and from there the entire bolt passed over his body to the ground. The rim of his hat was torn to shreds, his hair on the back of his head burned off, his back was fearfully blistered by the heat, and several blue streaks the length of his body were left where the lightning passed down into the ground. The young man was unconscious for a little while, but when Dr. Reynolds, who was immediately summoned, had arrived, he was able to speak. Aside from the burns on his body he has entirely recovered from the shock. It is a wonder he was not instantly killed.

Hudson Gazette: The greatest damage wrought by the tornado was the total wrecking of the great Cross barn, a mammoth structure, 40x72, erected 10 years since at a cost of $1,200. The terrible wind with a clean mile sweep struck the barn squarely on the broad west side. The roof was first blown from the building, which, under the continued pressure, separated and fell crashing to the ground. When the reporter visited the scene Wednesday morning it presented indeed a sadly demoralized appearance—roof, siding, beams, rafters and stringers all shattered and heaped up in a deplorable condition. Two threshing machines, standing in the building, were but slightly injured, but a sulky rake, a splendid buggy, two wagons, a fanning mill and other farming utensils were so badly damaged as to be almost worthless. The barn, the largest in the county, was a fine building, the disaster to which invokes the sympathy of friends and neighbors who will assist in clearing up the debris preparatory to its re-erection.

Hudson Post: As there has been considerable trouble in bands heretofore existing as to the ownership of the uniforms and horns purchased for them by the citizens, the new band have all signed an agreement to have the uniforms and instruments controled by the Common Council for the citizens of Hudson. The agreement also stipulates that the instruments and uniforms are only to be used for band purposes. This will prevent any member who may become dissatisfied, from taking the instrument and uniform which he has been using, with him, as has been done in the old bands, and it will also serve a great deal toward keeping the members in harmony with each other, and of keeping the band in existence. The new band now numbers sixteen members, nearly all of whom are old players, and the good music that they now produce for the short time they have played together speaks well for them.

THE farmers of Jackson county are troubled with a new kind of potato bug. It works under ground and eats out the inside of the tuber.

ADRIAN and Blissfield have already held their annual school meetings.

The Expansive Power of Water.

It is a well known, but not the less remarkable, fact that if the tip of an exceedingly small tube be dipped into water, the water will rise spontaneously in the tube throughout its entire length. This may be shown in a variety of ways; for instance, when a piece of sponge or sugar, or cotton is just allowed to touch water, these substances being composed of numbless little tubes, draw up the water, and the whole becomes wet. It is said to suck up or imbibe the moisture. We see the same wonderful action going on in nature in the rising of the sap through the small tubes or pores of the wood, whereby the leaves and upper portions of the plant derive nourishment from the ground.

This strange action is called "capillary," from the resemblance the minute tubes bear to a hair, the Latin of which is capillus. It is, moreover, singular that the absorption of the water takes place with great force. If a dry sponge be enclosed tightly in a vessel, it will expand when wetted with sufficient force to burst it, unless very strong.

Wood, which is a more unyielding material, acts with tremendous force when wetted, and advantage has been taken of this fact in spliting blocks of granite. This process is largely adopted in Dartmoor. After a mass of granite has been rent from the mountain by blasting, it is measured in every direction to see how best to divide it into smaller blocks. These are traced out by straight lines on the surface, and a series of holes are drilled at short intervals along this line. Wedges of dry wood are then tightly driven into the holes and wetted, and the combined action of the swelling wood splits the block in the direction required, and without any destructive violence. The same process is then carried out upon the other faces, and the roughly-shapen block finished with the hammer and chisel.

Maternal Intervention.

In one of the public schools in San Francisco, a youth bubbling over with high spirits, violated a long established rule, and was summoned to the bar of judgment. With many sobs and tears he confessed the soft impeachment. "Have your mother call to-morrow," the teacher remarked, with awful and ominous significance. His maternal ancestor appeared on the following day, and, after being duly and publicly informed of the flagrant breach of discipline her son had been guilty of, was requested to say if she would punish him herself or have the teacher attend to the matter. She preferred the latter course, and urged that the blows be well laid on. The next day was appointed for the flagellation. At the usual hour for such unpleasant affairs the youth was summoned to the front. He came with a hang-dog look and some trepidation. An oration on youthful frivolities having been duly delivered, the boy was ordered to extend his hand beneath an upraised ruler. He refused, and, in accordance with the usual custom in such cases, was spread across the teacher's knees, and the punishment administered in another quarter from the one originally intended. For some unexplainable reason the most energetic blows fell without the desired effect. A consultation of male teachers ensued, and the offender was conducted to a private room, and his wardrobe subjected to a rigid examination. On the interior of his bifurcated garment, at a locality of great strategical importance in such an emergency, was a thick flannel baby's frock securely attached. "Who sewed that on?" demanded the principal, in a voice of thunder. "My mother," answered the boy, with broken sobs. The teachers hurriedly consulted again, instructed the boy never to reveal the circumstance, and sent him to his studies. Somehow the matter leaked out.

Life in the Polar Regions.

It is impossible to form an idea of a tempest in the polar seas. The icebergs are like floating rocks whirled along a rapid current. The huge crystal mountains dash against each other, backward and forward, bursting with a roar like thunder, and returning to the charge until losing their equilibrium they tumble over in a cloud of spray, upheaving the ice-fields, which fall afterward like the crack of a whip-lash on the boiling sea. The sea gulls fly away screaming, and often a black shining whale comes for an instant puffing to the surface. When the midnight sun grazes the horizon, the floating mountains and the rocks seem immersed in a wave of beautiful purple light. The cold is by no means so insupportable as is supposed. We passed from a heated cabin at thirty degrees above zero to 47 degrees below zero in the open air without inconvenience. A much higher degree of cold becomes, however, insufferable if there is wind. At 15 degrees below zero a steam, as if from a boiling kettle, rises from the water. At once frozen by the wind, it falls in a fine powder. This phenomenon is called ice-smoke. At 40 degrees the snow and human bodies also smoke, which smoke changes at once into millions of tiny particles, like needles of ice, which fill the air and make a light, continuous noise, like the rustle of a stiff silk. At this temperature the trunks of trees burst with a loud report, the rocks break up and the earth opens and vomits smoking water. Knives break in cutting butter. Cigars go out by contact with the ice on the beard. To talk is fatiguing. At night the eyelids are covered with a crust of ice, which must be carefully removed before one can open them.

Patent Flour.

Almost everybody knows of patent flour, but not every one understands what it is. Stripped of technicalities, this is about the story of its manufacture: The best flour used to be made of winter wheat. Spring wheat yielded either much less in quantity or else so much of the bran got into the flour in its manufacture that its color was intolerably dark. The wheat would be ground out and then bolted. In the refuse—the bran and middlings—would be included a large portion of the weight of the spring wheat, and this would sell more particularly for feed for horses. Now the best of flour, and the most expensive, is made of this very refuse of the old-fashioned process. It all came of the discovery of a way to draw out the bran. Under the the new process the wheat is ground about as before. The first result is an ordinary flour sold for exportation. Then the remainder is taken and put upon horizontal sieves, and while agitation is going on there an ingenious system of draft is rushing up through, and carries off the bran. What is left is the glutinous portion of the wheat, the most nutritious and most productive, and out of this, purified now by the drawing off of the bran, we get our new process flour. The result of the discovery of the process has been to make the poor spring wheat of Minnesota and upper Wisconsin the most valuable kind of grain.

Cigar Smuggling.

The New York Tribune says: "For many years the smuggling of cigars into this port by the crews of the Havana steamers was a regular business. Millions were brought in each year. Generally they were concealed behind the skin of the steamer, being fastened by means of a cross-piece of wood. If there was any danger of detection, the fastening was cut and the package allowed to drop down to the bottom of the bilge. These smuggled cigars are done up in packages of 1000 or more, covered with oil skin. Often these packages are dropped overboard in the lower bay or at quarantine, and are picked up by confederates in small boats, brought up to the city and disposed of. In other cases they are kept on ship board, concealed in places where no one would be apt to look for them, and carried ashore in small quantities as opportunity affonded. Experience has taught the custom inspectors where to look for contraband articles of this kind, and not a week passes that seizures of smuggled cigars are not made. A short time ago 15,000 cigars were found in one of the bread-tubs of a Havana steamer, where they had been placed by the cook and covered with dough. They had been found under the boilers, hidden away under masses of coal in the coal-bunkers, and covered with a bulky cargo. A small shed of wooden bin, was found in a coal-bunker not long ago, and in this was 10,000 cigars, packed in a small compass. If too closely watched by the inspecters, the crew will take back the cigars and take their chances of smuggling them ashore on a subsequent voyage. Bay oil, which pays a duty of 50 cents per ounce, is also a favorite article for smuggling." The duty is almost prohibitory, and even if a small amount can be brought in undetected, it pays handsomely. It is put up in 22-ounce bottles, and these can be handily stowed away and taken ashore one at a time. Smuggling is not confined to this end of the route, however. The Spanish authorities impose a duty of $8 per pound on opium, and the means adopted to evade the custom officers at Havana are very ingenious. Small quantities in tin boxes are packed in tubs and barrels of butter. Cans of opium are packed in large rolls of wall paper, which is duty free. They are hidden in barrels of potatoes, and in other articles where they are likely to escape detection.

Marrying for Love.

The man who marries for love has generally the vital temperament—is combative, sagacious, and independent, and takes a general view of everything. A life of indolence and stagnation has no charms for one whose blood is warm and whose hopes are high; he likes to be in the thickest of the fight, giving blows and taking them; watching for the turn of events with coolness and foresight; pleased at his own independence and struggles; eager to show the world what he can achieve; and the contest rouses all the strength and manliness of his nature. He wins the respect of his fellows by his own worth. He often brings home pleasant surprises for his wife and children. You may recognize him in trains loaded with parcels, which he good-naturedly carries with perfect unconcern of what others think—a new bonnet, music, books, a set of furs for his wife; while in another parcel the wheels of a cart, a jack-in-the-box, a doll, or skipping-rope intrude through the paper and suggest the nursery. He never forgets the dear ones at home; the humanizing influence of that darling red-cheeked little fellow who calls him father brings a glow of rapture of the purest pleasure earth holds; for the man who has never felt a tiny hand clasp his will always lack something—he will be less human, less blessed than others. This is the noble, the honest, the only form of life that imparts real contentment and joy, that will make a death-bed glorious, and love see peace through its tears. It is so purely unselfish, so tenderly true, it satisfies the highest instincts, it stimulates men to the best deeds they are capable of. By studying now to live we best know how to die; ond the finest life is that which ministers to others' needs and increases the joys of those dependent on us, whom we love, and who look to us for support, solace; and light, even as the earth is revivified by the sun; for feeling is life, the pulsation of delicious sympathy, the spring in a desert, the manna from the skies.

Cold Feet.

What a common complaint this is, says the Family Physician, and yet no one seems to know anything about it. You suffer from it for years, and yet you don't go to a doctor, or if you do you derive very little benefit from his advice. Some people suffer from it at night only, while others are troubled with it in the day time as well. It occurs most frequently in women, but still you often hear men complain of it. We believe that the best remedy is hyphosphite of lime in one or two grain doses twice a day. This is soluble in water, and should be taken in the form of a mixture, nothing else being put with it, with the exception, if you like, of a teaspoonful of sirup, to make it more palatable, although it is really by no means disagreeable by itself. Another good remedy is nux vomica—five drops of the tincture in a little water three or four times a day. It is highly recommended, and you may hope for great things from it. Then you must do all you possibly can to improve the state of your general health. It is probable that you are below par somehow or other, although we must admit that it does not follow of necessity. If you feel generally out of sorts, and your appetite is poor, quinine will do you good. If you are pale and anæmic, you must put your faith in iron. Parrish's chemical food often does good. Cod-liver oil is an excellent remedy for improving the general nutrition; many people feel quite in a glow after each dose.

Don't Find Fault.

In the first place, does it pay to be continually finding fault? It is a very easy matter to pick flaws in any piece of work, for no one's work is perfect. Fault-finding often becomes chronic and grows on a man just as an evil habit does, increasing day by day. There is nothing so disagreeable as to visit a home where fault-finding is continually going on, where, at the breakfast, dinner and tea table, no pleasant word is spoken, but instead each one finding fault with the others for some trifling error. I do not mean that errors should not be rebuked, but when the evening twilight is gathering, when the work of the day is over, then kindly call the little ones around you and gently and solemnly tell them of their wrongs, and see if you are not much better repaid than if the little heads had drooped all day at the angry glances and frowns on your face. There are many things every day that annoy us, but don't make life sadder by finding fault. The world might seem much pleasanter at all times if we would forget to fret, frown and find fault.

The Dignity of Housekeeping.

Where is there any station higher than the ordering of the house? While the husband has to vex himself with outward matters, while he has wealth to gather and secure, while perhaps he takes part in the administration of the State, and everywhere depends on circumstances; ruling nothing, I may say, while he conceives that he is ruling much; compelled to be but politic where he would willingly be reasonable, to dissemble where he would be open, to be false where he would be upright; while thus, for the sake of an object which he never reaches, he must every moment sacrifice the first of objects, harmony with himself—a reasonable housewife is actually governing in the interior of her family; has the comfort and activity of every person in it to provide for, and make possible. What is the highest happiness of mortals, if not to execute what we consider right and good, to be really masters of the means conducive to our aims? And where should or can our nearest aims be but in the interior of our homes? All those indispensible and still to-be-renewed supplies, where do we expect, do we require to find them, if not in the place where we rise and where we go to sleep, where kitchen and cellar, and every species of accomodation for ourselves and ours is to be always ready? What unvarying activity is needed to conduct this constantly recurring series in unbroken living order! How few are the men to whom it is given to return regularly like a star, to command their day as they command their night; to form for themselves their household instruments, to sow and to reap, to gain and to spend, and to travel around their circle with perpetual success and peace and love! It is when a woman has attained this inward mastery, that she truly makes the husband whom she loves a master; her attention will require all sorts of knowledge; her activity will turn them all to profit. Thus is she dependent upon no one; and she procures her husband genuine independence, that which is interior and domestic; whatever he possesses, he beholds secured; what he earns, well employed; and thus he can direct his mind to lofty objects and, if fortune favors, he may act in the State the same character which so well becomes his wife at home.

House Plants.

The question so often raised as to whether it is healthy to keep plants in our living rooms and sleeping rooms is answered by Dr. J. M. Anders in the Philadelphia Medical Times. Experiments made by him show the value of plants as natural and perfect "atomizers." The average rate of transpiration for plants having thin, soft leaves—like geraniums and lantanas—is found to be an ounce and a half of watery vapor per square foot of leaf surface for twelve diurnal hours of clear weather. At this rate a great tree like the Washington Elm, at Cambridge, which has been estimated to have two hundred thousand square feet of surface, would exhale seven and three-quarters tons of water in twelve hours. The rate of transpiration for a house plant is at least fifty per cent. more rapid than for one in the open air; and it is evident that a number of such plants must have a material influence on the humidity of the air in which they are kept. Experiments made by means of the hygrometer show conclusively that house plants may properly be classed as therapeutic agents. As to their unwholsomeness because of giving off carbonic acid gas at night, it has been shown by experiment that it would require twenty thrifty plants to produce an amount of the gas equivalent to that exhaled by one baby sleeper. A practical application of the data gained by experiment is given in the carefully-prepared formula: Given a room twenty feet long, twenty feet wide, and ceiling twenty feet high, warmed by dry air, a dozen thrifty plants, with soft, thin leaves and a leaf surface of six feet square each, would, if well watered and so situated to to receive the direct rays of the sun (preferably the morning sun) for at least several hours, raise the proportion of aqueous vapor to about the health standard. It is evident, then, that every house mother can keep the air of winter rooms moist by having thrifty plants in them, and there is every reason to believe that the lives of many persons who die from pulmonary complaints might be preserved by this agency at once so agreeable and so salutary. In many instances consuptive tendencies have apparently been counteracted by working among plants.

Bathing Children.

Some mothers think, when their children get beyond two or three years of age, the frequent entire bath can be dispensed with. If some of the main facts of physiology were well known and understood, every one would perceive that cleanliness of the skin is one of the conditions of good health. It happens that when bathing is disregarded, either the lungs, kidneys or bowels have more than their own apportionment of work. If these are strong and healthy, they may bear the tax with little apparent injury, but, in most cases, a lowering of the vitality and tone of the system ensues.

Large bath tubs are pleasant and convenient, but not indispensible to the proper cleaning of the skin. A speedy sponging of the body in cold water, followed by friction in pure air, is all that is necessary.

When disinclined to use water, a thorough application of the flesh-brush to the whole person will be found an admirable substitute, especially on retiring; it relieves nervousness, equalizes the circulation, and induces quiet sleep.

Mothers, above all should see that their children are well bathed. If their skins are kept active and healthy there will not be half the danger from fevers, colds and eruptive diseases. If your little one is cross or troublesome, and finds no occupation that pleases him, try the effect of a bath; sometimes it is magical, and if tired he will go to sleep, and awaken bright, cheerful and happy. Do not, though, as some parents do, plunge a child in cold water when he screams and shrinks from it, thinking you are doing a good deed. Nature must be the guide; if your child has a nervous constitution, a shock of this kind is only exhausting and injurious.

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Lincoln one day during war-time, to several western men who called upon him to criticise the Administration, "suppose all the property you were worth was in gold, and you had put it in the hands of Blondin to carry across the Niagara Falls on a tight-rope, would you shake the rope while he was passing over it, or keep shouting to him, 'Blondin, stoop a little more,' 'Go a little faster!' No, I am sure you would not. You would hold your breath as well as your tongue, and keep your hands off until he was safely over. Now, the Government is in the same situation, and is carrying across a stormy ocean an immense weight; untold treasures are in its hands. It is doing the best it can; don't badger it; keep silence and it will get you safely over."

Also 125 acre farm 1½ miles west of river road from Deerfield. Also 160 acre farm and 90 acre farm, and 20 acre farm, in Riga, any of which are decided bargains, and good reasons given for naming low prices.

Every purchaser of Lands should insist on being furnished an abstract of title, for our experience of more than 20 years shows that not more than one title in ten is perfect of record, and every week purchases agreed upon are abandoned owing to imperfections of title. I have a good carriage or farm horse, 1300 lbs. in weight for sale at a bargain.

A few thousand dollars now on hand to loan at six per cent, and on long time if desired.

The Horse in England.

The Egyptians mummied all sorts of sacred brutes, including bulls, cats and crocodiles. If Englishmen should ever take to embalming beasts, I am sure that, notwithstanding the national name and the place which roast beef holds in English song and story, they would pass by the bull and swathe the defunct horse in muslin and spices. For if the horse be not a god in England, at least the culture of the horse is a sort of religion. There are tens of thousands of English gentlemen who have horse on their minds during the greater part of their waking hours. The condition of the animals; their grooming; the cut of their tails and manes; the way in which they stand or step or stride; the fashion of their harness; the build, the look, the dress of coachman and groom; these are matters to them of deep concern, of uneasy anxiety. And this is so not once a year, or once a quarter, or once a month, but every day, and two or three times a day—every time, indeed, that they ride or drive. Nor do I mean only those who are called "horsey" men, gentle drivers of mail coaches and the like, who are grooms in everything except taking wages, and some of whom, I was told, will carry their coachmanship so far as to take their "tip." Apart from these there is a very large class to whom the perfection in the minutest point of their equestrian "turnout" is a question of the major morals. When one of this class feels sure that his horse, "trap" and groom will bear the criticism of friends and rivals, the ineffable air of solemn self-sufficiency with which he sits the saddle or the box is at once amusing and pitiable. These men criticise each other's equipages as women criticise each other's dress, as pedants criticise each other's scholarship. Indeed, in England there is a pedantry of the stable.—Richard Grant White in the Atlantic.

Premonitions of Autumn.

There was no other sound except the song of the cricket, which is but an audible stillness; for though it be very loud, and heard afar, yet the mind does not take note of it as a sound, so entirely does it mingle and lose its individuality among the characteristics of coming Autumn. Alas for the Summer! The grass is still verdant on the hills and in the valleys, the foliage of the trees is as dense as ever, and as green; the flowers are abundant along the margin of the river, and on the hedge-rows, and deep among the woods; the days, too, are as fervid as they were a month ago, and yet in every breath of wind and in every beam of sunshine there is an autumnal influence. I know not how to describe it. Methinks there is a sort of coolness amid all the heat, and a mildness in the brightest of the sunshine. A breeze cannot stir without thrilling me with the breath of Autumn, and I behold the pensive glory in the far golden gleams among the shadows of the trees. The flowers, even the brightest of them—the golden rods and the gorgeous cardinals—have their gentle sadness amid their pomp. Pensive Autumn is expressed in the glow of every one of them. I have felt this influence earlier in some years than in others. Sometimes Autumn may be perceived in the early days of July. There is no other feeling than that caused by this faint, doubtful, yet real perception, or rather prophecy, of this year's decay, so deliciously sweet and sad at the same time.—Nathaniel Hawthorne.

KILLING LARGE WEEDS.—Some weeds may be effectually exterminated by cutting off the stalks close to the ground with a scythe. The proper time to do this work is soon after they have attained their growth, but before the seeds have matured. The branches of some weeds are so close to the ground that they can only be severed from the roots by the use of a hoe, which should be very sharp in order to do the work well and with any considerable degree of ease. Weeds should be cut quite early in the season, in order to prevent the ripening of the seeds that would give trouble another year, if not the same season they grow. The seeds of some weeds are entirely ripe while the petals of the blossoms are still fresh. The appearance of the plant affords no indication of the maturity of the seed, as in the case with grain. It requires considerable pains to destroy some large weeds, as burdocks, mulleins and Canada thistles. The stalks must be cut several inches below the surface of the ground or they will throw up suckers in the same manner as trees and bushes. A sharp spade or a narrow steel blade fixed to a handle is the best implement to use for the purpose. After the stalk is cut and removed, it is well to drop a handful of salt on the stump that remains in the earth. A drop of sulphuric acid, applied with the end of a stick, is effectual in destroying the life of the roots of weeds. Strong lye, Paris green or London purple may also be employed for the same purpose with most excellent results. It is always best to make sure work with large and troublesome weeds.

A Viking's War Ship.

An interesting discovery has been made at Sandeherred, in Norway, of a Scandinavian war vessel. Buried under a hillock, a sailing vessel was found, which is thought to belong to those terrible highwaymen of the ocean, the Vikings, or Norwegian pirates. It measures about seventy-five feet in length, and is in an almost perfect state of preservation. It was armed and equipped as though it had been abandoned where found when on the point of sailing on some adventurous expedition. All the apparatus used by nautical Norsemen are met with in this ancient craft, the most of which is still pretty well intact. There are fragments of sails and cordage remaining, as well as many specimens, either perfect or incomplete, of utensils and instruments, which have been eagerly examined by antiquaries. Among other things are a number of pieces of oak wood, peculiarly shaped, wrought with a certain elegance, and hollowed out in the centre to admit of ropes being passed through them. Spades and shields, or bucklers, have also been found, or rather the iron portion of the bucklers, for the wooden part is entirely gone. Near the rudder the skeletons of three horses were discovered. The form of the shields, and also the manner in which they are suspended round the interior of the ship, is absolutely the same as one sees represented on the beautiful tapestry of Bayeux, in Normandy, which dates back to the eleventh century.

Why an Old Texan Made His Will.

One day last month when trade was dull, a grocer's clerk procured a piece of sole leather from a shoemaker, painted it black and laid it aside for future use. Within a few days an old chap from back in the country came in and inquired for a plug of chewing tobacco. The piece of sole leather was tied up, paid for, and the purchaser started for home. At the end of the sixth day he returned, looking downcast and dejected, and walking into the store he inquired for the clerk. "Member that terbacker I got here the other day?" "Yes, sir." "Well, was that a new brand?" "Yes." "Regular plug terbacker, was it?" "Yes." "Well, then, it's me." "It's right here in my jaws," sadly replied the old man. I knowed I was getting purty old, but I was allus handy at bitin' plug. I never seed a plug afore this one that I couldn't tear to pieces at a chaw. I sot my teeth on this one, and bit and pulled and twisted like a dog at a root, and I've kept biting and pulling for six days, and there she am the same as the day you sold her to me." "Seems to be a good plug," remarked the clerk, as he smelt of the counterfeit. "She's all right; it's me that's failing," remarked the old man. "Pass me out some fine cut, and I'll go home and deed the farm to the boys, and get ready for the grave myself."

The Telegraph Abroad.

In Switzerland, if one wishes to send a telegraph message, he must pay 6 cents to begin with, and then for ½ cent a word, he can send a message to any part of the country. For instance, one can send a message of 500 words from Geneva to Constance—a distance of nearly 200 miles—for $2.56. Or, if a message of 10 words will suffice, it will cost only 11 cents. Yet, even at these low rates, the net profits of the Swiss telegraph department last year were about $100,000. The English government, when it took over the private telegraph companies and made them an adjunct of the post-office department, paid liberal and in many cases extravagant prices to the companies. Any one may now send a message of twenty words to any point in the United Kingdom for 1 shilling—24 cents—and the postal telegraph is making money for the government. Why should not telegraphing be as cheap in the United States as in Switzerland or Great Britain?

Peckings from Peck's "Sun."

A lightning rod peddler was struck by lightning in Indiana, while seated on his wagon, during a thunder storm, talking through the window of a farmer's residence trying to induce the farmer to let him rod the barn. It was the largest funeral ever seen in Indiana. People went miles to see the deceased. They couldn't believe it until they saw it with their own eyes.

Some men at Louisville were betting on the weight of a large mule, when one man who was a good judge of the weight of live stock, got behind the mule and was measuring his hind quarters, when something appeared to loosen up behind the mule. Just before the expert died, from the kick in among his ribs, he gave it as his opinion that if the mule was as heavy all over as he was behind, he weighed not far from 47,000 pounds and a trifle over.

In a libel suit against a Louisville paper the plaintiff was awarded one cent damages. To show how popular some papers are, it is stated that a number of influential capitalists immediately stepped forward and offered to loan the editor the money to pay the damages, without any security more than a chattel mortgage on the press and material.

There is a moment in the life of every married man, however humble or however exalted, when he feels the humiliation of his position, and blushes at what is expected of him. A moment when he feels as though he would prefer to transact the business before him through an agent. A time when his soul would fain throw off its fetters, and he feels it to be a moral impossibility for him to go through the task assigned to him; when he feels that he had almost rather die, if he were satisfied that he were good enough. That time is when he has to go into a store and inquire of the gentlemanly clerk if he has got any fine tooth combs. He looks around carefully to see that no one is listening, and asks for the harrowing instrument of torture, but is careful to tell the clerk that it is dandruff that is the matter.

How dear to my heart is the school I attended,
And how I remember, so distant and dim,
That red-headed Bill and the pin that I bended
And carefully put on the bench under him!
And how I recall the surprise of the master,
When Bill gave a yell and sprang up with the pin
So high that his bullet-head busted the plaster
Above, and the scholars all set up a grin.
That active boy Billy, that high-leaping Billy!
That loud-shouting Billy that sat on a pin!

Half the ills of human life proceed from a torpid and disordered liver.—Submit to them no longer while "Sellers' Liver Pills" will cure you quickly. Price 25c.

"Here, John, don't eat those crackers up,"
Said she with a hateful snap;
"They're some I saved on purpose
To put in the baby's pap."

"Well," said John, edging for the door
And reaching for his hat,
"What makes you so cross about it then?
Ain't I the baby's pap?"

A clergyman in Pittsburg married a lady with whom he received the substantial dowry of $10,000 and a fair prospect for more. Soon afterwards, while occupying the pulpit, he gave out a hymn, read the first four stanzas, and was reading the 5th,

"For ever let my grateful heart

when he hesitated and exclaimed: "Ahem! the choir will omit the 5th verse," and sat down. The congregation, noticing his apparent confusion, read the remaining lines:

"Which gives ten thousand blessings now,
And bids me hope for more."

Ague Cure

Is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms, which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic and other poisonous minerals, form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient, and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.

We warrant it when taken according to directions.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 21, 1881.

The President's condition continues to improve. Although his attendants do not consider him entirely out of danger, still he is rapidly passing the danger line. The lodging place of the bullet is not yet known, and hence they are compelled to rely wholly upon indications as to the future. These however are all favorable. The conviction is now becoming general that the President will recover, although it must be admitted that there is still an element of uncertainty in his case.

And now they say that the fiat has gone forth by Secretary Blaine that Roscoe Conkling must be cast into outer darkness. Other leading stalwarts are to be conciliated and bought off, but Mr. Conkling is to be crushed at all hazards. The continuance of the senatorial dead-lock at Albany shows that my Lord Roscoe is still keeping up a gallant fight against the odds arrayed against him, but the final outcome is hardly doubtful Conkling's political career is probably ended.

What is wood pulp? Wood pulp is one of the principal ingredients now used in the manufacture of print paper. The sheet upon which the HERALD is printed is probably one-third, at least one-quarter of it, made up of this article. It is manufactured from spruce and poplar logs, by sawing them into blocks and running them through fibre machines. The patent on this process is owned by a few men. Congressmen Miller, of New York, and Russell, of Massachusetts, own the controlling interest, and nearly the whole of this patent. Others may have a small interest, but these two men may be called the owners of the monopoly. A year ago or so, a general demand was made by the newspapers that the tariff duty on wood pulp should be abolished and the article placed on the free list, thus opening the market to Canadian competition, and bringing about a much needed reduction in the price of paper. A strong effort was made in Congress to meet the popular demand for free paper, but it was bitterly opposed by these two Congressmen, and their opposition finally resulted in its defeat. One of these Congressmen, Warner Miller, has just been elected U. S. Senator from New York. Can he be called a representative of the Empire State? Will he not rather be a faithful representative of the wood pulp monopoly?

Col. Ingersoll and Judge Black are waging a polemical duel in the August number of the North American Review. The Colonel attacks christianity and the Judge defends it, and it is needless to say that the essays are very interesting reading. One should read them through in course, lay the book aside for a week and then read them again. Although the Colonel has no peer on the rostrum, any reader of these essays must admit that in cold logic Judge Black is a match for him. The Judge fights the doughty Colonel with his own weapons, opposing sarcasm with sarcasm, satire with satire, ridicule with ridicule, and rhetoric with rhetoric, while in the field of cool argumentation the Judge proves himself the better man of the two. They both make the fire fly, and one arises from reading the essays with a feeling of admiration for both contestants, and wondering what his own belief is on the subject of christianity anyway.

The continued serious illness of President Garfield presents a legal question which has never heretofore arisen in our country's history. The constitution provides that "in case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office" the Vice President shall discharge his duties.—When does the inability herein mentioned arise? Must it be of a temporary or permanent character? What tribunal is to determine when the inability contemplated by the constitution exists? Happily in the present case no serious complications are likely to arise, for Congress is not in session, but had this calamity occurred a few days previous to an adjournment of Congress, the problem would then be presented as to whether the executive department of the government must stop, or the Vice President be permitted to exercise the Presidential functions temporarily. Such a grave emergency may some time arise, and it would be well for the next Congress to enact a law to regulate the succession in a contingency of this kind.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

An Unfortunate Oversight.

Philadelphia Times: Roscoe Conkling is not big enough to run the Republican party and he is too big to let the party run him. It was a very unfortunate oversight on the part of those who got up our form of government that they made no provision for this kind of elephant.

The Dead-Lock Broken.

Detroit Free Press: The election of Warner Miller to fill the vacancy occasioned in New York's Senatorial representation by the stupid resignation of Platt breaks the dead-lock at Albany and sounds the knell of Roscoe Conkling as a political leader. It is a pity the New York Legislature could not find better material. Mr. Miller is now a member of Congress, ostensibly representing the Twenty-second Congressional District, but really representing his own interests as a manufacturer of wood pulp. He will be a poor substitute even for Platt, which is as low an estimate as can well be put upon any man among the possible senators of the country.

A Ridiculous Plight.

Springfield Republican: The New York Chamber of Commerce is left in a ridiculous plight in view of the dispatch sent last week by its Secretary to Postmaster-General James announcing that that organization had decided to present Mrs. Garfield with $250,000. Cyrus W. Field has been telegraphing and writing appeals all over the country for help in making up the sum which New Yorkers were reported ready to tender. Widows and children are sending their mites for the man who gets a salary of $50,000 a year, and this whole spectacle of begging for the President of the United States is unseemly. If the President recovers he will have a difficult and somewhat ungracious duty to perform in refusing this gush money.

The New Senator.

Detroit Evening News: Wood Pulp Miller has been elected Senator from New York. Three years ago, when this man worked and voted in Congress to keep the tariff on wood pulp so that he might continue to levy a tax upon the newspapers of the country through his monopoly, the New York Tribune said he "presented the disgraceful spectacle of a member of Congress before the committee of ways and means endeavoring by specious arguments and false statements to further his own pecuniary interests." All the other papers, Republican and Democratic, in New York as elsewhere, denounce him in equally severe terms. Now that he has been elevated from the position of one three-hundredth part of the House to one seventy-sixth of the Senate, it will be interesting to watch these papers change their scorn and indignation into mild toleration and then into warm admiration.

The Growing Power of Monopolies.

Chicago Evening News: Monopolies are being formed in almost every article entering into human consumption. We have the output of coal, of glass, of iron, of steel, of nearly every manufactured product limited. The object is to advance prices at the cost of the artizan and the producer. One of the latest syndicates with this purpose in view is that of half a dozen of the heaviest sugar refiners, who have combined to limit production, with the sole object of advancing the price of the manufactured article 2 or 3 cents a pound. These persons a few years ago clamored for protection to a young industry to enable it to manufacture sugars at a low rate, which could be done by shutting out the highly centralized product of Cuba. The refineries are to be shut down three days in a week; the men who labor in them in a semi-nude state, are to work on half rations; and this to enable millionaires to roll in wealth, to add to the cost of living of the people, and to gather up money with which to control legislation.

Unfashionable Summer Resorts.

New York Herald: Any intelligent foreigner who comes to this side of the Atlantic to see all that is worth seeing must be astonished, in the summer time, at the almost entire absence of well-to-do Americans from places that are wonderfully attractive. Two rules govern the majority of our people who are well enough off to go where they please in summer; one is to go where everybody else goes, and the other is to respond to the most attractive circular that comes to hand from a summer hotel. No matter how he may long for the country and for wild surroundings, he is seldom seen in the high, cool, picturesque regions of West Virginia or the Rocky Mountains; he is a rarity on the shores of the big lakes; the beautiful scenery of the unsettled portions of Canada is unknown to him; he has not even heard of more than one or two of the delightful retreats on the coast of Maine; while Labrador, for the scenery and fame of which many Englishmen come three thousand miles, he never thought of. After foreigners have told him about it the American may learn that his own country is unequaled for number, variety and charm of summer resorts, but at present he knows next to nothing about it, and apparently he cares less.

THE Morenci Observer is responsible for the following recipe for treating the potatoe bug: Obtain a sprinkler with as fine holes as possible, and sprinkle on the potato vines an infusion of paris green and rain water, mixed in the proportions of a teaspoonfull of the poison to a pail full of the water, just enough to color it; and the result will be surprising, making an easy and inexpensive method of getting rid of the pests. Too much of the paris green will injure the vines and does not kill as effectively as the homeopathic dose. Try it and you will be satisfied.

Detroit Evening News: Our State militia system seems to be in a bad way, and by the time this Yorktown splurge is over it will be worse off. The jealousies already aroused cannot be healed in five years, and resignations are now in order. It is openly stated that Adjutant Merritt and Lieut.-Col. Griffith will soon resign; one of the best companies in the State has determined to quit the service; and from all over the State comes a demand for the annual encampment which the big-wigs at Lansing and elsewhere have decided was impracticable this year. What our military system most needs is a few funerals near headquarters. The invitation to go to Yorktown on that State appropriation of $10,000 and then pay his own expenses is the last straw that is breaking the noble warrior's spinal column.

OF all the virtues we can possess, charity is perhaps the most to be sought after. It is not the object of the HERALD to preach on the subject, for that is the duty of persons much more able than we, but every day we see little things happening when, if there was a little more of this charitable feeling used, our little community, and sometimes the people at large, would be the better for it, our work would be pleasanter, our ways straighter, and our conscience clearer, and we would be able to look each other in the face a deal more honestly. The religious theories of our people are the cause of a great deal of this uncharitable feeling, and many of our christian people do not reflect that any one in this free country has the perfect right to think as he chooses. Even right here we could sight a case where a young catholic student stopped in our midst a short time ago and was not given food to eat, nor a place to rest himself, when he lost his way, simply because he was a catholic, and he was treated in this way by one of our most respected christian countrymen. Now the question, should we not try to live in a way not wholly for ourselves? and should we not try and take into consideration that perhaps some one else's way and belief may be as good as ours, and above all, to remember that no matter in how poor circumstances we may be, someone is worse off than we are.

MISS CORA DEPUY returned last Monday from her trip to the White Mountains, on the first Evening News Excursion. She expresses herself as highly delighted with the trip.

WE are in receipt of the first number of the Dundee Ledger, a new paper just started in our sister village on the East. It seems to be a well edited sheet. Whether Dundee can properly support two papers is a question.

THE annual camp meeting at Petoskey will commence July 26th, and continue two weeks. The fare from Adrian will be $9.40, and tickets will valid from Friday July 22d to Saturday, Aug. 6, with return limited to Aug. 11th.

THIS is bad weather for the newspaper business. No news of any kind. Farmers are harvesting, young people are off to the lakes, business men are rusticating, and even the ladies' sewing circles are taking a vacation during the heated term.

THE circuses of late have gained some incidental advertising, but at large cost. Barnum has lost a valuable car by fire, Coup has had a train wrecked, Cole's tents were shredded by a whirlwind, and Forepaugh's elephants killed a valuable trained horse.

TUESDAY afternoon John Eccles started for the Black Hills. He has a good situation there with his brother-in-law, Seth Bullock, awaiting him, and will do well. We wish John all success, but at the same time regret that he leaves Tecumseh, for he can only be thought of as a square, honest boy and a friend to everyone.

COL. D. S. CURTIS, of Washington arrived in town yesterday, and will remain about town until Monday next. He brings no different news about President Garfield's prospects than we receive from the daily papers. The general feeling at Washington is one of hopefulness and confidence in the President's ultimate recovery.

IN Ogden it is thought that wheat will hardly pay the expenses of harvesting, and that hay will be something more than half a crop, while oats, flax and potatoes promise well, and corn at present indicates an immense crop.

OUR friend Schermerhorn, of the Hudson Gazette, took in the Evening News excursion. Wonder if we could not coax him to write us an autograph letter relating his experience on the trip. Business is dull now, and we need a few days' recreation badly.

WE dropped in at Adamson's store the other evening and he showed us two hundred and twenty-five different samples of spectacles and eye glasses, and we came to the conclusion that any one who could not be suited from this stock had not better try; in fact, his stock in this line is A No. 1, and the best in the county.

THE Clinton News appeared last week in a bran new dress, and with a new proprietor, Prof. C. F. Field of Manchester having become sole editor and proprietor. The sheet is very much improved in appearance, and if this initial number is an earnest of Prof. Field's regular newspaper diet the good people of Clinton can congratulate themselves on having one of the best local organs in this section of the state.

Adrian Times: Charles E. Grisson, president of the state military board, is out in a card in to-day's Post, in which he explains that there is not money enough in the military fund to buy uniforms for the men and pay the expenses of encampment too, and the board decided to buy the clothes. No part of the military fund, he says, will be used for the expenses of the Yorktown centennial, that being provided for by a special fund.

Adrian Record: At 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, Perley Wheeler, a wealthy farmer living about one and a half miles north-west of the city, was sun-struck while working in the harvest field. For several hours he lay entirely unconscious, but under the skillful treatment of Dr. Stephenson, he is greatly improved, and it is hoped that he will be about again in a few days.

WE are indebted to Ira Almy, of Farmer Village, N. Y., for late copies of the Seneca Falls Reveille. In one number he gives the daily record of the thermometer for the past seven years in the month of June as kept by him:

Members of the Union and their friends will meet at the different churches at ten o'clock in the forenoon, where teams will be in waiting to carry them to the grove. After an extremely interesting program consisting of music and short addresses, a pic-nic dinner will be served to which all are invited to contribute as well as to partake. The Sunday school teachers are appointed to act as a table committee.

COMPANY C SPEAKS OUT.

What They Think of the Program for the Yorktown Celebration.

At a special meeting of Company C, First Regiment M.S.T., held Monday evening, July 18, to take action on the proposition contained in a circular issued from the Adjutant General's office, the following preambles and resolution were unanimously passed:

WHEREAS, It appears by a circular issued from the Adjutant General's office, dated July 11th, 1881, that only $6,000 of the $10,000 appropriated by the Legislature to defray the expenses of Michigan representatives, at the Yorktown Celebration, has been allotted to the military of the State, and

WHEREAS, Members of the State Troops who may be invited to attend that celebration, are expected to pay their subsistence expenses, and receive no per-diem during their necessary absence from home, and

WHEREAS, The members of this Company believe that it would be a compromise of principle to subscribe or even consent to the request that the private soldiers of the State Troops should be required to pay for their subsistence, while all other representatives from the State would not be called upon to do likewise, therefore

Resolved, That Company C, First Regiment M. S. T., while yielding to no body of citizens in loyalty to the State, and in willingness to serve her at however great a sacrifice in time of need, do indignantly reject the proposition of said circular, and respectfully refuse to assist in tarnishing the fair name of our great State, by becoming a party in any way to the farce to be perpetrated at Yorktown, with a squad of soldiers and an army of Officers and Legislators from Michigan.

PREPARATIONS for the show season of 1881-2 are almost complete, so far as the organization of companies for travel is concerned. The Clipper gives a list of 186, and says there are more still. An examination shows that eight of these will appear in classical plays, only one in grand opera, and ten in concerts. Comic opera will be performed by twenty-one, musical burlesques by nine, pantomimes by four, minstrelsy by seventeen, and varieties by nine. Of the rest, forty-one are formed to support stars of more or less effulgence, and thirty-nine are to present plays which have had metropolitan success.

Clinton News: The annual Masonic festival at the Masonic hall, June 24th, passed off with the usual success and eclat. A large number of visitors were present including a delegation of twenty-four from Springville. Rev. G. E. Wilson delivered a short, but very interesting address, which was cut short by the announcement of supper, a part of the program, which was heartily enjoyed, as everyone who has ever sat down to one of our Masonic brothers' tables well knows. An unusual circumstance was the attendance of "uncle" John Schreder, 92 years old, with his descendants down to the fourth generation, three of them being Masons.

WE acknowledge the receipt of a ticket to the Evening Record Excursion. The proprietors of the Adrian Record have arranged for a picnic excursion to Devil's Lake, on Tuesday, July 26. Conveyances will be provided to and from the lake, and while there the guests will have the exclusive use of the Allen House, and a ride on the new steamboat "City of Hudson." MRS. SPAULDING is making arrangements to build a large addition to her green-house, which will increase her facilities very much for doing flower work. She intends to have as fine a green-house as can be found in the county, something Tecumseh has long needed and which will be well patronized.

AN INDIGNANT STATE SOLDIER.

Capt. R. B. House thus frees his mind on the Yorktown farce in yesterday's Evening News:

Perhaps it will be excusable for me to add a little to the action of company C, First Regiment M. S. T., touching some facts concerning the military of the State, which are not incorporated in the preamble and resolution adopted by said company. The life of the State troops, as has been stated before in your columns, depends largely upon the annual encampment. That event constitutes the esprit de corp in the service. It is the holiday to the soldier in the service, although freighted with severe exertion, drilling in the extreme summer heat and walking the sentinel's beat through the lonely hours of night. He looks forward to it with pleasure as the time when he can renew and make those acquaintances which have been so pleasant in the past. Take this away from him and there is very little to induce him to enlist in the State service for three years and obligate himself to faithfully serve the State, voluntarily donating not only his time but frequently his money to perfect himself in drill and all the details essential to make a good soldier, without any recognition from the State save the paltry matter of being excused from serving on jury and exempted from full tax and assessment for highway purposes not to exceed six days. The State military board have decided that there can be no encampment this year for want of funds, and then absurdly enough we are informed that six more companies will be admitted into the State service this year. What wisdom! If the military fund is not now adequate to meet the requirements of the law for the number of troops already in the service, how essential that six more companies should be added. How encouraging that looks toward holding annual encampments. Last year the men had to submit to having their per diem reduced one-fifth! this year no encampment! and prospects favorable for none in the year to come. Every company commander shrinks from the effect of this announcement to his command. He too well knows the demoralizing effect it will have on the attendance upon weekly drills, and realizes that all his fondly cherished hopes of bringing his company to that state of perfection and discipline that is the laudable ambition of any commander has received a disastrous check.

The law expects that the uniform of the soldier shall last through a period of six years, which is a long time when we consider the severe test to which it has necessarily to be subjected; and yet many of the men are wearing uniforms that have been worn over seven years, and there are companies in the service who have uniforms that are not fit for them to wear in public. Can it be wondered at that men manifest a reluctance to public parades when they have to appear in moth-eaten and ragged clothes?

And now a word about the Yorktown celebration. The men have been on the qui vive ever since the press announced that the legislature had appropriated $10,000 to send representatives of the military and state officials to Yorktown; but now when the decision of the commissioners is made public that the military are only allowed enough to send four companies, the men too quickly see through the whole affair, and denounce it as a dodge of the legislature to make a cat's-paw of the militia by voting out of the state treasury the means to afford themselves and families a pleasure trip to the celebration, while the private soldier is magnanimously offered the opportunity, in addition to his voluntary services, to donate this great state $10 that it may send eighty more men to the picnic. What a wonderful condescension toward the soldier! If all those who are invited to go to Yorktown had been respectfully asked to make a like donation it would not have looked quite so marked an outrage toward the trooper. Of course all the members of the militia are wealthy and can much better afford to take this amount from their families than the state could from the treasury.

Can it be wondered at if there is a growing dissatisfaction among the officers and men composing our state troops?

EVERY citizen should see to it that his premises and surroundings are kept clean and free from garbage of every sort. Hot weather is upon us in earnest. The next two months will be the most dangerous season of the year. Out-houses, cess-pools, drains, cellars, etc., should be treated liberally with disinfectants, such as lime, carbolic acid, copperas, and other cleansing and purifying agents. Carbolic acid is one of the best of disinfectants, if properly used. The saturated solution of this should be sprinkled about the house and out-building. A cloth wet with the solution and hung up in living and sleeping rooms will it is claimed, often ward off diseases which travel in the atmosphere. Bromo-chloralum is an excellent disinfectant, having no odor whatever. People can not be too careful in taking steps to prevent disease, for the old adage that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" is as true as ever.

Ypsilanti Sentinel: One day last week our pity was excited by a forlorn looking tramp, carrying a wretched bag and slowly meandering eastward. He inquired the distance to Detroit, and when told, thirty miles, he seemed ready to sink down, but rallied a little and went on. Next day's paper brought the news of the death of a stranger; under the cars, near that city, and we recognized in the description, the tramp, that moved our city. His weary journey is ended. He has gone where the weary are at rest.—Whose dear babe was he once? Whose bright promising son? What the joys and hopes of his young manhood? What the final disappointment of age, and where is he now? He had a history but who knows it?

WHAT THEY SAY ABOUT IT.

Adrian Record: Geo. N. Stacy has purchased an interest in the Tecumseh HERALD, and hereafter the firm will be Stacy Brothers. S. C. Stacy will continue to be editor and George will attend to its business department. The HERALD is a well-managed, desirable and prosperous paper. Success to Stacy Brothers.

Detroit Evening News: Geo. N. Stacy has bought an interest in the Tecumseh HERALD, which will now be conducted by the Stacy Brothers. The more Stacys the better for the paper.

Clinton News: S. C. Stacy of the Tecumseh HERALD has associated with him in the newspaper business his brother George. This action will infuse fresh vigor into a newspaper that has always been noted for its enterprise. We wish the boys the greatest success.

Manchester Enterprise: George N. Stacy, of Tecumseh, has bought an interest in the HERALD, and the firm will now be Stacy Bros. The HERALD is one of the best papers in Southern Michigan, and enjoys a liberal patronage from the business men of their sprightly village. The Enterprise wishes it continued success.

Adrian Press: Hereafter the Tecumseh HERALD will be published by the Stacy Brothers, Geo. N. Stacy having bought an interest and formed a partnership with his brother 'Scove'. We wish the boys continued prosperity.

Hudson Gazette: S. C. Stacy, of the Tecumseh HERALD, after piloting that sheet through all alone for over six long years, has taken in his brother, George N., as a partner, who will assume the business management of the concern, while S. C. will conduct the editorial department, as heretofore. We extend our heartiest congratulations to the new firm and wish them success.

Ann Arbor Argus: Geo. N. Stacy has bought an interest in the Tecumseh HERALD, which will now be conducted by the Stacy Brothers.

Detroit Free Press: The Tecumseh HERALD will hereafter be published by the Stacy Brothers, S. C. Stacy, the former editor and proprietor, having sold an interest to his brother George.

Detroit Eve. News: George N. Stacy has bought an interest in the Tecumseh HERALD, and the firm is now Stacy Bros. The HERALD is a good paper, and it is safe to say that it will wax even better with increasing years.

The Ypsilantian: Geo. N. Stacy has purchased of his brother, S. C. Stacy, an interest in the Tecumseh HERALD, which hereafter will be conducted by Stacy Bros. As in the past, the HERALD will doubtless, in future, retain its hold upon the good will of the people of Lenawee Co., and with increased ability continue to be the model paper it so long has been.

Saline Observer: There has been a change in the ownership of the Tecumseh HERALD, its former proprietor, S. C. Stacy, having sold an interest to his brother, Geo. N. The HERALD has long been one of the best local papers in the state, and under its present management will doubtless continue to be so.

Dundee Reporter: Geo. N. Stacy has purchased an interest of his brother, S. C., in the HERALD office at Tecumseh, and if possible they intend to make it a better paper than heretofore—a hard thing to do. The new firm will be known as Stacy Bros.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

Whipped Cream.—Take one pint of very thick cream, sweeten it with very fine sugar and orange flower; boil it. Beat the whites of ten eggs with a little cold cream, strain it, and when the cream is upon the boil pour in the eggs, stirring it well till it comes to a thick curd; then take up and strain it through a hair sieve. Beat it well with a spoon till it is cold, then place it in a dish in which you wish to serve it.

Brown or Dyspepsia Bread.—Take six quarts of wheat meal, rather coarsely ground, one teacup good yeast, half teacup of molasses, mix with a pint of milk warm water and a teaspoonful saleratus. Make a hole in the meal and stir the mixture in the middle till like a batter; then proceed as with fine flour bread; make a dough; when light make into four loaves, which will each weigh four pounds when baked; bake an hour and a half; a hotter oven is required than for fine flour.

To Spice a Round or Corned Beef.—Take a strong twine string and tie it tightly round to keep it in shape; then stick it well on both sides with cloves, squeezing them in as far as possible; rub it also well with three tablespoonfuls of pounded saltpeter, and then with plenty of fine salt. Lay it in a large wooden tray, or round vessel that is tight, and every other day turn it and rub well into the brine which makes from it. In ten days, if properly attended to, it will be fit for use.

Cheese Fritters.—Take three ounces of three tablespoonfuls of flour, one ounce of butter, one gill of tepid water (two parts of cold and one of boiling), a little pepper and salt, one egg, three tablespoonfuls of grated cheese. For this the old hard cheese may be used. First place in the bowl the flour, then the pepper and salt; melt the butter and pour it upon the flour. Next add the water, drop in the yolk of an egg, and then stir in the cheese. Beat the white of the egg to a stiff froth, and when light, mix with the other ingredients. Put in by spoonfuls into hot lard or clarified fat, and cook for three minutes. When they rise toss them over, so as to brown both sides. When done, take out and place first on a sheet of white paper, then pile on a hot napkin.

Household Hints.

Paint splashes upon window glass can be easily removed by a strong solution of soda.

In making a crust of any kind, do not melt the lard in the flour. Melting will injure the crust.

Whenever you see your sauce boil from the side of the pan, you may know that your flour or corn-starch is done.

Meat and poultry will lose their flavor and firmness if left in the water after they are done; as will also fish which will break to pieces.

To brown sugar for sauces or pudding, put the sugar in a perfectly dry saucepan. If the pan is in the least bit wet, the sugar will burn and you will spoil your saucepan.

Ivory that has been spotted, or has grown yellow, can be made as clear and fresh as new by rubbing with fine sand paper, and then polishing with finely powdered pumice stone.

Sour apple sauce is greatly improved by the addition of a tablespoonful of butter to a quart of sauce, and, moreover, there is much less sugar needed. A little lemon peel makes a fine flavor.

When velvet has been wet and becomes spotted, hold the wrong side over steam, and while damp draw the wrong side quickly over a warm iron. It takes two to do this—one to hold the bottom of the iron upward, and the second to draw the velvet across.

If ink is spilled on a carpet or woolen article it should be attended to at once while still wet, if possible, and then is very easily removed. Take clean blotting paper or cotton batting and gently sop up all the ink that has not soaked in. Then pour a little sweet milk on the spot and soak it up from the carpet with fresh cotton batting. It will need to be renewed two or three times, fresh milk and cotton being used each time, and the spot will disappear.

Then wash the spot with clean soapsuds and rub dry with a clean cloth. If the ink has been allowed to dry in, the milk must remain longer and be repeated many times.

The Origin of Ghosts.

On the appreciation of the simple fact that the brain is the true seat of the senses rests the whole explanation of the ghosts and apparitions which occasionally attend the footsteps and meet the eyes of humanity. When we are conscious of looking at a real object, a sensation of sight is formed in the brain, as we have seen. Such a sensation we call an "objective" one, because it is derived from a veritable object whose existence, even when unseen, we entertain no doubt; the sensation of sound is then called "subjective." But there are many familiar instances in which the power of the mind to reproduce the sensations, sights and sounds we have received is demonstrated. The day-dreamer can sometimes bring the scenes in which he has once taken part so vividly before his mental gaze that his reverie may actually be broken by the words which unconsciously flow from his lips as his imagination starts into bodily action. Such a power of fancy and imagination is the beginning or faint imitation of a still more powerful means which we possess to bring before ourselves the forms and scenes which have once been objectively present with us. In the dream this power is illustrated typically enough. From the background of consciousness, so to speak, we project forward, in our sleep, the pictures which a busy brain is reproducing, or it may be piecing together from the odds and ends of its fancy to form the ludicrous combinations we are familiar with in the "Land of Nod." And if we carry the idea of this same power being exercised in our waking moments, to form the ghosts of science, the explanation of the otherwise curious and mysterious subject of illusive visions will be complete.

Night in the Moon.

At last, however, night sets in. Grateful it comes after the sun has gathered up his smiling rays and gone down to his rest. All at once we are plunging into comparative obscurity; for again there is no twilight to stay the steps of departing day. At one stride comes the dark. But, looking up into the sky, we behold a vast orb which pours down a milder and more beneficent splendor than the great lord of the system. It is not such a moon as we terrestrials boast; for it is no less than thirteen times as large and luminous as our own. There it hangs in the firmament, without apparent change of place as if "fixed in its everlasting seat." But not without a change of surface. For this globe is a painted panorama, and, turning around majestically on its axis, presents its oceans and continents in grand succession. As Europe and Africa, locking the Mediterranean in their embrace, roll away to the right, the stormy surface of the Atlantic offers its waters to view, then the two Americas, with their huge forests and vast prairies, pass under inspection. Then the great basin of the Pacific, lit up with island fires, meets the gazer's eye, and as this glides over the scene the eastern rim of Asia, the upper portion of Australia, sail into sight. The Indian Ocean, and afterwards the Arabian Sea, spread themselves out in their subdued splendor, and thus, in four and twenty hours, "the great rotundity of the earth we tread" turns his pictured countenance to the moon and grandly repays the listening lunarians by repeating, to the best of its ability, the story of its birth. Nor is the sky less marvelous in another respect, for the absence of any atmospheric diffusion of light permits the constellation to shine out with a distinctness which is never paralleled on earth. They glitter like diamond points set in a firmament of ebony. Stars and clusters which we never see by the naked eye flock into view and crowd the lunar heavens.

A conductor on the Madison avenue line of horse-cars in New York naively explained to a reporter the code of morals in vogue in the street-railway companies of the metropolis. The conductor said the strikes on the Second and Third avenue lines would not amount to anything, and the new men could steal twice as much as the old ones, who would all be back in a month. "They do 'knock down,' then in spite of the bell-punch?" said the reporter. "Of course they do," replied the conductor, "and it is expected they will. On this line they expect it, only they tell us we must not get caught doing it. Do you know what are our hours? From 6 in the morning until 10 at night, and our pay is $1 90. They expect us all to take a few fares, and there is not a conductor on the line but so understands it. All our bosses want is for us to make up to a certain average, and we have to do it. It is no sin to 'knock down' on this line; the sin is in getting found out."

This is an easy way of detecting the purity or adulteration of a sample of wine: Dip a small sponge into the wine to be tested. Place the sponge then in a saucer, the bottom of which is covered with a small quantity of water. If the wine is pure, it will take from a quarter to half an hour before the water in the saucer becomes colored, but if the wine is not pure, the coloring of the water takes place immediately.

Better than Quinine. Few constitutions can stand the continuous use of quinine. When modesty ceases to be the chief ornament of one sex, and integrity of the other, society is on a wrong basis, and we shall be ever after without rules to guide our judgment in what is really becoming and ornamental. Nature and reason direct one thing, passion and humor another. To follow the dictates of these two latter is going into a road that is both endless and intricate; when we pursue the other, our passage is delightful, and what we aim at easily attainable.—Sir R. Steele.

"Forced by my political connections into public life, my sufferings were intensified by the comments of those who saw my face and head covered with scrofulous humor," said a gentleman recently cured by Cuticura Remedies.

A small boy was looking at some scriptural engravings, and gazed long and earnestly upon a representation of Adam and Eve in their primitive dress. Turning to his mother, he asked: "Ma, didn't Adam and Eve wear any clothes?" "No, my son." The lad reflected a moment, and said: "By hokey, I'll bet the musketers made 'em hop 'round pretty lively."

The Cyclopaedia Wa

The month of July, 1881, witnesses the completion of the largest and most impor literary work this country and the century have seen. It is the Library of Univer Knowledge, large type edition, in 15 large octavo volumes, containing 10 per cent m matter than Appleton's Cyclopædia, at less than one-fifth its cost, and 20 per cent m than Johnson's Cyclopædia, at a little more than one-fourth its cost.

Chambers's Encyclopædia, which forms the basis of the Library of Universal Kno edge (the last London edition of 1880 being reprinted verbatim as a portion of its c tents), is the laborious product of the ripest British and E pean scholarship. It has devel- oped through a century of c clopædia making; its various editions having been many tim revised, in successive years, till it has come to be universally recognized, by those com petent to judge, as standing at the very front of great aggregations of knowledge, and better adapted than any other Cyclopædia for popular use. It contains such full an important information as the ordinary reader, or the careful student, is likely to seek upon about 25,000 subjects in every department of human knowledge. Chambers's Encyclopædia, however, is a foreign production, edited and published for a foreign market, and could not be expected to give as much prom nence to American topics as American readers might de sire. To supply these and other deficiencies a large corps of American editors and writers have added important articles upon about 15,000 topics covering the entire field of human knowledge, bringing the whole number of titles under one alphabetical arrangement to about 40,000. Thus the work is thoroughly Americanized and the Library of Universal Knowledge becomes at once the latest and most compl Encyclopædia in the field, at a mere fraction of the cost of any similar work which has preceded it.

Victory

For The

Price of the 15 volumes, complete, in extra cloth binding, $15.00. In half Russia, sprinkled edges, $20.00. In half Russia, gilt top, $22.50. In half library sheep, marbled edges, $25.00.

The superlative value and importance of this great Encyclopædia lies especially in the fact that it is brought within the reach of every one who aspires after knowledge and culture. It is really a libra- ry of universal knowledge. It brings a liberal education easily within the reach even of every plowboy of the country and apprentice boy of the city. Every farmer and every mechanic in the land owes it to himself and to his children that such a Cyclopædia shall henceforward form a part of the outfit of his home. To the professional man, and every person of intelligence in every walk of life, a Cyclopædia is a necessity.

Revolution

Of course the old and wealthy publishers who have grown rich (it is said that the Appletons have made a profit of nearly two million dollars on their Cyclopædia) from the sale of their high-priced publications are not pleased that their monopolies are broken and their power overthrown. Of course the book agents and booksellers who have been used to getting from 40 to 60 per cent commission for selling these high-priced books are not so well pleased to sell the Library of Universal Knowledge on 15 per cent commission, though those who are not short-sighted discover that their own interests, after all, are identical with the interests of the people, and their real profits, in the end, are increased by the immense sales which result from meeting the people's wants. The majority of booksellers, however, are better pleased to slander than to sell this and our numerous other standard and incomparably low-priced publications. But the Literary Revolution has always looked to the people, in whose interests it is, for its patronage, and it has never looked in vain, as our more than one million volumes printed last year (this year being increased to probably more than two millions) abundantly prove. You can order the Cyclopædia directly from us, and by uniting with your neighbors and friends you can secure club rates as follows:

What will please you most will be the pleasure of enjoying your meals, while passing over the beautiful prairies of Illinois and Iowa, in one of our magnificent Dining Cars that accompany all Through Express Trains. You get an entire meal, as good as is served in any first-class hotel, for seventy-five cents.

Appreciating the fact that a majority of the people prefer separate apartments for different purposes (and the immense passenger business of this line warranting it), we are pleased to announce that this Company runs Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars for sleeping purposes, and Palace Dining Cars for eating purposes only. Another great feature of our Palace Cars is a SMOKING SALOON where you can enjoy your "Havana" at all hours of the day.

Magnificent Iron Bridges span the Mississippi and Missouri rivers at all points crossed by this line, and transfers are avoided at Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Leavenworth and Atchison, connections being made in Union Depots.

St. Johns Independent: The wheat harvest hereabouts has commenced in dead earnest. The hay crop is good, and the yield and quality of potatoes will be larger and better than for some years past.

Jackson Patriot: While a little son of Chas. Gyles, of East Spring Arbor, was enjoying himself with a playmate recently, a sharp stick was forced into the flesh just beneath his eye, and it is feared that the sight of the latter may be destroyed.

Constantine Advertiser and Mercury: Frank Hulburt, of Porter, was prostrated by heat while working in the hay field last week, and died of brain fever, resulting therefrom, on Monday. He was about 25 years old and leaves a wife and two children.

Vermontville Hawk: Farmers are being happily disappointed with their wheat crop in this vicinity. Men who six weeks ago would give half the crop for harvesting, nearly all taking it back, and the prevailing opinion is that more wheat will be harvested than there was last year. It is well filled and plump.

Lowell Journal: Farmers this week are largely engaged in harvesting their wheat. From all indications it appears that the crop will yield fairly well and that the quality will be first rate. The berry is full, the heads are long and we predict that, when thrashed, the farmers will scoop more bushels of A 1 wheat than they have been looking for.

Saginaw Courier: The prospects of the wheat crop around Sebewaing are said to be excellent, and it is expected it will be equal to the average. Owing to the increased acreage there will consequently be more wheat shipped from Sebewaing this year than ever before. East Saginaw is the wheat market for Sebewaing and the bulk of their product will come here this fall via the Saginaw, Tuscola & Huron Narrow Guage Road.

Kalamazoo Telegraph: A. H. Boyce, who works on the farm of W. H. Cobb, south of this village, was severly injured Tuesday evening while attempting to lead a cow from the barn. She at first refused to come and he pulled her with the chain that was in her nose. Finally she sprang forward and in some way caught his hand by the hook in the chain and tore open the flesh very badly. The doctor fears serious consequences, the loss of a portion if not all of his hand.

The Ontonagon Miner says: "The discoveries of iron being made in the south-western part of our county, in what is now known as the Agogebic county, are proving to be very extensive and of great value. The discoveries are attracting a great deal of attention outside, both among capitalists and iron mining men. On the most northerly belt, known as the Sunday lake belt, the ore is a hard magnetic ore, assaying from 60 to 65 metalic iron, with but slight traces of phosphorous, being fully up to the standard of Bessemer ore.

Adjutant General Robertson has issued a circular which is of interest to the state militia who hope to go to Yorktown. It says: "It is estimated that at most only four companies of 40 men each can be sent with the means provided, which would be deemed a very small representation for Michigan. It is very desirable that at least six companies of 40 men each should be the number, but in order to accomplish this, it will be necessary for the companies to bear a portion of the expense, and therefore the following proposition is submitted for their acceptance: That the companies selected shall bear their own subsistence expenses, estimated not to cost exceeding $10 per man, and that they shall not expect any pay, as the law making the appropriation provides that they shall serve without compensation."

The secretary of state has issued a circular which shows the acreage, the total yield, and the average yield per acre of wheat in Michigan in 1880 and the number of acres in wheat at the time the supervisors took the assessment last spring. The statistics of 1,036 townships are included in this table, or 96 per cent. of all in the state. Of 1,004 of these townships the statistics have been obtained from the returns made to this department the present year by the supervisors. It is assumed that of the 32 townships that have made no returns, the acreage harvested in 1880, and the number of acres in wheat in May, 1880, as returned last year, and the yield in each township has been calculated upon this acreage, and the average yield per acre in the townships of the same county from which reports have been received. The total acres in the state in 1880 was 1,765,645, from which there was gathered 30,526,567 bushels, or an average of 17,29 bushels per acre. In May, 1881, there was 1,785,865 acres sown to wheat in the state. Returns from 772 supervisors dated July 2, 1881, furnish a basis for estimating that the average this year will be about 9 bushels per acre, or 16,200,000 bushels in all.

Prices Realised by Relics.

The passion for the possession of remarkable relics has led to extraordinary prices being sometimes given for things of little value in themselves, or sometimes perfectly worthless. The following instances of extravagant sums paid for objects more or less curious have been recorded: A tooth of Sir Isaac Newton's was sold in 1816 for £730. It was purchased by a nobleman, who had it set in a ring which he wore constantly on his finger.

The prayer-book used by King Charles I. when on the scaffold was sold in London in 1825 for 100 guineas.

The hat worn by Napoleon Bonaparte, at the battle of Eylau, was sold in Paris, in 1835, for 1,920 francs (about £80.) It was put up for sale at 500 francs, and there were thirty-two bidders.

The ivory arm-chair presented to Gustavus Vasa by the city of Lubeck was sold, in 1835, to the Swedish chamberlain, M. Schmekel, for 58,000 florins.

The coat worn by Charles XII, at the battle of Pultawa, and preserved by one of his officers and attendants, was sold in 1825 for 561,000 francs.

The two pens employed in signing the treaty of Amiens were sold in 1825 for £500.

The pens used in Paris for signing the treaty of peace, concluded after the Russian war, were presented to the Empress Eugenie, by whom they have no doubt been carefully preserved.

A wig that had belonged to Sterne was sold at a public auction in London for 200 guineas.

An old wig which had belonged to the German philosopher, Kant, was sold after his death for 200 francs.

A waistcoat belonging to J. J. Rousseau was sold for 950 francs, and his metal watch for 500 francs.

At the French village of Pezenas some years ago there was an old arm-chair, which was said to have been frequently used by Moliere. When he was living in this village he was accustomed every Sunday afternoon to go to a barber's shop, in a corner of which this chair was kept. The shop was the resort of all the idlers and gossips of the town, and there politics were discussed, and all the news of the day repeated. The chair formed a kind of observatory for the dramatist, who was in the habit of attentively watching all that was going on around him. The old chair was brought to Paris to be sold, and realised a considerable sum.

The Mystery of Memory.

The mystery of memory lies in the apparent immediateness of the mind's contact with the vanished. In "looking back" on our life we seem to ourselves for the moment to rise above limitations of time, undo its work of extinction, seizing again the realities which its rushing stream had borne far from us. Memory is a kind of resurrection of the buried past; as we retrospectively glance on it, it appears to start anew into life; forms arise within our minds which, we feel, faithfully represent the things that were. We do not ask for any proof of the fidelity of this dramatic representation of our past history by memory. It is seen to be a faithful imitation, just because it is a rival of the past. To seek to make the immediate testimony of memory more sure seems absurd, since all our ways of describing and illustrating this mental operation assume that in the very act of performing it we do recover a part of our "dead selves." To challenge the veracity of a person's memory is one of the boldest things one can do in the way of attacking deep-seated conviction. Memory is the peculiar domain of the individual. In going back in recollection to the scenes of other years, he is drawing on the secret store-house of consciousness, with which a stranger must not intermeddle. Philosophers commonly distinguish memory as a mediate knowledge of something not present. Yet the people are wont to feel just as certain of one as the other. Indeed it may almost be said that a man more easily brooks a critical investigation of an act of perception than an act of recollection.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

A TREATY WITH THE INDIANS.

A Del Rio correspondent of the Mexican expedition under Cols. Garcia, Winkler, and Santos, says the party has returned, having made a treaty with 400 Indians. Seventy-five Comanches and 150 Lepans are to go to New Mexico, and the Mescaleros Apaches, to the City of Mexico. This embraces all the Indians in the Burro and Santa Rosa Mountains, excepting a band of 150. The surrendered Indians had a large number of United States mules, captured from the government in New Mexico.

PENSION CLAIMS.

Gen. William W. Dudley, commissioner of pensions, has recommended the discharge of over one hundred clerks and a reduction in the pay of over sixty. Gen. Dudley ascertained that the total annual appropriation subject to pay of employes will $794,070; the amount necessary to pay the force employed was $891,[illegible] dollars. In deciding upon the changes to be made, the good of the service is the great primary object sought to be realized. There are now about 120,000 unadjusted claims to be acted upon. There were adjudicated last year about 40,000.

SOLDIER'S HOMES.

The secretary of the interior has rendered a decision in the matter of the right of an inmate of a soldiers' home, who withdraws from such home without consent of the managers, to receive his pension directly into his own hands. The secretary says: "The law directs payment of certain pensions to soldiers' homes, but also guards the disbursements of pensions solely for the benefit of the pensioner, without deductions. It is a naked trust, which can only be exercised toward those continuing in receipt of the care of soldier's homes. If that care and benefit can not be given, or is repudiated by the soldier, the soldier and not the institution should be entitled to receive the pension."

YORKTOWN CENTENNIAL MEDALS.

The striking of medals to commemorate important events has been customary in all ages of the world. Of Yorktown centennial Mr. Robert Armstead, of Richmond, Va., has designed one which it is thought will be in great demand during the time of the celebration, no less as a souvenir than for its intrinsic value as an artistic work. The medal is a composition, looking and wearing as well as silver. Upon one side the profiles of Washington and Lafayette are cut, surrounded by the inscription, "Centennial, Yorktown, Va., 1881." Upon the other side is a representation of the surrender of Cornwallis, with the date, Oct. 19, 1781.

THE STAR-ROUTE CASES.

The Grand Jury of the District met on Monday and it is expected that some of the star-route cases will be presented for their consideration. It is understood that the more important cases will first be presented, and the minor ones afterward. The prosecution will be on the charge of conspiracy to defraud the government out of large sums of money. The officials of the Postoffice Department have the cases which they propose to make the initial ones well in hand, so far as proofs are concerned, and among those who will have the first attention are a few leading politicians, some ex-Postoffice officials, and several mail contractors.

THE NORTHERN CHEYENNES.

A conference was held at the interior department, with a view to arriving at some conclusion as to Little Chief and his band of Northern Cheyennes. Secretary Kirkwood and Lincoln, Gen. Sherman, and Little Chief were present. It was decided that a delegation of Missouri River Indians, including Spotted Tail, Old Chief, Standing Bear, and others, should come to Washington early in September, to discuss various vexed questions with the tribes here. The Northern Cheyennes are very much dissatisfied with their present location in the Indian country, and want to go back to the Missouri river country. They would prefer to locate at Fort Keogh, but there is no Indian reservation there.

CHARACTERISTIC LETTER FROM THE CHAMPION.

District Attorney Corkhill received in his care a postal-card, dated Madison Square, New York, July 9, addressed to the "Citizen Assassin," reading as follows:

"CITIZEN ASSASSIN—Having saved the party, Cabinet, and Star-Routes—smashed stalwartism—killed Democracy—immortalized Garfield—smothered Grant, Arthur, and Conklingism—collapsed Depew—brought plancts of tears to the White House—obtained a quarter of a million gift for the family of the President—he should pardon you as a friend. In the name of Zion you saved Zion. Six months in the Tombs for quoting three columns of the Bible, before the revision, to save Woolhull from Roosevelt! Declared of unsound mind! Thought harmless by the highest medical experts! Cashiered! Money mania! Hammondites and sane and responsible for his acts by the jury! As no one seems your friend, will you accept my services as counsel? Success guaranteed in advance.

CONKLING WILL STAY.

It having been stated in Albany that if another caucus is held Conkling would withdraw, inquiry was made of him on this point. Conkling replied emphatically that he was in this race to stay, and all his advices from Albany were satisfactory, and he should not withdraw under any circumstances. When asked what he meant by saying that his dispatches were satisfactory, he replied that ex-Marshal Payn and Speaker Sharpe assured him that no election could be had unless his claims were considered. "We can and will hold out," telegraphed Speaker Sharpe this morning. Mr. Conkling said, in further conversation, that if a regularly called caucus is held, where each member can vote for his choice, without being coerced by the subsidized press, he has no fears of his own nomination. He said, further, that since Platt had withdrawn without his consent, he would not attempt to interfere in the selection of Platt's successor.

POSTAL STATISTICS.

Gen. Hazen, third assistant postmaster general, has prepared a comparative statement showing the increase in the issue of postage stamps, stamped envelopes, newspaper wrappers, and postal cards, including issues for official use, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1881, over those of the preceding year. The number of ordinary postage stamps issued in 1880 was 875,881,970; value, $22,415,928. For the year ending June 30, 1881, the number was 954,128,410 and the value $24,040,643, the increase in number being 78,446,470 and in value $1,625,715, or per cent of increase, 8.9 in number and 7.2 in value. The total number of postage stamps, newspaper and periodical stamps, stamped envelopes, newspaper wrappers, postage-due stamps, and postal cards issued for sale to the public for the year ending June 30, 1880, was 1,365,424,052; value, $31,932,518, for the year ending June 30, 1881, 1,449,773,508; value $34,482,519; increase in number, 136,349,456; in value, $2,551,000; increase of per cent in number, 10; in value 7. The total of all issues, including official stamps, official stamped envelopes and wrappers, was, in 1880, 1,407,397,047; value, $32,087,342; in 1881, 1,504,311,553; value, $34,835,451. The increase in newspaper and periodical stamps and newspaper wrappers over last year is 12.7 per cent. in number and 11.6 in value; 12.9 per cent., respectively, in value, which is the largest per cent. of increase, with the exception of postal-cards, which is 13.2 per cent.

THE FIVE PER CENT. BONDS.

Treasurer Gilfillan has issued the following circular relative to deposits for the 5 per cent. fund of national banks:

Treasury of the United States, Washington, July 12, 1881.—In accordance with the opinion of the attorney general, dated June 30, 1881, national banks may reimburse the treasurer of the United States for their circulating notes redeemed in any of the following ways:

1. By check drawn on New York payable to the order of the assistant treasurer in New York and collectible through the clearing-house, forwarded directly to that officer, with instructions to deposit the amount on account of 5 per cent. fund and to forward a certificate of deposit therefor to the treasury of the United States.

2. By deposit of lawful money in the United States with the assistant treasurer of the United States in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, New Orleans, Baltimore, Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, or San Francisco, on account of the 5 per cent. fund. Banks not situated in one of the above named cities should make deposit through their correspondents. The certificate for deposit must be returned to the treasurer of the United States by the bank making the deposit. Credit cannot be given until it is received.

3. By remittance of lawful money of the United States addressed to the treasurer of United States, Washington, D. C., marked with the amount and nature of the contents, and the fact that it is for the credit of the 5 per cent. fund. Express charges, if not prepaid, will be deducted from the proceeds of remittance at government contract rates.

The total value of exports of petroleum and petroleum products for the month of May, 1881, was $3,361,155; same month in 1880, $[illegible]; eleven months ended May 31, 1881, $[illegible]; eleven months ended May 31, 1880, $[illegible].

It is estimated by the chief of the loan division of the treasury department that there are about $30,000,000 of registered 5 per cent. bonds outstanding. These bonds are redeemable at once, with interest to date of presentation. They cease to bear interest on Oct. 1. There are upward of $12,000,000 of coupon 5 per cent. bonds outstanding, which cease to bear interest on July 17 and are redeemable after that date.

CROP REPORTS.

The cotton returns to the bureau of agriculture up to July 1 show an increase in the condition of cotton since the reports in June. The average condition is 95, against 100 the same time last year. The plant generally is reported small and ten days late. Hot and too dry weather is almost universally noted, but, except in southern and western Texas, little injury is reported. Alabama and Georgia each report a better condition than last year, while Texas and Arkansas are lower. Insect injuries are seldom mentioned.

The condition of the wheat crop, as reported July 1, is much better than June 1, and the average is 83 for the whole country. The Atlantic states fall off slightly as compared with the returns for the same time last year, but the large wheat region north of the Ohio river and west of the Mississippi returns a low condition as compared with 1880. Michigan reports only 64 per cent., and Illinois 68. Ohio and Indiana are below last year, but report a fair prospect. Missouri and Kansas each make great complaint of damage from insects. In spring wheat the state of Iowa alone returns a condition much lower than last year, and which is only 72.

The increased area planted in corn is nearly 2 per cent. over 1880. The average condition of the crop is not so high as for the last two years, and is 90 against 100 last year. In all the north Atlantic states the crop is backward, owing to the cold, wet spring, but in the states south of the Delaware river and on the Gulf of Mexico it is reported as fair. Texas, however, reports serious injury from drouth. In the great corn-producing region bordering on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers the average is below last year, particularly in the state of Iowa, which only reports a condition of 77, caused by the cold spring and too much rain in July. In Illinois and Missouri the condition is reported very favorable.

THE MONETARY CONFERENCE.

Senator T. O. Howe, of Wisconsin one of the delegates to the international monetary conference at Paris, has arrived on the steamer Celtic. He was unexpectedly called home by the illness of his wife, who is now in Washington. To a reporter he said: "When I left Paris a week ago last Sunday no agreement had been reached by the conference in regard to a free coinage of the gold and silver, and I saw no prospect of such an agreement. But the conference has undoubtedly done much to awaken an interest among the European people upon the subject discussed. The conference has very essentially advanced the cause of bimetallism, and that advance is as marked in Great Britain as in other countries. The opinion is much more favorable to bimetallism now than when the conference convened on April 19 last." Senator Howe added that on the day before he started for America, Judge Thurman made an able speech on the American idea of free coinage, and that it was heartily applauded. The speech, Senator Howe said, would be published.

When asked what effect the attempted assassination of President Garfield produced in the conference, Senator Howe replied: "The strongest feelings of sympathy were manifested among the delegates, irrespective of nationality. This feeling appeared to be general in Paris."

A SCOUNDREL'S CONFESSION.

United States District Attorney Corkhill has authorized the publication of the following in order to correct some false statements:

"The interest felt in the details of the assassination and the many stories published justify me in stating that the following is the correct and accurate statement to which reference is made: The assassin, Charles Guiteau, came to Washington on Sunday evening, March 6, 1881, and stopped at the Ebbitt House, remaining one day. He then secured a room in another part of the city, and boarded and roomed at various places, the full details of which I have. On Wednesday, May 18, 1881, the assassin determined to murder the President. He had neither money nor a pistol at the time. About the last of May he went into O'Meara's store, corner of 15th and F street, in this city, and examined some pistols, asking for the largest calibre, and only different in price. On Wednesday, June 8, he purchased the pistol which he used, for which he paid $10, he having in the meantime borrowed $15 of a gentleman of this city on the plea that he wanted to pay his board bill.

"Sunday morning, June 18, he was sitting in Lafayette Park, and saw the President leave for the Christian Church on Vermont avenue, and he at once returned to his room, obtained his pistol, put it in his hip pocket, and followed the President to church. He entered the church, but found he could not kill him there without danger of killing some one else.

"The following Wednesday he went to the church to examine the location and window. He became satisfied that he could accomplish his purpose, and he determined to make the attempt at the church on the following Sunday. He learned from the papers that the President would leave the city Saturday, June 18, with his wife, for Long Branch, and he therefore determined to meet him at the depot.

"He left his boarding-house about 5 o'clock Saturday morning, June 18, and went down to the river to the foot of 17th street, and fired five shots to practice his aim and to be certain his pistol was in good condition. He then went to the depot, and was in the ladies' sitting-room of the depot with his pistol ready, when the Presidential party entered. He says Mrs. Garfield looked so weak and frail that he had no heart to fire in her presence, and as he knew he would have another opportunity he left the depot. He had previously engaged a carriage to take him to the jail.

"On Wednesday evening the President and his son and, I think, United States Marshal Henry went out for a ride. The assassin took his pistol and followed them for some time in the hope that the carriage would stop, but no opportunity was given. On Friday evening, July 1, he was sitting in the park opposite the White House when he saw the President come out alone. He followed him down the avenue to 15th street, and then kept on the opposite side of the street up 15th until the President entered the residence of Secretary Blaine. He waited at the corner of Mr. Morton's late residence, corner of 15th and H streets for some time, and then, as he was afraid he would attract attention, he went into an alley in the rear of Morton's residence, examined his pistol and waited. The President and Secretary Blaine came out together, and he followed them over to the gate of the White House, but could get no opportunity to use his weapon.

"On the morning of Saturday, July 2, he breakfasted at the Riggs house about 7 o'clock. He then walked up into the park and sat there for an hour. He then took a one-horse avenue car and rode to Sixth street, got out, and went into the depot and loitered around there. He had his shoes blacked, engaged a hackman for $2 to take him to the jail, went into the water-closet and took his pistol out of his hip pocket and unwrapped the paper from around it which he put there for the purpose of preventing the perspiration of his body from dampening the powder. He examined his pistol carefully, tried the trigger, and then returned and took a seat in the ladies' waiting room, and as soon as the President entered advanced behind him and fired two shots. These facts, I think, can be relied upon as accurate, and I give them to the public to contradict certain false rumors in connection with this most atrocious of atrocious crimes.

No medicine has received such universal commendation as Arthur's Elixir of Sulphur. No person with throat or lung trouble ever used a bottle without relief. No one inflicted with impure or vitiated blood ever gave it a trial without seeing its good effects. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

Let it be understood that when the bangs of a red-headed girl becomes stiff and bristling it indicates the approach of a thunder storm. The young man who goes around experimenting, to test the truth of the statement, will doubtless realize before he is through that he has been hit all over by lightning.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

BROOKLYN.

Dr. Porter, E. L. Ennis and I. H. Dresser are seeking knowledge at Denver and Leadville, and escaping sickness that threatens to invade here.

The former proprietor of the Clinton News has decided to locate here, but what he will find to print that people will be willing to have told of I can't imagine. To please one-half, he must tell everything, and the remainder can only be kept good natured by issuing a blank.

When I take up a paper and find every other item to be that some base ball club has scored nine to some other squads cipher, or yachting club has out-paddled all creation, and that other kind that shoots glass balls to flinders, to advance science, and sacrifice a thumb or two for the sake of helping editors to news, I almost spoil with envy. It seems as if every other place but this had a club to uphold its honor, and I really believe that if it was not for these multitudinous schools of free moral agency that the go ahead invincibleness of three-fourths of our Charlie relations would remain in embryo till the crack of doom. When a fellow is linked to a club folks soon know what he is good for. It is pure intellectual invigoration to read about those Detroit smutty faces, or Halifax short-ears, and I can't help feeling vexed that Brooklyn Pottawatamies never figure in history. It gives us the appearance of being a pantalet fraternity.

PEARLIE.

MACON CENTER.

Wheat short but very thin, the kernel plump and very nice, nearly all secure in stack and barns; oats but little sown and look well; potatoes good; corn mixed; hay, fair yield but somewhat damaged from rains.

Mrs. W. H. Osborn is still at her daughter's in Detroit, improving slowly, but not yet well enough to be brought home.

C. R. Henry, prosecuting attorney of Iosco county, is visiting parents and friends here. He made us a short call Friday evening and reports business good in his line.

The grange and red ribbon club hold regular meetings every two weeks with full houses. Romeyn Miller and C. R. Henry lectured before the club Saturday evening with good effect. At the next regular meeting, in connection with the election of officers, there will be a discussion on the question: "Resolved, That the new license law is better than prohibition." Aff.—D. Bailey. Neg.—A. Easlick, with the privilege of two speakers each.

There will be a meeting at Grange hall Tuesday evening, August 2d, for the purpose of making arrangements for a farmer's picnic and pioneer meeting to come off about the fourth Friday, the 26th of August. Everybody invited.

The excitement, anxiety and indignation over the shooting of President Garfield is about the same here as elsewhere, but the recent drawback in the President's condition has a tendency to weaken faith in the efficacy of prayer, there having no such volume of supplication ever ascended in behalf of a single individual; seemingly sufficient to raise the dead of an army, if attended with the faith of old. Still we hope and trust that the President's strength and will, in connection with medical skill, will bring him safely through. A. E.

ADDISON.

The wheat crop just secured has not suffered nearly so great an injury from rain storms as was supposed.

Steam whistle screaches may now be heard in our land.

Grain threshing will nearly all be executed by steam power in this section of country.

Work on the inter-county ditch touching a short distance west of this place has been suspended by reason of the recent showers which flowed the low lands to such an extent as to render it impracticable to continue longer.

ROME.

Overcoats and stoves are in order at present.

Mr. Higgings, the bed renovater, is about to move to Jonesville, Mich. We regret very much the loss of such an estimable family to the place, but wish them all manner of success where ever they may go.

Geo. Fleming, who has been blacksmith here for the last 15 years or more has sold his shop to James Seger and will now turn his attention to his farm we presume. We hope the business will continue as good as before

Our hotel is about to change hands again, this being the fifth time in the last ten years. Fred Desermia, who owns it at present has, or is about to trade it to Will Teachout for his farm close to his place. Will is a young man who will undoubtedly keep a good house and so continue its good name. We regret to have Fred leave, for his family are nice quiet people.

Dentist Vaughn now visits this town as of old, every Wednesday.

Flan Purchis the painter will move into Mrs. Christman's house shortly.

The Record Picnic which passed through to the lakes yesterday was not very well attended.

Oats are being cut this week.

RIDGEWAY.

A Sabbath School picnic in the near future.

Parmer Hamilton called on his old friends this week. His run is from Elkhart to Chicago. He seems to like railroading.

Henry Barnes was considerably injured this week while tinkering his reaper; having one hand and arm through the drive wheel the horses suddenly backed up breaking his arm.

Now is the time to do your ditch business, Hank.

John Boyd is building a stone foundation for a new barn. It will be on the east side of the Ridge, a large one.

Billmeyer's oxen drew his engine off the end of a bridge near little Ned's, damaging it considerably.

Thrashing started up in this vicinity on Monday at Freers, Al. Kelly's machine. Tuesday he turned out 790 bushels of wheat for Wm. R. Wilson, and moved to another place before sundown. How is that to start on.

The stock yards at Britton's are completed and considerable stock shipped this week. I. S. Osborn shipped two car loads of oats and several of lumber within a short time.

Phonzo Sutton lost his pocket book with about $11, Tuesday, between Ridgeway and Kniffin's mill. Have you found it, eh?

Our postmaster rides from Dundee to Milan on the cars and then walks home via Britton's up the Butler track. From Dundee to Ridgeway 10 miles, from Milan to Ridgeway 14 miles. How is that for an old man of about three score and ten.

Temperance meeting next Sunday evening. Rev. Mr. De Spelder and Profs. J. R. Miller and H. C. Wilson are announced as the speakers.

Mayor Beatty.

In the subjoined paragraph will be found a compliment to Mayor Beatty, of Washington, New Jersey: "Thursday evening last it happened we were on the passenger train that reached Washington about seven o'clock, and while stopping to change engines a splendid span of horses was noticed upon the street some distance below the track, drawing a carriage containing two gentlemen, neither of whom was recognized by us until a hum passed through the car, and the name of Daniel F. Beatty, the Organ King, was spoken with the familiarity of a household word, and in an instant many of the windows were hoisted, as the passengers seemed intent upon getting a better view of the elegant turnout of that well-known gentleman. The Mayor gracefully acknowledged the compliment, and removing his white silk hat bowed repeatedly to the occupants of the train. We do not note this fact as an advertisement but as a pleasure. By strict attention to business this comparatively young man has built up a business of collossal proportions, and is at present giving employment to as great a number of men, if not greater, than any private individual in the county. Enterprise is what we most admire, and whether it comes from the railroad, mining or organ business, it is just the same to us. We say success to Beatty, the Organ King, and long may he live to fill the world with music and the pocket of the skilled mechanic with money. Would that our county had more such men.—Blairstown (N. J.) Press.

Deerfield Record: Geo. N. Stacy has recently purchased an interest in the Tecumseh HERALD, published by his brother, S. C. Stacy, and the new firm will sail under the name of Stacy Brothers. The HERALD is one of the best papers in the State, and we hope it may continue as such under the new management.

Dundee Ledger: Fifteen years ago James Cheever of our village lost a valuable cane between Ridgeway and Tecumseh. At the time of losing he made dilligent search but could get no trace of it. Ten or twelve years after, a gentleman stepped into Mr. Hurd's Drug store on his way in to the State of New York, having in his possession a cane that Mr. C. thought he recognized as the one he had lost. On putting the question to the stran as to where he got the cane he answered that he bought it in the State of New York and further than that he paid eight dollars for it. So the subject was dropped, no more being thought of the matter until some yrs. after, when one day a gentleman from near Ridgeway happened to be stopping with Mr. Cheever and the subject of the lost cane came up. The visitor remarking to Mr. Cheever—"That is your cane, I was with the man when he found it!" Mr. Cheever called on the finder during the present week, with such an array of evidence that he had no difficulty in obtaining the long lost property. The cane is a valuable one, and what makes it doubly valuable, it was a present to Mr. Cheever. Thus we see "murder will out." After fifteen long years the property finds its way back to the rightful owner.

Hudson Post: A few nights since John Cleave, of Medina, went to his barn, about five rods distant from his house. He was just entering the door when he was struck a fearful blow on the head, felling him to the ground, where he lay until half-past four the next morning, when he recovered sufficiently to get to the house. Mr. Cleave had got the money that day on a note of fifty odd dollars, for which it is thought he was waylaid. The above facts were given by his daughter, Miss Frank Cleave. It seems quite strange that on his not returning from the barn in a reasonable time the family did not look him up, and stranger still that no officers have been put on the track of the highwayman. It has been claimed by the family that the old gentleman is insane, and they have tried to get him in an asylum, but have thus far failed. If that money was stolen from him, and he is insane, why did the family not secure an officer to hunt out the fiend, or at least try too?

Hudson Gazette: At a meeting of the Directors of the Farmers' Picnic Association of Hillsdale and Lenawee counties, at the Comstock House, it was decided to hold the annual picnic on Wednesday, August 17th. An executive committee, consisting of Horace Boley, of Wheatland, John U. Harkness, of Rollin, and I. E. Phelps, of Hudson, are to act in conjunction with the officers of the Association, who meet at Beardsell's landing, Devil's lake, next Tuesday, at 10 o'clock, a. m., to arrange a program for the occasion, and fix time of holding the picnic. The President was empowered to engage speakers for the occasion. C. W. Pelham, of Woodstock, was elected marshal of the day.

Adrian Record: We are pained to learn that Orin Winslow, a prominent farmer of Dover and well known in this city, was stricken on Tuesday with progressive paralysis. The attack was first manifest in one of his feet, from whence it gradually spread to his whole side, which is now paralyzed. He is also losing command of his speech. It is feared that total paralysis will ensue.

Yellow bonnet, there'll be twenty

II.—THE CLOSE OF THE SEASON.

Scarce a week has scattered sunshine
On the Lady Dandelion,
When a little snowy head-dress
Gravely she begins to tie on,

Ah; I see old Time is busy
With this stylish little Lady;
Ruffled white-cap is a night-cap;
She is past her beauty's heyday.

Nothing now she cares for fashion;
All she asks a bed to lie on!
Blows a gust! and in a moment
Gone is Lady Dandelion!

Dr. BISTOURY'S NIGHT-WATCHMAN.

"Tell you what, doctor, you'll be getting robbed and murdered one of these days; you will, upon my word."

"Hardly, my boy. You ought to know by this time that its the province of us doctors to kill other people, not to be killed ourselves," find with a thick chuckle at his own wit, Dr. John Hunter Bistoury settled himself comfortably in his chair, and began to peel his third orange as carefully as though he was taking off a limb.

"Look here, doctor, I'm not joking—I'm not indeed! Everyone knows that you are a rich man; and it's got abroad that there's a room in your house which is always shut up—the very thing to make people think there must be something very valuable stowed away there; and yet, after all that, you go on living in this big house without a soul near you except the cook and old Sam yonder, who wouldn't be worth a cent in a real scrimmage!"

"Well, my boy," said the Dr. with a curious smile, "would it tranquilize your mind if I were to engage a night-watchman?"

"I should think so. That would be just the thing."

"Very good. Consider it done."

This room, of which Harry had spoken as being "always shut up," was a standing puzzle to the doctor's few intimates. Not a man of them had ever crossed its threshold; and its master when questioned on the subject, answered oddly by some joking evasion. Rumor whispered that one adventurous gentleman, rendered desperate by his wife's threat to give him no peace till he found out "what Dr. Bistoury kept hid in that room of his," had actually attempted a burglarious entrance; but the attempt, if ever made, had been unsuccessful. It is needless to say that countless conjectures, and not a few heavy bets likewise, were constantly made respecting the contents of this Bluebeard chamber.

Against this ingenious theory there was only one thing to be said—the doctor had never had a wife to immure. The flagrant treason against the sex was the more unpardonable inasmuch as he had had abundant opportunities of changing his condition, had he but chosen to avail himself of them. To most of those who questioned him on the subject, he replied that he was wedded to his profession, and that any other union would be flat bigamy; but to his friend Harry Everette, in a moment of after-dinner confidence, he told a very different story.

"My medical cousin Alice was the woman who ought to have been Mrs. Bistoury, and an admirable fellow-practitioner she would have been for me. The way in which she once cut a splinter out of my thumb, did equal honor to her hand or heart; and when she was only thirteen, she bought a skeleton with her uncle's birthday gift of five dollars—a fact—and articulated in a manner that was really masterly. But in an evil hour she became tainted with a fancy for homeopathy; and after that of course all was over between us. Such is life!"

The doctor's agreement to engage a night-watchman quieted Harry's apprehensions for the time being, but a few weeks later he returned to the attack once more. "I say, doctor, have you got that night-watchman yet?"

"Yes, some time ago."

"Well, he don't seem to do his duty, then, for I've passed this way at all hours of the night, and never seen him. Are you quite sure he's to be trusted?"

"Wait and see," said the doctor, oracularly.

"Well, the doctor had volunteered as promptly as if he had been keeping his eye on the place for a year past. The new-comer was a grave, smooth-faced taciturn man who moved as noiselessly as a shadow, and seemed a living combination of the two proverbial requisites of a good servant, silence and obedience.

But although the doctor and his friends highly approved of this model domestic, there was one man who did not. That one was Harry Everette, who lost no time in announcing his opinion. "Look here, doctor; I don't want to be always bothering you about this robbery idea, but it's a fact that that new fellow of yours is up to some mischief. I was coming home pretty late last night, when I caught sight of him standing at the garden gate, talking to a couple of men. One of them happened to turn his face to the lamplight as I passed, and I knew him at once for a noted thief who goes by the name of 'Badger Bill.'"

"Indeed! Are you sure of that?"

"Quite sure. You know I never forget a face I have once seen."

"Ah! In that case it is time for me to act."

The last word was so curiously emphasized, that Harry, who was not wanting in shrewdness, began to suspect that his persistent warnings to the doctor had been superfluous, after all, and that the old gentleman was quite equal to the emergency.

This suspicion was confirmed one evening about a week later, when the Dr. dropped in on him unexpectedly, saying:

"Give me some dinner, my boy. You have no engagement for this evening, I know, so I'm going to be very benevolent, and find you some amusement myself. Have you ever read the Count of Monte Christo? because you're going to see a character of it dramatized to-night, and pretty effectively, too."

"What, do you mean?" asked Everette, staring.

"Why, you see, I told my servants a few days ago that I should be away from home to-night, and my cook naturally seized the chance of getting an evening out; consequently the house will be under the sole charge of that worthy man-servant of mine, against whom you are so unaccountably prejudiced. It's quite possible the two honest gentlemen with whom you saw him talking the other night, may be kind enough to enliven his solitude with a visit; and so—"

Harry sprang to his feet and cut a caper worthy of a dancing dervish, snapping his fingers by way of accompaniment.

"Capital! first-rate! I see it all now! But come now, doctor, why on earth couldn't you tell me before that you were up to the whole game, instead of letting me make a fool of myself by preaching to a man that is as smart as any six of me?"

"Never mind, my boy," said the doctor, laughing. "Your warning was kindly meant, all the same. Eat your dinner—you'll want it before the evening is over, I can promise you—and then we'll have our talk."

Dinner over, the doctor lit one of his incomparable cigars which were his sole luxury; and proceeded to expound his plan of action.

"I've locked up the outer room that opens into my mysterious chamber, which puts two strong doors between it and robbers. My estimable servant will warn them of this, and they'll try the window instead. He'll let them in by the garden door, and give them the ladder that lies beside to mount it by. We'll hide in the stable, which—thanks to my keeping my brougham elsewhere—has been unused so long that no one would dream of suspecting it, but I can open the door easy enough."

"And then," [illegible] Harry, eagerly, "we'll go [illegible] immure they appear. It'll be a [illegible] to use my new revolver."

"Better leave it at home," said the doctor, quietly, "we shall want no weapons for this job."

"Why, are you going to mesmerize the fellows?" asked Everette, completely mystified.

"Wait and see," chuckled the doctor. "We needn't be there till eleven, for my honest domestic will make sure, before giving the signal, that I'm not coming back, and besides, an experienced burglar seldom begins work till after midnight. The only thing to be sure of is that nobody sees us getting in."

But in this fortune favored them, and as the doctor had foretold, the lock of the stable door, rusty as it looked, moved without difficulty, and the two conspirators glided in unseen and unheard.

Weary, weary work, crouched there in the darkness, with ear and eye strained to the utmost for the sign of the coming danger. Dr. Bistoury's practiced nerves bore even this prolonged trial easily enough, but to the impulsive, excitable Everette it was absolute torture. Like all young soldiers, he found the suspense before the action infinitely more trying than the fray itself. The stable opened on the street, close to the garden door, and its farther window, at which the two watchers had posted themselves, commanded the whole side of the house, the blackness of which was relieved only by a solitary light in one of the upper windows. Suddenly the light vanished and re-appeared a moment later—a performance repeated three times in quick succession.

"That must be the signal," whispered the doctor. "Now keep your eyes open, Harry."

Courageous as Everette was, he felt his pulse quicken; and his hand went instinctively to the revolver which, despite the doctor's verdict, he had persisted in bringing with him.

"Hark! Was that a stealthy footstep outside?"

The next moment came a low whistle, instantly answered from the house, and then a shadowy figure issuing from the building, glided noiselessly to the garden door and opened it to admit two others.

"They've got the ladder," whispered Dr. Bistoury, as the three phantoms glided across the garden. "Be on the lookout, my boy, you're going to see something worth seeing."

The ladder was soon placed against the the mysterious window, and Badger Bill, after whispering to his comrade to "keep an eye" on their worthy confederate, ascended, and cutting out a pane so dexterously that the sound was barely audible, put his hand through and shot back the hasp. His two assistants mounted after him, and Bill stepping cautiously into the room, turned the bull's-eye of the lantern upon its interior.

Instantly the treacherous servant recoiled with a stifled cry: "Ain't that a coffin over yonder?" whispered he tremulously. "Good gracious! suppose there should be a dead person in it, and—"

"S'pose you should be a thunderin' big fool," growled Bill, savagely. "Shut yer mouth, will you, or thar'll be another dead man somewhar round soon. I'm goin' right in—I am!" and he stepped resolutely forward.

Crash, the coffin-lid burst open, a skeleton, thrown out in ghastly relief by the red light that flamed in its eyeless sockets, started up with a hideous rattle, thrusting forward its bony arms and grinning jaws as if about to spring upon them. The sauve qui peut of Napoleon was not more decisive. The honest servant gave one yell sufficient to wake the whole neighborhood, and rolled on the floor in convulsions. The second burglar leaping backward, dashed his head with such force against the corner of a bureau, that he dropped as if felled with an ax, while Badger Bill, making a frantic rush for the window, overturned the ladder and fell crashing along with it, breaking his leg in the fall.

"You see now, Harry," said the doctor, as they went up stairs after seeing their unbidden guests marched off by the police, "that my night-watchman did know his duty, although there is nothing more unearthly about him than a few concealed springs, which are released upon the approach of anyone, and a little phosphorus. As for this wonderful room, you see it's only a laboratory, after all. But the stories that people told about it amused me so much that I must plead guilty to having given them encouragement. Now, let us be off to bed; and I think you may sleep in peace after this, for it strikes me it'll be some time before anybody robs my house again."

And indeed, no one has ever attempted it since.

The most wonderful geological formation, perhaps, in the world is that recently discovered in the valley of the east fork of the Yellowstone river. It is said to be in horizontal layers, and the whole formation is a little more than a mile in depth. The solidified remains of a multitude of forests fill the entire formation throughout. Many of the trees are of large size. Some are standing upright as they grew and many are prostrate. Numerous stumps and logs are to be found that measure four and five feet in diameter, while one huge trunk is described as being ten feet in diameter.

The Jury System.

Trial by jury has been a fixed institution in the jurisprudence of the nation. The first pilgrims who landed upon Plymouth Rock and formed themselves into a civil community looked back with pride at the laws and institutions of the mother country, and vowed that every man should have the right to be judged by his peers. In the subsequent history of the nation we see the system enforced and protected by strong legislative enactments, and we may safely assert that abolition may never be looked for. Yet, it has probably never occurred to the greater portion of the community that the system is a very imperfect one, susceptible of the greatest abuse. On the very threshold we are confronted with the assertion, that trial by jury is an institution handed down to us from the earliest times; that it comes down to us hoary with age and with the approval and endorsement of all the eminent jurists of ancient and modern times; that an institution which has existed so long must necessarily be a good one.

But this argument is not tenable. The old system of common law, pleading and practice, also stood the test for centuries, but in modern times it has been found imperfect, its forms are too cumbersome for our modern practice, and the tendency everywhere has been to simplify the pleadings in all civil and criminal proceedings. In most of the states of the Union, codes have been enacted which eliminate the worthless surplusage and absurd length of the ancient system. Age has but very little to do with the matter. If we draw aside the misty veil of the past, and seek the origin of a trial by jury, we shall find it associated with trial by purgation, the sacred bread pellets, and the red hot iron bars, from which the innocent, with naked feet escape unharmed. In those ancient days the jurors were the witnesses; men who had seen and knew all the facts. At the present time their knowledge of facts would disqualify them as jurors. The lawyer of to-day carefully ascertains whether the panel consists of men who have never heard the facts, and have never formed an opinion in one way or the other. We thus see that the ancient system—the origin of the present system—has had to be moulded to such an extent by legislators as to almost change its nature, and all this to adapt it to our modern times.

The jury system of to-day is, no doubt, greatly superior to the ancient one, yet it is still necessarily imperfect. For instance, a man is arraigned before the court on a charge of murder. The deed for which he is brought to the bar of justice is one of the most atrocious of the kind. The evidence is direct and complete. There exists the proof of the act—the criminal, premeditated intent. The law demands his life. The good of the people require it. The culprit is a wealthy man, he has many friends, money is brought to bear, and, regardless of the evidence, regardless of the law, the murderer is acquitted. This is no overdrawn picture. Our readers will recall instances of the kind which have come under their own notice.

Supposing a case involving thousands of dollars. The jury have been out for several days. A game of draw poker is suggested. Smith agrees with Jones to vote with him if he is beaten in the game. He thus barters off his vote, contrary to his convictions, and, most probably, contrary to the facts. These cases frequently occur. In Philadelphia recently, one of the city council got off because a juryman refused to vote with his eleven comrades for conviction, although the evidence was full and complete.

The bill charged him with conspiring to make a fraudulent election return, and with executed conspiracy. The evidence proved it. Yet, one man saved him from punishment. Thus, we find another imperfection in requiring the whole twelve to agree upon the same thing. Twelve men, differently constituted, cannot always agree on facts, and the result will be, either a disagreement, or a vote against conviction, to get away from the confinement of the jury room. Furthermore, the jury are the judges of the facts. As to the law, they must take the instructions of the court. Suppose that they disregard these instructions. An appeal to the supreme court will set that verdict aside. If, for instance, on a trial for right of property in a mine, the defendant fails to prove mineral in place in his discovery shaft, and the court instructs the jury that, unless such mineral is found, there is no location; and the jury, notwithstanding the instructions find for the plaintiff. The supreme court will set it aside, or the court wherein the case was determined will grant a new trial. Thus, a jury is simply an intermediate crank in the machinery of jurisprudence, which is useless, and cumbersome, in its being there. When we come to consider the fact that a jury can be tampered with; the fact that it is almost impossible to get a true verdict from twelve men of differently constituted minds; the fact that in a majority of cases a verdict contrary to the law is rendered, which is annihilated in the higher courts, we are led to exclaim with King Alfonso of old, when he was shown the cumbersome Ptolemic cycles and epicycles, made to explain the revolution of the planets, "If I had been consulted at the creation, I could have done better than that myself."—Leadville Democrat.

The Hammock.

When children only are to use the hammock, the manner of hanging it is not very important, but if provided for the use of grown persons it should be so suspended that the head will always be considerably higher than the feet, and much of the comfort of one who uses it depends on a proper observance of this fact. If you have no more suitable place, suspend it from the columns of a verandah. The hook which supports the head end should be six and one-fourth feet from the floor, that for the foot end three and three-fourths feet, and these proportions should be observed wherever it may be hung, to secure the most desirable curve for the ease of the occupant.

Another point to be observed: the head should be fastened to the hook by a rope less than a foot long—just enough to attach it—while at the foot the rope should be four and a half feet long. This gives the greatest freedom for swinging the lower part of the body, while the head moves but little. This is a point which cannot be observed in a hammock for children, who think more of it as a swing than a place for comfortable repose. When trees serve for supports, ample provision should be made to prevent injury to the bark, by means of stout canvas or heavy bagging between the ropes to which it is suspended and the bark. If the hanging be so arranged that the hammock can be taken in during long storms, it will last much longer.

The following is a touching Arkansas obitnary verse: "Grim Death has taken darling little Jerry, only son of Joseph and Sirena Howells; 7 days he wrastled with the dysentery, and then he perished in his little bowels."

Peculiar Words.

There are a number of words in the English language each of which contains all of the five regular vowels, but it would puzzle almost any one to think of more than one or two at short notice. The following may be given as examples: Education, reputation, regulation, emulation, perturbation, mensuration repudiation. Besides these there are several words, each containing all the vowels including the "y." Of course we may mention revolutionary, eloeutionary, and unquestionably. The word invisibility may be noted as a peculiar word, for it contains the letter "i" five times. Mississippi and Tennessee are each spelled with only four different letters of the alphabet, although one contains eleven letters and the other nine. Schnapps a word of one syllable and eight letters containing but one vowel. There are no words in the English language of more than eight syllables, and of those containing that number may be mentioned incomprehensibility

An ingenious boy in Richmond Va., has a pigeon box. He fastened upon the front of it a piece of looking-glass, perhaps a fourth of a foot in size. Some English sparrows built in this box, and occupied their spare time in fighting the image of themselves in the glass. They would fight by the hour, and pant with labor and heat, flying violently against the glass, taking breath and trying again and again. They were not observed at first to do so, but finally they took a good-sized gravel in their mouths and struck the glass with all their might. Sometimes the gravel was as big as a dried black-eye pea. Were the sparrows trying to break the glass, or is this their way of fighting when they are very angry?

Vulcanized India-Rubber.

Charles Goodyear began his experiments to discover the secret of controlling india-rubber, and the means of imparting to it durability under all temperatures and conditions, in the winter of 1834-35. He was subjected to the privations of pinching poverty, and the discouragements of ill-health, and did not attain the success for which he so patiently labored, until accident led to it in the spring of 1839. Standing before a stove in a store at Woburn, Mass., he was explaining to some acquaintances the properties of a piece of sulphur-cured india-rubber which he held in his hand. They listened to him good-naturedly, but with evident incredulity; when suddenly he dropped the rubber on the stove, which was red-hot. His former preparations would have melted instant in contact with such heat; but, to his surprise, this piece underwent no such change. In amazement he examined it, and found that while it had charred or shrivelled, like leather, it had not softened at all. The bystanders attached no importance to this phenomenon; but to him it was a revelation. He renewed his experiments with enthusiasm, and in a little while established the facts that india-rubber, wher mixed with sulphur, and exposed to a certain degree of heat for a certain time, will not melt or even soften at any degree of heat; that it will only char at two hundred and eighty degrees; and that it will not stiffen from exposure to any degree of cold.

For cleansing the system of all morbid matter and warding off diseases, no medicine possesses such efficacy as Baxter's Mandrake Bitters.

As a Liniment for horses Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment is unequaled. It cures Sprains, Bruises, and Lameness at once.

The First Oil Well.

A story is published in a Cumberland valley newspaper to the effect that oil was found in large quantities near Burksville, Ky., as early as 1828. Unfortunately the witnesses are dead. It is claimed, however, that some of the oil is still retained in bottles, but we will still have to insist that this testimony is not competent. The article appeared in the Cumberland, Md., Courier, and is as follows: "Some time since we read an article in a northern journal making the statement that Col. Drake, who put down the first oil well in Pennsylvania, had been pensioned for the great discovery made by him. The fact is undisputable that Col. Drake did first sink a well for oil in Pennsylvania, yet many years before that, a party of Cumberland county gentlemen, who are long since deceased, formed a copartnership for the purpose of boring for salt water, and in pursuance thereof they sank a well near the town of Burkville, Ky., about two and a half miles from this place, on the Columbia road.

When they had reached the depth of 80 feet they struck petroleum in great quantities. It flowed for two years, filling Rankox creek deep and running off into the Cumberland river, covering the river for twenty miles, when some mischievous chap set fire to it, in consequence of which navigation was impossible for days. It is estimated that thousands of bartels escaped from this well at that time, and thousands since. This was in 1828. Some of our oldest citizens remember this, and will verify our statement. It was the first and oldest well in the world. At this time the company, knowing nothing of its value, its use and qualities, abandoned the work. In course of time, however, some enterprising quack doctor, strolling through the county, discovered that it had great medicinal qualities as a liniment.

He therefore engaged with the owners of the well to deliver to him, in bottles, great quantities, to be shipped northr where he prepared and sold it for physical ailments of all sorts, shipping to Europe as well, where it became very popular and was called and known there as the "American Oil," from which circumstance the well was called and is now known here as the "Old American Oil Well." There is now a large number of bottles filled and corked, ready for shipment as per contract made with the owners, still in possession of Mr. Edward Baker, son of one of the company, which was never, for some reason, delivered. We have seen the oil and can certify to its superior quality. Since this time (1865,) when to strike oil was a fortune, many wells have been sunk in the county with like success; in fact, the county is full of oil, and the wells sunk too numerous to mention. It is only a question of time as to its development."—Petroleum World.

A Cambridge mother sent her small boy into the country, and after a week of anxiety received this letter: "I got here all right and I forgot to write before; it is a very nice place to have fun. A feller and I went out in a boat and the boat tipped over and a man got me out and I was so full of water I didn't know nothing for a good long while. The other boy has got to be buried after they find him. His mother came from Chelsea and she cries all the time. A hoss kicked me over and I have got to have some money to pay a doctor for fixing my head. We are going to set an old barn on fire to-night, and I should smile if we don't have bully fun. I lost my watch and I am very sorry. I shall bring home some mud turtles and I shall bring home a tame woodchuck if I can get um in my trunk."

WOMEN WITH LONG HAIR.—In one of his lectures in London, Dr. Erasmus Wilson exhibited the photograph of a woman 38 years old and five feet five inches high, whose tresses, when she stood erect, enveloped her entire form in a golden veil, and trailed several inches on the ground. The longest fibers measured six feet three and a half inches. Thirty inches is considered the mean length for females, and three feet is considered a very remarkable length. This instance is exceeded, however, by two American women—one whose hair measures seven feet six inches, and another whose luxuriant hair is almost as long, and so thick that when seated upon a chair she can completely cover herself with it.

Snakes Catching Fish.

One day, while catching fish as usual, I noticed a number of snakes, the common water moccasin, approaching the dam or footway of stones. The water yet lacked several inches of reaching the top of the stoneway, although it was rushing in quite rapidly, and carrying with it many bull-minnows and small white perch which were unable to resist it. Watching the snakes, I saw one after another reach the dam and take their station upon it, submerging themselves all but their heads, which were raised about an inch above the water, and pointed in the direction of the incoming tide. In this position I counted seventeen snakes, arranged in uneven intervals, in a space of less than six feet. I came to the conclusion, at once that they were fishing, and watched them with a good deal of interest. Pretty soon I saw one head strike forward, going under the water, reappearing in a moment with a very large bull-minnow in its mouth. The snake immediately loosened its hold upon the rocks and swam for the shore, reaching which it disappeared in the bushes; and this was repeated at intervals by each of the seventeen snakes. When they returned from the bushes, having made short work of their "catch," each snake sought his own particular location on the rocks, there being no clashing of interests there. Now how is this for reason or instinct? How do these snakes know where to locate themselves, and the particular stage of the tide at which to start on their fishing excursion? How do they know that a number of minnows will be swept over the miniature falls made by the rocks? These are questions that go beyond my comprehension, and I leave them for others to answer. But the facts remain, and any one who will take the trouble may verify them at any time during the summer, by a visit to Gravelly Creek.—Forest and Stream

The sting of the bee is said to be a hollow tube. The male bee is inoffensive, not being provided with this weapon or pointed tube; therefore when one of these insects alights upon a bare footed boy the soliloquy of Hamlet immediately forces itself upon that boy's mind as he anxiously awaits the results. "Tube bee or not tube bee? That's the question."

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 28, 1881.

It is a mark of a great man to be able to stand defeat with composure. They say that Roscoe Conkling prepares his toilet as carefully as before, and that that curl still curls as beautifully as ever.

The death of Judge Nathan Clifford has caused another vacancy on the Supreme bench. It is more than likely that the new appointee will be taken from New England, as that section has no representative on the bench since Judge Clifford's death. But if President Garfield fails to find suitable material there he can fall back upon Ohio. There are a few men in Ohio who are still destitute of an office.

Sitting Bull, in his speech after his surrender, said: "I've made my little boy shake hands on both sides. I want to be free and go about wherever I please and have a waiter." Perhaps John Kelly could be spared from the Tammany wigwam, and if he wants company, let him select My Lord Roscoe. He is also out of business now. With two such distinguished waiters as these, Sitting Bull would make a big card on a lecture tour.

Another week has passed and the country is still wagging along. Lapham has taken the cake at Albany, and Roscoe has gone where the woodbine twineth; the mercury in the thermometer has gone down and the tariff on ice has gone up; Billy, the Kid, has been shot and the people of New Mexico breath easier; Sitting Bull has buried the hatchet and all he asks now is to have a waiter; the wheat boom has busted, and the corner on pork has been smashed; trains are running on the Butler road and the gentlemanly officials of Adrian are still quarreling over the Butler excursion; the comet business flourishes and Vennor still lives. With all these blessings showered upon us, why should we be unhappy?

When Mr. Conkling received a telegram from Albany advising him of his defeat, he immediately sent the following reply:

NEW YORK, July 22.—To the Hon. James Armstrong, Member of the Assembly, Albany: The heroic constancy of the Spartan band which so long has stood for principle and truth has my deepest gratitude and admiration. Borne down by forbidden and abhorrent forces, and agencies which never before had sway in the Republican party, the memory of their courage and manhood will long live in the brightest honor. The near future will vindicate their wisdom and crown them with approval. Please ask them all for me to receive my grateful acknowledgements.

ROSCOE CONKLING.

Mark the prophecy: "The near future will vindicate their wisdom and crown them with approval." There is one thing Roscoe Conkling can do now, anyhow. He can be resigned.

Died at the Capitol building in the city of Albany, on Hangman's day, July 22d, at ten minutes past four in the afternoon, the Stalwart Party. The deceased, only one short year ago, was a very promising child. When the 306 stood out for Grant at Chicago, it showed remarkable vitality for one so young, and although Garfield's nomination gave it an attack of chills and fever, still it soon rallied under the skillful care of Drs. Grant and Conkling. The precocious child has for many months had designs on the White House, and it was claimed by many that the young urchin would yet succeed in entering that citadel by the rear door. The Robertson fever, however, was a severe blow, from the effects of which the patient never fully rallied. It began to mend and the family friends took fresh courage, when the Conkling and Platt relapse seized it, and again the patient was prostrated. It might have still survived had it not been for the combined attack of wood pulp and Laphamism. These were too much, and the patient quietly gave up the ghost.—There were twenty-eight mourners present at the final catastrophe, but My Lord Roscoe was away down on the banks of the Potomac, and he was compelled to send his tears in a handkerchief over the telegraph wires. No autopsy was held, as everybody knew just what ailed the little shaver. An imposing public burial is talked of, to be paid for out of the Bradley fund, but no date for the obsequies has yet been fixed, nor has the officiating clergyman been engaged. The final resting place will be ornamented by a tomb stone with an auburn curl on the front corner, and these words of the poet inscribed thereon: "Let her r— i— p—."

THOSE DEAD-HEAD EXCURSIONS.

The patrons of the Adrian newspapers have probably learned that an excursion train ran over the Butler road a few days since from Detroit to Butler, and a return excursion was given the next week from Adrian to Detroit. These were both dead-head excursions, given in honor of the subscribers to the Butler bonus. Now, dead-head excursions are good things. We never refuse to take in a dead-head excursion straight, whenever the opportunity offers, and we frankly confess that we envy our journalistic neighbors of Adrian, on their recent good fortune in the dead-head excursion line. It seems very appropriate that an important business event like the completion of the "Southern Link" should be celebrated by a celebration. It afforded an opportunity for the business men of Detroit and Adrian to smoke and drink champagne together, to form new business associations, and sow the seed for future business harvests. Our prohibition friends perhaps might object to the champagne part of the program, but even they might be persuaded to stow away their teetotalism in their coat tail pockets just for this once, in the interest of hospitality and future business prosperity.

Both of these dead-head excursions were unqualified successes, at least so far as the dead-head feature extended. Not a man, woman or child on either excursion paid a red cent for fare. That is sure. Whether the peanut and lemonade were furnished gratis we cannot gather from the press reports, as on this important point the reporters are mum. But we take it for granted that they were included in the dead-head program.

And yet these two dead-head excursions, as successful as they appeared to be on the surface, left a bitter taste behind. That dignified body of men known as the "Adrian Common Council" have been turned inside out over the event. An attack of seasickness could not have had a worse effect. It was thought proper that the Adrian Council should serve the champagne to the Detroit Council in a private apartment away from the common rabble. This was a wise forethought. It would spare the feelings of the temperance portion of the company, and enable the officials to drink all the champagne they wanted. But champagne is expensive. Landlords do not keep champagne for dead-head purposes. The champagne had to be paid for. So a subscription paper was circulated for that purpose by a finance committee. The city fathers came down; that seems to be undisputed; but they did not come down in harmony. His honor the Mayor, and his excellency the Marshal, and the rotund Alderman from the Second ward didn't hitch, and out of the multiplicity of counsel from these distinguished councilmen the trouble arose. One of them insisted that upon a great occasion of this kind the Council should wag in genuine dog fashion, commencing with the head and proceeding in a gentle and natural gradation down the spinal column to the caudal appendage. Another insisted on reversing the order of nature by having the tail wag first, while another desired—judging from the program as carried out—that the tail should be chopped short off and thrown out of the window. Such was the trouble on the day of the excursion, and it has been growing no better ever since. We sympathize with the good people of Adrian in their misfortune and would recommend a faithful application of the "Only Lung Pad." This sterling remedy has been often tried and never found wanting, and there is no reason to suppose that it would not have a healing effect in this case. By all means apply the Pad, after dipping it in a solution of that old injunction, "How pleasant it is for brothers to dwell together in unity."

The country was greatly alarmed last Saturday on receiving the news that the President had suffered a serious relapse. About eight o'clock that morning he was attacked with a severe chill, and an hour later a high fever set in, his pulse rising to 130, and temperature to 101. The consulting surgeons, Hamilton and Agnew, were summoned by telegram, and they arrived in Washington on Saturday evening. Sunday morning a consultation was held, and an operation was performed by Dr. Agnew. He found a pus cavity the first trial, from which there was a liberal discharge of pus. The President was greatly relieved by the operation and his symptoms since then have been more favorable. One of the consulting physicians has remained at the White House since Sunday. Tuesday forenoon another operation was performed by Dr. Agnew. He took a piece of shattered rib and several small particles from the wound and the President felt much relieved afterwards. It will be four weeks next Saturday since the assassin's bullet did its work, and the President is not yet out of danger. The gain of two weeks was dissipated in the brief space of two days. Although the attending surgeons speak encouragingly of the final outcome, it is useless to deny that the President's condition is still very critical.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

And Well They May.

Chicago News: The Democrats of New York feel jubilant over their triumph at Albany, and well they may. If they do not hold the Empire State for the next ten years it will be because they have not yet sickened of a blundering and stupid leadership.—They have only to use a little common sense and the pastry is theirs.

Ku-Kluxism in Maine.

New York World: We invite the immediate attention of Senator Frye, of Maine, to the awful condition of that Commonwealth, as indicated by the story to be found in our dispatches to-day of a citizen of Maine whose wife saved him from drowning, and who thereupon fell upon her and beat and cut her with a knife so that her life is despaired of. If Mr. Frye will contemplate this incident in the light of a certain speech delivered by him at the last session of the United States Senate he will clearly see that it calls for the immediate establishment of a provisional government in Maine.

Two Questions Answered.

Detroit Free Press: The question which all Pennsylvania is asking with more or less indignation—Why should not William Penn's bones be removed to that State?—suggests the other query, Why should they? If there must be something under the Penn monument, why cannot casts in plaster be taken of the originals? The custodians would undoubtedly consent; and Pennsylvania's great poet, the immortal and effervescent Childs, could tune his lyre just as effectively under the inspiration of faithful copies as he could if the veritable bones were before him.

The Way They Do It Out West.

New York Tribune: The inhabitants of New Mexico do not stand upon the technicalities of the law in dealing with desperadoes. A certain Mr. McCarthy, formerly of New York, and better known as "Billy the Kid," a promising young man of twenty-one, whose proud boast it was that he had killed a man for every year of his life, has lately been pursued, and shot dead on sight, by a Sheriff near Las Vegas. The coroner's jury which sat on the body thus energetically furnished for its use, rendered a verdict of justifiable homicide, and passed a vote of thanks to the Sheriff for ridding the community of this remarkable young man.

Of Historical Interest.

Albany Argus: When Gen. Arthur was tendered the Vice Presidential nomination, on behalf of the Ohio delegation, by Gov. Dennison, at Chicago, Senator Conkling urged him for half an hour to refuse it, as he already had got Levi P. Morton to do, on the ground that "the ticket would be beaten, and that he should not be dragged down with it." He said:—"The ticket will be beaten if we lose New York; if I take this I'll see New York is carried. I think the success of any Republican preferable to that of any Democrat, and I will accept." This is fact though not before anywhere published. It has historical interest at this time.

A United North and South.

Memphis Avalanche: For the first time since the close of the war, the Northern press expresses the unanimous conviction that the South is restored to loyalty and devotion to the Union. The spontaneity of the Southern outburst of grief on account of the attempted assassination of the President, the depth and sincerity of this manifestation, has taught the people of the North that everywhere the American people are one in sympathy feeling and devotion to the interests of the country. This incident will be likely to do away with the oft-repeated growls of extreme men, North and South. In the hour of the Nation's peril there was no thought of section. The people thought only of the Nation.

About the Right Measure of It.

Philadelphia Times: A man like Lapham is a poor substitute for Roscoe Conkling. He is one of the old wheel-horses, a survivor of the period when Elbridge Gerry was a famous name, who has never risen above respectable mediocrity, and in three terms of Congressional service has not made himself in any way conspicuous. He will never be a boss, but on the other hand he will never disturb the party with any new-fangled notions of the dignity of politics or the responsibility of public service. He is a man of larger knowledge and experience than Miller and has not, so far as known, prostituted his office to personal ends; but except in this negative way he is lamentably unfitted to represent New York in the Senate of the United States. Yet so degrading has been the influence of Conkling's despotic rule upon his party that the election of Miller and Lapham must be accepted as at best a relief from something worse. While Miller and Lapham are an outcome of the boss system, their election proclaims its overthrow, and it may be that out of the chaos there will arise new men and new ideas to lead the party and the State to a higher plane of political thought and action.

The people of Antonio, Col., turned out Friday evening and hanged George C. O'Connor, a justice of the peace, who was in league with a gang of robbers, and who rode through the streets, heavily armed, threatening everybody he saw.

An attempt was made near Lawrence, Kan., on Wednesday night to wreck a passenger train on the Santa Fe road, but a wild freight train was the victim, seven cars being destroyed. The express messenger of the passenger train had $35,000 in the safe.

The president has taken to reading the daily journals, and listens to the telegrams and letters of sympathy which have accumulated since the shooting, in which he takes the deepest interest. He is well enough to laugh heartily at the cuts in the pictorial weeklies.

At Chatham Four Corners, N. Y., a retired officer of the army, Colonel Henry W. Jones, attempted to shoot himself and to cut his throat with fragments of looking-glass. For some time he has had strells of lunacy, and he will now be sent to an asylum.

Six large iron companies of St. Louis have formed a pool representing $10,000,000, and either Elwin Harrison or Charles P. Chouteau will be chosen president. The combination will control 90 per cent. of the iron product of Missouri.

Sheriff Wood, of Sycamore, Ill., was persuaded to take a prisoner named Edward Hardy to the barber's. The jailbird made a dash when the doors were opened, but was recaptured by the sheriff's youngest daughter, who thrust a revolver in his face and forced him to halt.

Governor Smith, of Wisconsin, has sent by special train to Eau Claire the Janesville guards and rifles, the Lake City and Governor's guards of Madison, and the Watertown rifles. One dispatch alludes to lawless acts by striking lumbermen, but the troops are evidently to be used in capturing the Maxwell bandits.

On the charge of conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with the star-route service, Thomas McDevitt and Le Grand Ensign, of Philadelphia, have been held to $5,000 for trial. Their offense was the giving of worthless bonds for contractors.

Warner Miller, the senator-elect from New York, was taken prisoner early in the war at Winchester, Va., and paroled, the system of exchange not having been established. He thereupon accepted an honorable discharge.

The army worm is rapidly extending over the state of Illinois, and in many places farmers are cutting their crops in advance of their ripening. A field of forty acres of oats at Sycamore, Ill., was ravaged in forty-eight hours.

President Garfield is making excellent progress toward recovery. He has lost about thirty pounds since the attempt upon his life. A large force of men is putting the Tallapoosa in order, and it is hoped that the president can take a sea trip by August 15.

Rebuilding has commenced at New Ulm, Minn. Henry Villard has given $1,500 to the relief fund, $1,000 has been raised at Milwaukee, and St. Paul and Minneapolis have pledged $5,000 each. The number of deaths by the cyclone has swollen to thirty-four.

Claude Slyter, editor of a weekly paper at Greentown, Ind., while standing at a desk last month, had every vestige of clothing torn from his body by lightning, and was so paralyzed that he could not move a muscle. He has completely recovered from the stroke.

MRS. ALONZO HENRY, of Lansing, is in town for a few days.

MRS. E. B. FAIRFIELD, JR., with her son Herbert, started yesterday for Lincoln, Nebraska, for a visit of several weeks at Chancellor Fairfield's.

DWIGHT STOCKING, of Indiana, a son of Amos Stocking, was summoned to Tecumseh this week by reason of his father's failing health. He will remain a few days before his return.

THE Tecumseh Orange Lodge will give their annual festival and dance at the Opera House on Friday evening, Aug. 12, 1881. A supper has been arranged to be followed by a social hop. All are invited, and a good time may be expected.

SUPT. FAIRFIELD'S brother, E. M. Fairfield, of Omaha, Nebraska, with a friend, E. F. Parmelee, of Reading, Mich., were visiting in Tecumseh last week. They came from Reading with a Canadian pony and an English dog-cart, arousing a good deal of curiosity on the way.

THE GREAT WHEAT FIELDS.

People traveling to the North-West, will be gratified at learning that the "Great Rock Island Route" opens a new line from Chicago to Minneapolis and St. Paul, July 17th, running two through daily trains, leaving Chicago at 12:05 and 9:30 P.M. This new line is to be known as the "Albert Lea Route," and passes through the very best sections of the States of Illinois, Iowa and Minnesota, offording travelers a view of the great harvest fields of our country, and a section peopled by the most progressive and prosperous of our Northwestern inhabitants.

We understand that round trip excursion tickets to points in the great wheat region of the Red River of the North, and Missouri River Valleys, will be immediately put on sale, good for 40 days from date of issue. This will enable Eastern farmers to visit the greatest wheat country on the globe, and see harvesting done on the most gigantic scale.

Surely, no one that really desires to see the West, will forego this opportunity to do so, by ticketing over any other than the "Albert Lea Route," via West Liberty. The Great Rock Island Depot is the most central of any in Chicago, being in the very heart of the city, close to the great hotels, postoffice, and leading mercantile houses.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

THE foundation walls of the new wheelbarrow factory in Adrian are completed.

THERE will be a bowery dance at the Lake Ridge hotel on the evening of August 5th.

S. H. NIBLACK is home again from a six weeks' trip in the Saginaw Valley. The salt regions seem to agree with him.

COL. FITZSIMMONS has been appointed as one of the Board to select the companies which are to go to Yorktown.

SIX months ago poor sidewalks were the "rule", in this village; now they are the "exception." Thanks to our city fathers.

SIMEON OLIVER, of Ridgeway, had 311 bushels of wheat from 13¼ acres of land, an average of 23 bushels per acre. A pretty good yield for this year.

CASS MIDLER, editor of the Howell Republican spent last Sabbath among his friends in Macon. He came out last Friday on business connected with his father's estate.

ATTENTION is invited to the advertisement in another column of well-boring and rock-drilling machinery. This is one of the largest machinery houses in the west, and orders sent to them will receive prompt attention.

MRS. A. S. FULLER, president of the board of control of the reform school for girls, has issued official notification that the institution will be ready for the reception of girls that should be sent there after the 1st of August.

PEOPLE greatly admire our new HERALD sign. The letter is a new style but very tasty. It is needless to say that the painting and writing were both executed by J. L. Trann, who seems to be doing most of the sign writing now in Tecumseh.

PROF. J. L. CUPPLES has been employed for another year as principal of the Galesburg schools. He has filled the position for two years with good acceptance, and was invited by the School Board to remain another year. Another Tecumseh boy making his mark.

READ the advertisement in another column of the Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R. This is the great pleasure route of Michigan, running the entire length of the State, north and south, and terminating at Grand Traverse and Petoskey. It is called "The Fishing Line."

W. V. FISK has lately bought of Port Smith the trotter "Pedro." He is seven years old past, and has trotted, without any training, in 2:36 and has made half a mile in 1:16. Mr. Fisk claims he is the fastest horse in this county, and he expects to bring him down to 2:20 within three months.

OUR locals are mostly personals now and these have a wonderfu. sameness about them. Mr. Brown and family have gone to Sand Lake for a few days. Miss Jones has left town for a few weeks' sojourn at Petoskey. Mr. Smith and wife departed yesterday for Montreal, Quebec and the White Mountains.

THERE were 773 births in Lenawee county last year and 400 deaths. The county officials still complain that several clergymen who officiate at weddings, fail to report the marriages to the county clerk as the law directs, and have decided to make an example of the first dilatory official against whom they can establish a case.

NEW wheat comes in this week.

EZRA has some new gold spectacles.

COL. CURTIS leaves for Washington on Friday to resume his official duties in the Treasury Department. His little work on wheat culture is having an extended sale, the first edition of 5,000 copies having been nearly all sold. We presume the readers of the HERALD would be glad to hear from the Colonel occasionally.

Deerfield Record: George Aiken arrived home Tuesday, from Oakwood, Ind. George met with an accident on the 11th, at the above named place, and has returned home to recuperate. He was on a wagon when the team attached ran away, and in going down an embankment, he was thrown off and badly bruised, receiving a severe scalp wound and other injuries.

C. R. HENRY, ESQ., of Au Sable, the whilom correspondent of the HERALD from Macon, is recruiting a few days at his old home. Mr. Henry went to Au Sable about three years ago and began the practice of law.—He has succeeded beyond his best expectations and last fall was elected Prosecuting Attorney of Iosco county. We rejoice to hear of his prosperity.

Adrian Times: When the line of the Michigan Southern road was being surveyed three young men came to this city from New York state to work as surveyors on the line. They were Henry Hart, Henry Waldron and Elbridge G. Lapham. The two former remained in the state, and have passed over to the majority.—The latter was yesterday elected U. S. senator for New York.

Sterling, the secretary, prior to September 13th. Morenci Observer: Last Saturday afternoon John Holt essayed to take an excursion and explore the mysteries of the Hereafter, on the blue vitriol route; but an excessive 'dose' and medical attention switched him off, and he is now side-tracked as an earthly sojourner still. A sadly wasteful career of dissipation, family trouble, etc., it is supposed, had their consummation in the desperate desire to "shuffle off this mortal coil."

Morenci Observer: Last Saturday our ancient neighbor who was taken to Pontiac several weeks ago and placed behind the bars for an alleged complicity with the monetary part of the noted Andrews' case, was released from his unpleasant confinement, and returned to his romantic home on the banks of the murmuring Bean, in Medina, the authorities being unable to show any criminal collusion in the case. It is supposed to be Chester's turn now to make a little enquiry why he was incarcerated so long on such flimsy charges.

Morenci Observer: The young fellow Daniel McGraw, who was arrested on a charge of furnishing intoxicating liquor contrary to the statute, was brought from the Adrian jail on Monday and given a trial before Esq. Killin and a jury. The prosecuting attorney's assistant, Henry C. Smith, represented "the people's" side, and that of the defendant had as counsel the new attorney, Joseph Patterson, assisted by ex-esquire Davis. It was made to appear that the only liquid supplied or drank was nothing stronger(?) than Birch beer, a harmless combination of wind and water; and the jury declared a verdict of 'not guilty.'

Some folks can't get land; others find it easy enough. Thus, some three years ago, a man and his wife in Minnesota became divorced. Then each pre-empted a homestead, and made a second claim, under the tree-planting act; the man of course, doing the necessary work. They took care that their claims should join, and when their title was secure, they commenced joint housekeeping again. The neighbors however, threatened to bring their living together to the notice of the courts, and so they were re-married. But their object, to get a good big farm was attained just the same. Young man "go west," and do likewise, as far as you are able.

WALLACE PETERS returned to Cleveland last Saturday.

THE railroad war on passenger rates is a good thing for the public. At latest accounts tickets from New York to Chicago were sold for $7.50.

Not quite, neighbor. The local editor has had his'n sand-papered; that's all.

CALVIN STEVENS, Floyd Bostwick, Erv. Kennedy, Delos Whitenack, Jim Jones, John Freeman. Ed. Merritt and Ad. Burton took in the ball game at Detroit last Friday.

MR. CYRUS SAVIERS, of Franklin was found dead in his chair last Monday. We have been unable to interview any of the family friends to ascertain the full particulars.

"Mrs. Topnoody," sadly remarked Mr. T., after an agitated scene, "you are not what I thought you were in the happy days of youth."

"Oh, I ain't, ain't I?

"No, you are not. I thought you were an angel, and now—and now—"

"And now," broke in Mrs. T., "and now angels ain't in the habit of slingin' pots and dish-rags around, and spanking babies, and sewing on buttons, and wrestling with kitchen stoves, and making mustard plasters for husbands with colic, bossing hired girls, and doing the cooking for a big family, besides going to church and being married to Topnoody all the time. No, Topnoody, angels ain't in the habit of doing such things, and its a mighty good thing they ain't or the angel business wouldn't last till the middle of next week."

Topnoody did not follow the conversation further, but put on his hat and went down street to wonder how many women were angels.

The Popular Science Monthly for August.

The August "Popular Science Monthly" well maintains its standard of excellence. The first article by Professor Huxley, on "The Herring," might more properly be entitled "The Romance of the Herring," so curious and entertaining is the story of its nature and habits when told by a naturalist who is at the same time a man of genius. Those who have read and admired the pungent papers of Dr. Oswald on "Physical education" have a treat before them in the present article on "Recreation." So intelligent and impressive a statement of its needs, importance, and general neglect, and the evils that follow from the lack of due recreation, and so scathing and terrible a denunciation of that asceticism in society which still finds its religious apologists, we never have seen. Dr. Fairchild continues his popular physiological articles, and this month takes up the subject of "The Blood and its Circulation," throughout the animal series. "The Teachings of Modern Spectroscopy," by Dr. Arthur Schuster, is a most able restatement of the marvelous results of spectroscopic discovery. "The Origin and History of Life Insurance," by Theodore Wehle, is remarkably lucid and instructive. The departments are full and varied, and the number is one of unusual attractiveness. New York: D. Appleton & Co. Fifty cents per number, $5 per year.

THE TECUMSEH KNITTING WORKS.

A new business industry has been started here this summer which bids fair to develop into a nice business. H. E. Stout & Co. is the firm interested and the Tecumseh Knitting Works is the business to which we refer. Two or three months ago Mr. Stout bought a knitting machine and a small invoice of stocking yarn and went to work. He commenced on a small and safe basis, intending to give the business a thorough trial before investing any large sum of money in it. The enterprise has been quietly and safely growing ever since and is now in a healthy and promising condition. All sizes of children's hose and gentleman's socks are manufactured, which are sold at wholesale only. Our merchants who have tested their goods pronounce them fully equal to any others in the market. The company expect soon to place a man on the road to sell their goods, and they will then be able to sell larger quantities and increase their facilities. We see no reason why this enterprise should not be made a success, and knowing the mechanical ability and stick-to-a-tiveness of the men who are engaged in it, we believe it will develop into a thriving business.

AUGUST WEATHER.

Vennor, who occasionally hits the mark, announces the following weather for the remainder of July and the month of August:

JULY.

29. Cool and showery.
30-31. Warmer and high winds and rain storms.

AUGUST.

1. Probably warm and oppressive.

THE BATTALION FOR YORKTOWN.

The following general orders issued by Gen. Withington, establish the method for selecting the companies to go to Yorktown:

HEADQUARTERS FIRST BRIGADE,
MICHIGAN STATE TROOPS,
JACKSON, July 25, 1881.

General Orders, No. 3.

In pursuance to General Orders, No. 10, Military Department, the following named officers are hereby detailed as a Board of Officers to determine and designate the companies which shall form the battalion to represent the State Troops of Michigan at Yorktown:

Col. I. C. Smith, Second Regiment; Col. W. C. Fitzsimmons, First Regiment; Col. C. S. Brown, Third Reg't.

The board will be furnished with a transcript of the records of drills, attendance, etc., of each company, and will establish its own standards of absolute and comparative proficiency.

Applications not already made may be forwarded to these headquarters through the proper channels within the prescribed time.

Opportunity will be given the companies to review their action upon a circular from Department Headquarters, dated July 11, 1881, and to yet enter the list for competition. The General Commanding hopes that a reconsideration of the matter will abate the ill-feeling, which seems to have been engendered in some quarters.

The Military Department is not responsible for the limits of the appropriation, and fully believed that the desire to make up a battalion of respectable numbers would be shared in by the State troops themselves. This belief has been sustained in large measure. The General Commanding now hopes that State pride and spirit of common fellowship in the service will prompt all to say: "Better six companies than four from Michigan;" that the companies will enter, regardless of their financial ability, and that any company which can present forty men to pass the approval of the Board of Officers will be sent on its way with "glad and gallant tread," backed by company or local aid sufficient to meet any demand upon their purses. It will be the effort of the Department and of these Headquarters to make that demand as light as possible.

By command of

BRIG. GEN. W. H. WITHINGTON.

Dauchy & Co.'s New Offices.

The newspaper advertising agency of Dauchy & Co., having outgrown the limits of the office at the corner of Fulton and Church streets, has been removed to No. 27 Park Place, corner of Church street, where the firm occupies a floor extending through the block to Nos. 24 and 26 Murray street, a space about 50 by 200 feet. About 50 feet of the Park Place front is petitioned off for the counting room and private office. Beyond, the walls are covered from floor to ceiling with pigeon holes for files of newspapers, and on one side of the room are a number of alcoves, furnishing places for about 8,000 files. The Murray street front is given up to the Shipping Department. Messrs. Dauchy & Co. being also manufacturers and dealers in printers' supplies.—New York World.

Adrian Times: The amount of standing pine in Michigan a year ago was not more than thirty-five billion of feet, and, as six billions of feet were cut out last winter, the present supply is not more than twenty-nine billions of feet. The lower Michigan peninsula, a year ago, had about twenty-nine billions of feet, and the upper Michigan peninsula some six billions. At the ordinary rate of cutting, the Michigan forests will be pretty well used up in eight years more. The State of Wisconsin contains, it is estimated, upward of forty-one billion feet of standing pine, while Minnesota has about six billion, one hundred and fifty millions. In both of these States the supply is fast disappearing, and it will not be many years before the west must call on the great Pacific slope which has an enormous lumber supply.

Ypsilanti Sentinel: The citizens of Detroit are criticising that wonderful and fearful work, the "Soldier's Monument." The objection now is that the "hens," or eagles, sit below while the figures meant for human are above. Perhaps the artist was afraid the birds if perched above, would be always dropping something on the figures below. At least that is what "the boys" would be likely to say, if the figures were reversed.

THE Pontiac Bill Poster furnishes the following free of cost: "How to get sun-struck: Walk a few miles or work in the hot sun till you are nearly roasted and perspiring freely. Then get in the shade where there is a big draft of air, remove surplus clothing, such as coat and vest, take off your collar and neck gear and indulge in a big drink of ice water."

The most dangerous of all colds are those contracted in spring. Do not trust to summer to wear it out. Use Arthur's Elixir of Sulphur thoroughly and it will do the work and leave no foundation for Consumption. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

THE third of the series of lectures on Romanism will be delivered at the Baptist church next Sunday evening. Subject: "Romanism drunk with the blood of the Saints."

Wonders of The Ocean.

THE FROZEN SEA.

Whatever opinions may be entertained as to the existence of an open sea around the North Pole, it is agreed on all hands that there is a Polar Frozen Sea. In both the northern and southern high latitudes it has been found that there is a certain limit beyond which the progress of ships is barred by an impenetrable fence of ice. What is beyond it is more or less matter of speculation. Concerning the Frozen Sea of the Arctic regions, much more is known than has been ascertained about the Frozen Sea in the Antarctic circle; many more expeditions have been sent out to examine the nature of the sea around the North Pole than have ventured to the South, but it would appear that the latter is, of the two, the more impervious. Ocean surveyors, from the time of Cook to the time of Ross and Penny, have been unanimous in reporting that there is no indication of a break anywhere along the southern barrier. Their ships sailed for many degrees along the outer face of an icy wall, of which the first shelf was as high as their mainyard. Above and beyond the shelf, as far as the assisted sight could reach, there was nothing but solid ice, save in some few places, where what looked like land was joined on to and backed the frozen fringe. Mile after mile, day after day, the ships sailed on coastwise, keeping a pretty straight line of latitude, watching narrowly for an opening in the hard ice cliff. Not an opening even presented itself. And the results of discovery in the Antarctic regions have been to to show that land, probably in continental proportions, does exist beyond the ice in some parts.

The frozen condition of the Arctic Ocean is a fact within the experience of every whaler, though the question of the extent to which the sea is frozen remains unsettled. At a degree of latitude which varies with the season of the year, the progress of ships northward is barred by a barrier of frozen water. During the summer months, when occasionally the thermometer will register a heat equal to the mean temperature of the tropics, and such life as there is in the Arctic circle wakes up and renews its lease, the zone of the north is loosened, the outer edge of the belt cracks and splits into vast mountains of ice which, becoming detached, get under way and start for the south. From the end of May they are to be met with in the North Atlantic, sailing majestically and dangerously towards those warmer regions of which the temperature is reduced and invigorated by their icy presence. The question is whether there is any general break up of the Frozen Sea, whether in the more northerly parts the pack ice ever becomes loose ice, and again whether, supposing it does not become loose, the pack ice drifts bodily southward as it has been suggested it does. Ships that have been nipped by the ice and have been surprised by winter in the north, report that during their captivity they have been carried many degrees to the southward by the drift of the pack in which they were inclosed. Lieutenant De Haven, of the American navy, when in command of the United States expedition after Sir John Franklin, was frozen up for nine months, at the beginning of which time he was in mid-channel in Wellington Straits, and at the end he found himself 1,000 miles to the southward. H. M. S. Resolute, which was abandoned by Captain Kellet in the ice, remained in the cold embrace of the ice nip for several years, but in the end was borne south till the temperature burst her bonds and she was recaptured and sent home unharmed. These instances only prove that the particular portion of the Frozen Sea in which the ships were bound became loose, though there is good reason to think that the entire belt of ice about the North Pole does in ordinarily warm summers become detached, new ice being formed on the extreme northerly limit of the sea as soon as winter returns, in order to replace what has been during the summer pushed away to the southward.

If we may credit the great amount of evidence which has been adduced, we should adopt the general belief of Arctic explorers, that beyond the Frozen Sea there is a large open sea, free from ice, which extends for several degrees all round the Pole. Dr. Kane, in one of his search expeditions, crossed a barrier of ice a hundred miles broad, of which the northern boundary was reached in the eighty-third degree of north latitude. There he found an open sea extending in an unbroken sheet of water as far as the eye could reach towards the Pole, the waves broke upon the shore, and there was a tidal variation in the height of the water, the temperature of which was four degrees above freezing. Whether this sea was only temporarily free from ice or whether it is always open is a question yet to be solved. Explorers who have penetrated far to the northward of Dr. Kane's position have reported the whole place ice-bound, with apparently an unmoving, fast-anchored ice-pack stretching away to the north.

The Smoker.

The smoker who is wedded to the habit cannot readily understand why every one else does not like the odor. But the fact is patent that the scent of tobacco is not only disagreeable to some persons but absolutely poisonous. It does not mend the matter to say this is mere prejudice or weakness. You have no right to make others uncomfortable for your own satisfaction. No gentleman will thrust himself in close proximity to ladies with his coat saturated with stale smoke. No gentleman will pass through a car carrying a lighted cigar in his hand, and leaving a trail of offensive smoke behind him. No gentleman will get in a stage carrying a smouldering stump in his hand, and keep it there until it smolders out and emits a more hideous stench than before. No gentleman will puff out his costly smoke on the platform of the horse car, when the passengers inside cannot escape some portions of the fumes. But you can find "men" doing these things every day in the week.

The Japanese Umbrella.

We have accepted the Japanese sunshade, parasol and umbrella. We have been skirmishing a long time around Japanese art, modifying it occasionally to suit our views, and spoiling it thereby—but it has taken some four years at least, before this Japanese object, adapted to protect us against rain and sunshine, has been adopted by us. Even the regular venders of such wares now expose for sale along side of their silk, muslin, and iron complications the simple paper and bamboo umbrella. Its cheapness is its greatest merit. But one great excellence the Japanese umbrella has is that it is harmless. The American and European machine comes at the extremity to a sharp point, armed with a ferule. Innumerable have been the eyes put out by this dangerous weapon, tucked under the arms of careless persons. As the Japanese umbrella terminates in a round knob, injuries to the person will diminish from this day. There are some conveniences about the regular Japanese umbrella when it rains, which are not to be overlooked. Being covered with a waterproof substance, the water runs off it. You do not have to carry a reeking thing which distills water like an alembic for an hour afterward. And as to the material in the umbrella, it being paper, two good rainstorms reduce it to pulp. When a good gust of wind comes, instead of its turning inside out, in the ludicrous manner of the ultra-civilized umbrella, there is with the Japanese a slight crackling of the sticks, and a splintering, and then all that is left in the hand is the stick. Of course, in Japan, where a very fair umbrella can be bought for about two cents, if shops are handy on a good stormy day, a man can use a half dozen of them and not be ruined. For fair weather, however, the Oriental parasol for a lady is admirable.

Characteristics of Animals.

All animals are neat by habit—even the hog, which has been unjustly esteemed the very type of filth. We can think of no animal that does not look neat when in its free normal condition. Even the toad that makes its house in the dirt, when he comes forth from his hiding place, looks as slick as a new pin, and not a particle of dirt sticks to the eel, though he plows in the mud for a living. The woodchuck burrows in the sandhill, and, though he has no washbowl, towel, comb or brush, who ever saw one dirty or with hair disheveled? The whole feathered creation are as careful of their personal appearance and as nice and tidy in their dress as a bride. It is only in their domestic, abnormal condition that the inferior animals look filthy and are filthy; and here it is not their fault, but their misfortune. They are under the dominion of man, subject to his mercy, which sometimes is cruelty, and too seldom is considerate kindness.

Better than Quinine. Few constitutions can stand the continuous use of quinine. It is not only a very expensive medicine, but will ultimately cause the patient to succumb to its powerful influence upon the nervous system. But if you want to get rid of Malaria and all Fevers of that nature use the Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters. The whole treatment for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

A VAST INCREASE.—In 1849, when gold was discovered in California, there was not between the Missouri River and the Pacific Ocean, or from Manitoba to Sonora, over 25,000 persons of Caucasian stock, and not 3,000, all told, speaking English as the tongue of their nativity. Now there are 3,000,000 persons in the same area; there are ten thousand miles of railroad and nearly twice that of telegraph lines; there is a property value of at least $3,000,000,000, six prosperous states and nine territories, growing in wealth and population, now producing in the precious metals at least $85,000,000 annually and also embracing the three largest wheat-growing states in the Union.

Where doctors have failed to cure, and have given their patients up to die, Electric Bitters have often been used, and a cure effected, greatly to the astonishment of all. Diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs are positively cured by Electric Bitters. They invariably cure Constipation, Headache and all Bilious Attacks. Try them and be convinced that they are the best medicine ever used. Sold by C.A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents a bottle.

CURE FOR SLEEPLESSNESS.—Wet half a towel, apply it to the back of the neck, pressing it upward toward the base of the brain, and fasten the dry half of the towel over so as to prevent the too rapid exhalation. The effect is prompt and charming, cooling the brain and inducing calmer, sweeter sleep than any narcotic. Warm water may be used, though most persons will prefer it cold. To those suffering from over excitement of the brain, whether the result of brainwork or pressing anxiety, this simple remedy is an especial boon.

"Forced by my political connections into public life, my sufferings were intensified by the comments of those who saw my face and head covered with scrofulous humor," said a gentleman recently cured by Cuticura Remedies.

The Cyclopaedia War.

The month of July, 1881, witnesses the completion of the largest and most important literary work this country and the century have seen. It is the Library of Universal Knowledge, large type edition, in 15 large octavo volumes, containing 10 per cent more matter than Appleton's Cyclopædia, at less than one-fifth its cost, and 20 per cent more than Johnson's Cyclopædia, at a little more than one-fourth its cost.

Chambers's Encyclopædia, which forms the basis of the Library of Universal Knowledge (the last London edition of 1880 being reprinted verbatim as a portion of its contents), is the laborious product of the ripest British and European scholarship. It has developed through a century of Cyclopædia making; its various editions having been many times revised, in successive years, till it has come to be universally recognized, by those competent to judge, as standing at the very front of great aggregations of knowledge, and better adapted than any other Cyclopædia for popular use. It contains such full and important information as the ordinary reader, or the careful student, is likely to seek upon about 25,000 subjects in every department of human knowledge. Chambers's Encyclopædia, however, is a foreign production, edited and published for a foreign market, and could not be expected to give as much prominence to American topics as American readers might desire. To supply this and other deficiencies a large corps of American editors and writers have added important articles upon about 15,000 topics, covering the entire field of human knowledge, bringing the whole number of titles under one alphabetical arrangement to about 40,000. Thus the work is thoroughly Americanized, and the Library of Universal Knowledge becomes at once the latest and most complete Encyclopædia in the field, at a mere fraction of the cost of any similar work which has preceded it.

Victory For The Revolution

Price of the 15 volumes, complete, in extra cloth binding, $15.00. In half Russia, sprinkled edges, $20.00. In half Russia, gilt top, $22.50. In full library sheep, marbled edges, $25.00.

The superlative value and importance of this great Encyclopædia lies especially in the fact that it is brought within the reach of every one who aspires after knowledge and culture. It is really a library of universal knowledge. It brings a liberal education easily within the reach even of every plowboy of the country and apprentice boy of the city. Every farmer and every mechanic in the land owes it to himself and to his children that such a Cyclopædia shall henceforward form a part of the outfit of his home. To the professional man, and every person of intelligence in every walk of life, a Cyclopædia is a necessity.

Of course the old and wealthy publishers who have grown rich (it is said that the Appletons have made a profit of nearly two million dollars on their Cyclopædia) from the sale of their high-priced publications are not pleased that their monopolies are broken and their power overthrown. Of course the book agents and booksellers who have been used to getting from 40 to 60 per cent commission for selling these high-priced books are not so well pleased to sell the Library of Universal Knowledge on 15 per cent commission, though those who are not short-sighted discover that their own interests, after all, are identical with the interests of the people, and their real profits, in the end, are increased, by the immense sales which result from meeting the people's wants. The majority of booksellers, however, are better pleased to plunder than to sell this and our numerous other standard and incomparably low-priced publications. But the Literary Revolution has always looked to the people, in whose interests it is, for its patronage, and it has never looked in vain, as our more than one million volumes printed last year (this year being increased to probably more than two millions) abundantly prove. You can order the Cyclopædia directly from us, and by uniting with your neighbors and friends you can secure club rates as follows:

$10,000 Reward To Club Agents.

A discount of 10 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering at one time three or more sets of the Cyclopædia; and a discount of 15 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering five or more sets at one time.

As a special inducement to our friends and patrons to go to work promptly and vigorously, each doing what he can for the dissemination of universal knowledge, we propose to distribute $10,000 in special premiums as follows, in addition to the regular discount to clubs:

$5,000 Reward to be distributed equally among the first 500 club agents who send us clubs of not less than five subscribers, after June 15th and before September 1st.

$5,000 Reward In addition to the first $5,000 to be distributed among the 500 club agents who, during the same time, send us the largest number of subscribers, not less than twenty in number, the amount to be distributed proportionately to the whole number of subscribers which each of the 100 club agents may send us.

The names of the subscribers must in every case be forwarded to us. The first $5,000 named will be distributed as specified as rapidly as the orders are received, and the remaining $5,000 will be distributed promptly on Sept. 1st. The names of the persons receiving these rewards will be printed, with the amounts received by each, and the list sent to all the club agents entering into competition for them. Subscribers must be actual purchasers for individual use, to entitle the club agent to the rewards under this offer, and not booksellers or agents who buy to sell again.

Persons desiring to raise clubs may send to us at once for sample volumes, if they desire, in the various styles of binding, paying us 75 cents for the volume in cloth, $1.00 for the volume in half Russia, sprinkled edges, and $1.25 for the volume in library sheep. Orders for the full sets will be filled by us with the utmost promptness, within our ability to manufacture, beginning not later than July 15th, orders being filled in the order of their receipt by us.

Its main line runs from Chicago to Council Bluffs, passing through Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Geneseo, Moline, Rock Island, Davenport, West Liberty, Iowa City, Marengo, Brooklyn, Grinnell, Des Moines (the capital of Iowa), Stuart, Atlantic, and Avoca: with branches from Bureau Junction to Peoria; Wilton Junction to Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Eldon, Belknap, Centreville, Princeton, Trenton, Gallatin, Cameron, Leavenworth, Atchison, and Kansas City; Washington to Sigourney, Oskaloosa, and Knoxville; Keokuk to Farmington, Bonaparte, Bentonsport, Independence, Edon, Ottumwa, Eddyville, Oskaloosa, Pella, Monroe, and Des Moines; Mt. This is positively the only Railroad, which owns, and operates a through line from Chicago into the State of Kansas.

Through Express Passenger Trains, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, are run each way daily between CHICAGO and PEORIA, KANSAS CITY, COUNCIL BLUFFS, LEAVENWORTH and ATCHISON. Through cars are also run between Milwaukee and Kansas City, via the "Milwaukee and Rock Island Short Line."

What will please you most will be the pleasure of enjoying your meals, while passing over the beautiful prairies of Illinois and Iowa, in one of our magnificent Dining Cars that accompany all Through Express Trains. You get an entire meal, as good as is served in any first-class hotel, for seventy-five cents.

Appreciating the fact that a majority of the people prefer separate apartments for different purposes (and the immense passenger business of this line warranting it), we are pleased to announce that this Company runs Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars for sleeping purposes, and Palace Dining Cars for eating purposes only. One other great feature of our Palace Cars is a SMOKING SALOON where you can enjoy your "Havana" at all hours of the day.

Magnificent Iron Bridges span the Mississippi and Missouri rivers at all points crossed by this line, and transfers are avoided at Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Leavenworth and Atchison, connections being made in Union Depots.

Mr. C. had quite a tussle with him, catching him by the head, tried to get him down between the logs, and finally did so, as the deer's foothold on the logs was not as good as Mr. C.'s; he pulled him out and cut his throat. It was a very fine one and in good condition.

The months come and go and still the Jackson city fathers cannot decide which paper shall be their official organ. Meanwhile both papers publish as news all their official doings the public cares a rap for, and the city is just as well off.

The Kalamazoo Light Guard also vigorously kick against the project of giving their time, and paying their own expenses in order to escort David H. Jerome, Philo Parsons and a few others to Yorktown. The kick is very vigorous all along the line.

A six-year-old son of Albert True, at Dalton, got up in his sleep Saturday night and walked out of a window in the second story of the house. He fell a distance of 15 feet or over, and, although very much frightened, strange to say he was unhurt.

The Battle Creek Journal reports a grumbling among the Chicago and Grand Trunk employes, which it says, may eventuate in a strike. The Journal says: "They claim to have been cut down in wages, and at the same time that the divisions are so lengthened that the men are overworked. Several absolutely refused to go out as conductors on Sunday night and Monday morning trains, which necessitated the "setting up" of three brakemen to conductor's positions in order to keep the rolling stock moving advantageously."

Kalamazoo Telegraph: The army worm is ravaging near Centerville. A gentleman told us that he drove through an army of them as they were crossing the road to attack a field of oats. It was forty rods through the column and he didn't know how long it was. The farmers were trying to protect their fields by plowing ditches about them, into which the worms fall, and if the dirt was dry they couldn't crawl out. We tried to induce our informant to make some change or discount in his story, but he was incorrigible. This army was marching toward Mendon where it will probably rendezvous.

The Bay City Call publishes as a fact, for which it vouches, the statement that on Tuesday morning Ida May, daughter of Ed. E. Miller, barber at the corner of Hamilton and Franklin streets, Saginaw City, was relieved of a live lizard five inches in length and at least an inch in circumference at the largest point. It was black on the back, with a fine longitudinal stripe of white on each side; belly a sort of snaky white. It had four legs, with sprawling claws, head like a snake, and was, altogether, about as repulsive a reptile as ever took posession of a human habitation. The Call says it is now at Madill's drug store preserved in alcohol. The child is not quite 2 years old.

J. A. Baily, one of the proprietors of the Barnum show, ran away from home when about 15 years old and joined J. A. Baily's circus, and his history is a strange and romantic one. He dropped his own name of McGinnis and took up his patrons name. He is the youngest brother of Mrs. Henry Gordon, of Detroit, and when in that city two weeks ago, informed his sister that he had $570,000, and that he was making a clear $500 a day with the show and that he intended this to be his last season. The late Kern McGinnis, a well known Detroiter, some years ago, was also his brother. Mr. Baily, (or Mr. McGinnis as he will hereafter be known, having decided to resume his family name) is thirty-four years old.

English Marriage Statistics.

Every marriage is registered when it happens, and the date opens the marriage entry. The names and surnames of the couple married occupy the next column. Then follow their ages. The statistics of ages in reference to marriage is important, and a precise statement of the years of persons wedded is much desired in all cases.

But some bridegrooms—and many brides—object or are unable to say how old they are; while the clergy, it appears, often omit to make exact inquiry on the point. The registers, however, improve in this respect.

In 1858 the percentage of entries in which the precise ages of both parties married were not given approached 41; in 1877 it had come down to 22. The description "of full age" or "minor" is always used when the exact age is not ascertained. We may mention that from the year 1848 there was a growing tendency towards early marriage until 1874, after which year, the proportional number of persons married under age began to decline.

In 1877, out of 194,852 couples married, 14,759 bridegrooms and 42,795 brides—or about a twelfth of the former and a fifth of the latter—were under age. The condition (that is, whether that of bachelorhood or otherwise) follows the age in a marriage entry. The statistical tables framed from the registers on ages and conditions combined are of great interest.

The next succeeding space in the register book belongs to rank or profession; the next to residence; and the last two columns are filled with the names and occupations of the fathers of the couple.

Every marriage entry must, of course, be signed by the persons married. We will pause a moment to notice the valuable information as to the progress of elementary education which is gained by a regular enumeration of the signatures by mark affixed to the registers. It is satisfactory to learn that the marksmen and marks-women are diminishing.

Of 388,704 persons married in 1877, 70,237 signed the register by mark; 29,707 of the number being men and 40,530 being women. These figures look formidable, but they represent amelioration.

Some quarter of a century earlier the proportion of those who did not write their names to those married was about double that expressed. On the part of the women improvement has been more rapid than on that of the men, though, as the numbers show, the male sex is still much the better educated of the two.

A Romantic Story.

From Port Jervis, New York, we have a romantic story, which, but for the religious aspect of it, would be a comedy plot. Some time ago a daughter of pious parents in that village, on learning that her lover was a skeptic, broke off her engagement in a tear-stained letter, after vainly attempting to convert him. He was, deeply grieved, but could not give up his convictions. The lady mourned and tried in vain to see some other way out of the trouble. Shortly after, however, her lover, who had gone to live in a distant city, was induced to attend a revival, was converted and united with the church. He subsequently asked permission to call on his former lady love, which was granted, she received him with many marks of favor, expressing her regret at having treated him so harshly. To her great surprise he defended her against herself, said she was in the right, and that he had come to look at these things in the same light she did. Her heart sank. She told him that his former arguments had had great weight with her; that she had studied and reviewed the whole subject, and had at last discarded the Bible and revealed religion. It was his turn to be shocked. He argued and pleaded with her, but all in vain, and feeling that he could not marry an unbeliever, reluctantly gave her up.

A surgeon in the German army calls the attention of all who have to do with horses to the danger of using the pocket handkerchief to wipe away any foam from the mouth or nose of a horse which may have been thrown upon their clothes. Some months ago, the writer states, an officer came to him suffering from an obstinate cold and cough. The usual remedies were prescribed, but in vain; a visit to the baths at Reichenhall also did the patient no good. Returning to duty, he officer became worse; fever, attended with great pain in and swelling of the head, set in, and ultimately, after much suffering, he died with every symptom of glanders. Inquiries were set on foot, and it was found that some time before he was taken ill he had ordered a horse which he believed was suffering from glanders to be shot. Neither the groom nor any of the other soldiers who had been near the horse have been attacked by glanders, and consequently it is suspected that the officer who died may have conveyed the disease into his system by perhaps using his handkerchief to wipe some of the foam from the mouth or nose of the horse from his uniform.

Parted Lovers.

They were very fond of each other, and had been engaged; but they quarreled, and were too proud to make it up.

He called a few days ago at her father's house to see the old gentleman, on business, of course. She was at the door.

Said he: "Ah, Miss Blank, I believe; is your father in?"

"No, sir," she replied; "pa is out at present. Did you wish to see him personally?"

"Yes," was the bluff response, feeling that she was yielding, "on very particular personal business," and he turned proudly to go away.

"I beg your pardon," she called after him, as he struck the lower step, "but who shall I say called?"

He never smiled again.

A French novel devotes considerable space to American life, assuring its readers that in the states west of the Mississippi the ladies of the highest fashion retire to the Rocky mountains to hunt grizzly bears, and that they proudly adorn themselves with necklaces of the claws of these animals as trophies of their prowess. It also informs its readers that Ohio girls ride wild horses, wear high boots and hunt rattlesnakes, while the heiresses in Minnesota work in the harvest fields.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

CATTLE DISEASE.

Acting Secretary of the Treasury French has directed Dr. E. M. Thayer, of Massachusetts, of the Treasury Cattle Commission, to proceed at once to Nova Scotia to investigate the reports received from Consuls at Halifax and Pictou, that a dangerous cattle disease has broken out in that Province.

THE DEPARTMENT BUREAUS.

The committee inquiring into the arrangement and efficiency of the several bureaus of the postoffice department will report the bureaus thoroughly efficient, but will suggest some changes of duties of a number of clerks and the transfer of others to promote even greater efficiency.

EXPORTS OF PROVISIONS, ETC.

During the month of June, 1881, the United States exports of provisions, tallow, and dairy products aggregated in $8,761,700, against $14,310,347 for June, 1880. The total for the months ended June 30 was $71,156,900 against $80,[illegible] for the corresponding months of 1880.

THE OFFICE-SEEKING BRIGADE.

The terrible strain to which the President and members of the Cabinet have been subjected by office-seekers will probably lead to the adoption of some rules, to which candidates for office will be required to conform, and which will do away with the bore of personal importunities for place. Since March 4, the President and Secretary Blaine have been constantly harassed by place hunters, in the case of the Secretary of State to such an extent that he has been compelled to transact official business at his house instead of at the department.

THE MISSING BULLET.

Corkhill states that he has no reason to doubt the story told by the German glazier in regard to finding the missing bullet. The glazier says he was going to work at the depot, and had begun to unstrap his box in which he carried glass, and had got one strap off his shoulder when he heard the noise of a pistol, and immediately three panes of glass in his box were shattered. He at once rushed from the depot, thinking it was no place for safety. On Saturday last he was cleaning out his box, and found the ball in the party, as he was narrating the fact to friends. One of them told him that was the time the President was shot, and brought him to the District Attorney's office, where he made his statement, and gave up the ball. The bullet which is now in possession of the District Attorney is similar to those taken from Guiteau's pistol. The point is blunted, and one side flattened.

ROSCOE CONKLING'S SUCCESSOR.

Edward Gerry Lapham is 67 years of age, and throughout his political life, until this last Senatorial fight, has been a friend and supporter of the Conkling wing of his party. After having received a common-school education, he served as a civil engineer on the Michigan Southern Railway. In 1844, after having studied law, he was admitted to the bar. He made himself somewhat distinguished as a jury lawyer. In 1867 he was a member of the constitutional convention. He became a member of the 44th Congress from the 27th District, and has been regularly returned ever since. From the very beginning of the present New York Senatorial contest Lapham has been a candidate.

APPROACHING SELF-SUSTENANCE.

Postmaster General James is awaiting forward with great interest to the close of the fiscal year, as the figures now being made up show that the department is already taking long steps toward the much-to-be-desired point of becoming self-sustaining. The receipts for the fiscal year will not show very much improvement over that of last year, because the department has only been under its present management during four months of the year. The cutting down in expedited star routes has been made only after careful examination. The result has been that, with the exception of pay allowed for the curtailment of these expenditures, the savings made will not make much difference in the reports of the receipts and expenditures of the fiscal year. Another item of increased expenditures over that of last year is in the pay of the railway mail service. Under the readjustment of the pay of this service, owing to the increase of business, the railways will be increased $750,000 over what was paid last year. The receipts for this year are not at all in, but from reports and careful estimates Gen. Hazen, the third assistant postmaster general, who has charge of this class of reports, thinks that the receipts will foot up $36,425,886.51, against $33,315,479.31 last year. The deficiency last year was $2,700,000, this year it will be in the neighborhood of $2,500,000. In the next fiscal year, with the abolition of extravagant expenditures, it is thought that the receipts and expenditures will be brought closely together. In one instance is a single route cut down without a careful examination by special agents, to ascertain the needs of the people interested. Nothing has been taken off that is not so apparently needless as to be no more nor less than robbery. When the department reaches a clear balance-sheet Gen. James will come out and advocate a letter postage of 2 cents.

GUITEAU.

Prison fare and discipline have taken much of the starch out of Guiteau, and have even had a willing effect upon his inordinate vanity. When first confined he made frequent complaints of his treatment. He regarded himself as an important personage, a prisoner of state, and demanded better care than was bestowed on his fellow-prisoners, whom he denominated common felons.

He protested against being put on a level with other prisoners, said he was a gentleman, accustomed to having the best of fare, and, in fact, to luxury, and he insisted that he should be so treated. His demands were often made in an insulting manner, and usually ignored. He is fond of writing about himself, and consumes every scrap of paper he can get in this way. He has not ceased to complain and to demand better treatment, but his manner is changed. He is more subdued, and apparently begins to realize that others do not regard his critics in the light that he does. The other day he complained that he did not get coffee enough. The warden allowed him two cups at a meal, while the other prisoners got only one. This concession seemed to revive his spirit of self-importance, and he forthwith began to put on airs again. Then his extra allowance of coffee was cut off, whereupon he wrote a long letter to the warden, couched in offensive language, and telling that officer that he was not fit to have charge of a man of such importance as Guiteau. The warden paid no attention to the letter, except to determine not to allow Guiteau another favor, but to confine him to the most rigorous prison treatment. None of the guards are allowed to speak to Guiteau. The warden and his deputy and the District attorney and his assistant are the only persons who are permitted to exchange any words with the prisoner. When it is necessary for one of these officials to see Guiteau he is brought into the warden's office, locked inside with the official, and a guard stationed at the door. Guiteau has analyzed all this foppishness. At first, in jail, he was careful with his toilet, but now he comes into the warden's room, when sent for, sometimes only half dressed. One time he appeared with only his shirt and pants on, and his pants rolled up, and the last time he had on nothing but his pants. He has never been changed from one cell to another, as is reported. He is in the cell he was first put in. Corkhill's order to put him in solitary confinement and shut him off from the sight of others has not been complied with as the jail has too many prisoners to admit of this. Besides the warden considers Guiteau's present mode of confinement about as solitary as can well be in a jail so full of prisoners. Guiteau has no desire to escape. He knows the danger he would incur outside from popular indignation. He first heard that the president was getting well from the talk of the guards. He had been brought to the warden's room to wait for the District attorney and while sitting there one of the guards remarked to another that the president would recover. To the warden and his deputy, Guiteau makes remarks going to show that he anticipates a big sensational trial, which will make him a central figure.

HERALD OFFICE.

SCIENTIFIC ADVANCEMENT.

At a time when all are noting the remarkable development of this country, it is cause for congratulation that the literary and scientific institutions of the land are keeping pace with its material growth. This truth is being confirmed every day, and the erection of the new Astronomical Observatory at Rochester, N. Y., is a most important step in this direction. Prof. Swift, who has become known throughout the world as the fortunate discoverer of so many comets, has labored under great disadvantages in his work, owing to a lack of proper facilities. The new Observatory will entirely overcome these troubles, as the telescope which is to be mounted in its dome is the third largest in size of any in America. But however valuable all future discoveries may be, the astronomers of this country have accomplished many wonderful things in the past. Prof. Hall, of the Washington Observatory, discovered the two moons which accompany Mars; one of the grandest achievements of the present century; Prof. Bond discovered the eighth satellite of Saturn in 1848 and the transparent ring of Saturn in 1850. The separation of Biella's comet into two parts was first seen by American astronomers, and during the eclipse of 1878, Profs. Watson and Swift discovered three intra-mercurial planets. In addition to these great discoveries the United States claims the honor of finding more than a thousand double and triple stars (many of them being the largest of this class of bodies) over fifty asteroids and fifteen new comets. When it is remembered that most of this work was done with inferior instruments and in a country where storms and clouds are so prevalent the industry and perseverance of our American astronomers can be partially understood.

The new Observatory at Rochester is to be devoted primarily to discoveries. Its arrangement and facilities are specially designed for this purpose and much may reasonably be expected from it. It is named after Mr. H. H. Warner, proprietor of the Safe Kidney and Liver Cure and other remedies, by whom it has been most liberally endowed and its locality is one of the most commanding in Rochester. The new telescope will be twenty-two feet in length and its lens is sixteen inches in diameter, while the dome of the tower will be arranged with the latest appliances for thoroughly sweeping the heavens in every direction.

While America is so greatly distinguished by its inventions and remarkable enterprises there is much to indicate that it will take an equally high rank in the realm of discoveries and it may also be predicted with a reasonable degree of certainty that astronomy will eventually find its highest advancement at the hands of American investigators and that a goodly portion of this work may be expected from the new Warner Observatory.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

BROOKLYN.

It is sometimes as nice to know that accidents have not happened, as that they have, and almost my only excuse for troubling the printer this week is to let the folks know that the inhabitants of this region have conducted themselves properly and suffer no spiritual or pecuniary harm by our railroad being annexed to the southern confederacy.

The only disconsolate people here are the clergy, and they need not be if they would close the front window-blinds and play they were not at home, or go off to Roscommon and make absence a reality, instead of wasting eloquence on the sleepy few who go to church because they are ashamed not to. To-day I am sure I felt, and looked too, like a clothes-pin stuck in the middle of a half acre, and the scattered heads above the pew railings were poor imitations of Jack-in-a-box, because they entirely lacked the wide-awake expression of that individual. These long summer days that make existence as much happiness as any one of us can manage, bring fidget and discontent to ministers. Precisely at this time of the year, they arrive at the conclusion that six days of the week are so freighted with business cares that we either bridge the seventh with sleep, or worse yet, run off to some lake to find rest in amusement, and may be read a Doctor Bliss epistle. The way they take on about our over attention to work and such, and utter neglect of all means of grace, is, I trust, a caution to my neighbors. The truth is, these gentlemen are just as tired out, as impatient under the weight of additional cares, and just as far out of their reckoning as the rest of us, or they would never attempt to force a growth of piety, like they would radishes in a hot bed. Why dont they clear out and patch their worn out patience with the rest they need, and that any humane community would be glad to give them. In good time our sunshine dreaminess would develop spiritual need. It is positive sinfulness for ministers to shut their eyes and shun the quiet of August woods, and they ought to be ashamed to be skirmishing round every Sunday disturbing lazy self complacency.

The other night while returning from a Clark's lake pic-nic, Minnie Reynolds had a neuralgia spasm of the heart that was no benefit to herself or friends. Elder Lyon organized a rapid transit company in no time, and Doctor Jones helped her back to consciousness, but does not advocate jolting rides as a remedy for heart disease. She is better just now and the senior Reynolds of the firm predicts that hereafter when the young lady goes to pic-nics she will stay at home.

PEARLIE.

CLINTON.

Quite a number of our citizens are on the sick list.

Ed. Coffin has been sick, but is at work again this week.

Caroline Cary has been sojourning here for a short time, but this week returns to Dowagiac.

Mrs. Frank Muir and daughter are in Minnesota among relatives, enjoying the sweets of country life.

Dr. Leslie Goodrich, son of George Goodrich of this place, was brought here last Friday for burial. He came from Corunna where he was a practitioner. He was 30 years of age, studied medicine with Dr. A. W. Alvord, was twice married, and lived with the second wife only eight months.

D. H. Silvers and Henry Chandler have both been dangerously ill, but are much better at present.

There was a runaway last Sabbath, but the owner of the horse and buggy is so reticent about the affair that your correspondent can get no particulars, except that the horse was pretty well bruised on the inside of the leg, and the buggy somewhat demoralized.

Our quota of misfortunes visited us Monday of this week in the capacity of a hail storm. It commenced about 3 o'clock P. M., and continued 30 minutes, 20 of which it hailed. The focus of the storm was directly through the eastern portion of the town; as far as the factory scarce any hail fell. In the local track of the storm, gardens look as though they had been run through a sausage grinder. Shrubery is denuded of leaves, garden truck ruined, grapes pelted off until the ground is literally covered. During that 30 minutes, 2¼ inches of water fell. The storm approached us from the Northwest.

COMMON COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH, MICH.,
Council Room, Aug. 1, 1881.

Regular session.

Present the entire Council except Burridge and Heesen.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

The Street Commissioner filed his report showing that the work done on the streets from July 4 to Aug. 1, 1881, was 84½ days of hand labor and 65½ of team labor.

NEW BUSINESS.

O. W. Bean made application for the purchase of the water pipe on hand owned by the corporation.

The committee on Fire and Fire limits were instructed to sell the same to Mr. Bean at a price not less than was paid for it.

The attention of the Committee on Public Health was called to the fact that diphtheria has made its appearance in this village, and that every necessary precaution should be taken to prevent its spreading.

Wallace E. Gray having signified his willingness to serve the corporation in the same capacity and for the same compensation as during the past year, it was on motion,

Resolved, That this council retain the services of Mr. Wallace Gray for the ensuing year on the same terms as during the year just past; and that an appropriation of $400 be made for the payment of Mr. Gray. Such payment to be made in equal monthly installments.

Resolutions were passed at this meeting of Council ordering the construction of a sidewalk within 10 days from this date, on the east side of land owned by Mrs. Yawger on Van Buren street, and on the North side of land owned by Miss Estabrook on Logan street.

Council then adjourned.

P. S. McKINNON, Recorder.

Adrian Times: Hudson papers contain an account of a shooting scrape which occured in that place Wednesday night. About half past 9 o'clock two shots were heard in the house of a man named Cooley, and presently the man's daughter rushed out screaming that her father had been shot. It was ascertained that Cooley had been thrashing his daughter for walking to the depot the night before with a young man, when the girl's brother Will drew a revolver and shot at Cooley twice, both balls striking him in the head, but glancing without doing serious injury. The young man had nothing but his shirt on, and appeared unconcerned, though a number of ladies had congregated. He was persuaded to dress, when he and his father were taken to jail. The young man is said to be weak-minded, and the whole family bear a hard reputation.

Adrian Times: Monday morning while at work in the barn of Comfort Rogers, in Raisin, lifting hay from the ground to the hay loft with a pulley hay fork, Frank Boosinger, a young boy, about twelve years of age, who works for Mr. Rogers, had both his hands caught in the implement in some way and lacerated in a terrible manner. The thumb and two fingers of his right hand were torn almost to tatters, necessitating the amputation of the thumb. The left hand was torn badly, but not as severely as the right. Dr. Steyenson and his assistant Dr. Cleveland rendered the requisite surgical aid.

Adrian Record: The new wholesale furniture factory of B. S. Barnes, on Michigan street is so far completed that by the close of this week it will be ready for occupancy. Mr. Barnes will take possession on Monday next. The building is a fine three story brick, handsomely and substantially built. It will be used entirely for cabinet work, and no machinery other than benches and tools will be put in. The machine work of preparing material will be done as formerly, at the mills of Comstock Bros., near by on Division street.

Morenci Observer: The cheese factories in this vicinity are shrinking a little, as usual, at this season, in the daily production, still the amount manufactured is a very important item in the industry of the country. The Rorick factory is making 10 per day, Horton 22, Hayward 10, Baker's two factories 40, Peleg Lee's two factories 32, Eagle of Lyons 26, and B. Davis & Co.'s factories 30 per day.—The present quotations are 9c. to 9½c. per lb. according to amount of order.

The only absolute specific we know of for sneezing, snuffing and choking catarrh or head colds is Sanford's Radical Cure, which for the small sum of $1 affords instant relief and invariably cures.—Medical Times.

If you desire rosy cheeks and a fair complexion, purify the blood by the use of Baxter's Mandrake Bitters.

A GREAT ENCYCLOPÆDIA.

Heretofore such a valuable and magnificent compendium of knowledge has been inaccessible to ordinary people, on account of extremely high cost. This, the largest encyclopædia ever published in this country, in large type, excellently printed and bound, can be secured at the trifling cost of $15, and even beyond this, liberal discounts are allowed to clubs of three, five, ten or more persons, and during the months of July and August $10,000 special reward is offered to club agents. It is well worth while sending at once to the publishers for specimen pages and particulars. See also their advertisement elsewhere. American Book Exchange, Publishers, New York. A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

Bad Drainage.

The criminal carelessness or wilful neglect of builders in erecting houses with imperfect plumbing and bad drainage is a fruitful source of disease, and thousands are carried off annually with Malaria or Typhoid Fevers from this cause. The Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters will cure these diseases. The whole treatment for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

Clinton News: We were shown, a few days since, a handful of a new variety of oats, raised by the Van Gieson brothers. George Van Gieson sent for the seed to the Agricultural Department, at Washington, three years ago, and from the few quarts of seed thus obtained, he will have over a hundred bushels this year. The oats are very large, and it is claimed that they will yield at least ten bushels more to the acre than the varieties generally raised here.

THE MATERNAL SHINGLE.

When the angry passions gath'ring in my mother's face I see,
And she leads me in the bed-room—gently lays me on her knee—
Then I know that I will catch it, and my flesh in fancy itches
As I listen to the patter of the shingle on my breeches.

Every tinkle of the shingle has an echo and a sting,
And a thousand burning fancies into active being spring;
And a thousand bees and hornets 'neath my coat-tail seem to swarm
As I listen to the patter of the shingle, oh, so warm.

In a spatter comes my father—whom I supposed had gone—
To survey the situation, and tell her to lay it on;
To see her bending o'er me as I listen to the strain
Played by her and by the shingle, in a wild and weird refrain.

In a sudden intermission, which appears my only chance,
I say: "Strike gently, mother, or you'll spoil my Sunday pants!"
She stops a moment; draws her breath, the shingle holds aloft,
And says: "I had not thought of that—my son, just take them off."

Holy Moses! and the angels, cast thy pitying aspect down!
And thou, oh! family doctor, put a good soft poultice on:
And may I with fools and dunces everlastingly commingle,
If I ever say another word when my mother wields the shingle.

BLOWN AWAY.

There were three of them—Kitty, Mary and little Tommy—the children of the station-master at Black River Junction, on the Great Southwestern Railroad. The station stood alone on the open prairie, miles and miles from anywhere in particular. Black River flowed through the mountains, a hundred miles away to the north; and on clear days, the snowy mountains could be seen glimmering on the grassy horizon. The line leading to the Black River met the Southwestern here, and thus it was the place was called Black River Junction.

The station-master and his wife and three children lived in the little depot quite happily, but there was not another family within ten miles, in any direction.

At times the children thought it rather lonely. There was nothing in particular to be done, except to watch the trains that stopped at the junction several times a day. Once in a while, a freight-car would be left on the side track, and the children soon found that an empty freight-car makes a capital play-house. They could keep house in the corners and make visits, or sit by the open door and make believe they are having a ride.

One morning they were awakened by a curious humming sound out of doors, and they all scrambled up and looked out of the window. How the wind did blow! It whistled and roared round the house and played on the telegraph wires upon the roof as upon a huge harp.

As the wires were fastened to the roof, the house became a great music-box, with the children inside. After breakfast the morning trains arrived, but the wind was so high that the passengers were glad to hurry from one train to another as quickly as possible. Then the trains went away, and the great wind-harp on the roof sang louder than ever.

The station-master said it blew a gale, and that the children must stay in the house, lest they be blown away into the prairie and be lost. The station-master's wife said it was a pity the children must stay in the house all day. There was an empty freight-car on the side-track; perhaps they might play in that. The station-master thought this a good idea, and he took Kitty by the hand and Tommy in his arms, while Mary took hold of his coat, and they all went out to the empty car. Whew! How it did blow! They certainly thought they would be lifted up by the wind and blown into the sky. The empty car was warm and snug, and, once inside, they were quite out of the way of the wind.

Mary thought the rear end would be a good place to keep house, but Tommy preferred the other end, so they agreed to keep house at both ends of the empty car. This was a nice plan for it gave them a chance to visit each other, and the open part by the door made a grand promenade to walk on.

Louder and louder roared the gale. Safe and snug in the car, they went on with their play and thought nothing of the weather outside.

Suddenly the car seemed to shake, and they stopped in their housekeeping and ran to the door to see what had happened.

"Why, it's moving! Somebody's pushing it," said Mary.

"They are taking us away on the freight-train. Come, we must get out."

"I didn't hear the whistle," said Tommy. "I guess something is pushing the car."

The girls leaned out of the door to see what had happened. Why, where was the platform? It was moving away. No, it was the car. It had left the siding and had rolled out upon the main line and was moving faster and faster along the road.

"Oh, we must get out! They are taking us away."

"No, no," said Kitty. "We must stay here till the brakeman comes round. I didn't hear them when they took us on the train."

"There ain't any train," said Tommy, looking up and down the line.

"Oh, it's the wind! It's blowing the car away. We must put on the brakes and stop it."

This was a good plan, but how were they to carry it out? The brake-wheel was on top of the car, and they were inside. Faster and faster rolled the car. It began to rattle and roar as if dragged along by a swift engine. In a moment, Tommy began to cry. Mary tried to look brave, and Kitty stared hard at the level prairie flying past. It was of no use. They all broke down together and had a hearty cry alone in the empty car as it rolled on and on before the gale.

The station-master, feeling sure the children were safe in the freight-car, sat in his office nearly all the morning. At

The station-master's wife rolled up her sleeves to put the house in order while the children were safely out of the way. last, the beds were made, the dinner put on the fire, and the mother wondered how the little girls were getting along in their play-house on the track. She threw a shawl over her head and went out on the platform. At once, the wind blew the shawl over her face, and she could not see exactly where she stood. Turning her back to the wind she began to call the children. How loudly the wind roared through the telegraph wires! Perhaps they could not hear in all this din. May be they were inside the car out of hearing. She walked on toward the siding. Not a thing to be seen! She wondered if there had not been a mistake? Perhaps the car was on the other side track? No, the rails were unoccupied as far as she could see in every direction. What did it mean? What had happened? She staggered back into the station and, startled her husband with a cry of despair.

"The car! The children!"

The station-master ran out upon the platform and looked up and down the line. Not a car in sight! It had been blown away before the terrible wind, and was perhaps at this instant rolling swiftly onward with its precious load to destruction. What would happen to it? Would it meet a train or run into a station? Would the children try to get out, or would they stay in the car till it was wrecked?

He sprang to the door of the depot to telegraph the terrible news down the line, but just as he opened the door he saw a faint white cloud on the western horizon. It was a train. Help was coming. At the same instant his wife appeared with new grief and terror in her eyes.

"I cannot get a call in either direction. The wires are blown down."

This only added to the danger, for there was now no means of sending word in advance of the runaway car. It must go on to its fate without help or warning.

Nearer and nearer came the train, and the father and mother stood watching it as it crept along the rails. It seemed as if it would never come. At last it reached the platform and proved to be a passenger train bound up the Black River Road and not intended to go in the direction in which the car had been blown away. The instant it stopped, the station-master ran to the engineer and told his terrible story. The mother, with quicker wit, found the conductor and demanded that the engine be taken off and sent after the children.

The conductor was a man of regular habits, and such a bold request struck him as something extraordinary. Take the engine off, and leave the train and passengers waiting at this lonely station? The idea was preposterous! Some of the passengers gathered near and asked what was the matter.

Three children lost, blown away in an empty car. Some one said, "Yes, go at once. We can wait till the engine returns." The conductor said he must telegraph for instructions; but some one said, "The wires are down," and the people only cried out the more, "Let the engine go!" so the mother ran to the tender and began to pull out the pin, that the engine might start.

"Hold on, marm," said a brakeman. "I'll cast her off. You jump aboard if you want to go too. Fire up, Jack, and make her hum."

It was all done in a moment, and away flew the engine, leaving the conductor and the station-master staring in surprise at this singular proceeding. The station-master did not feel very happy. He had half intended to go with the engine, but it would never do to leave his post.

"Fire steady, Jack," said the engineer to the fireman. "It's no use to get excited, for we're in for a long race."

"It's enough to make a fellow excited to see that woman," said the fireman.

The engineer turned round, and there by his side stood the mother, her eyes straining ahead down the line in search of the missing ones.

"Oh, sir! open the throttle wide. Don't try to save coal at such a time as this."

"We must keep cool, marm, and go steady, or we shall run out of coal and water and come to a stand-still on the line."

The woman said not a word, but nodded mournfully and leaned against the side of the cab for support, and then the fireman gave her his seat, where she could look out ahead over the line. How the engine shook and roared! The little finger of the steam-gauge trembled and rose higher and higher as the steam pressure increased over the raging fire.

The engine seemed to be eating up the track in front, and behind the rails spun out like shining ribbons in the sun. The station and train had already sunk out of sight, and the grassy horizon on either side seemed to fly away in a kind of gigantic waltz. The wind died away to a dead calm, and in a few moments a little breeze sprang up and blew in at the front windows.

"We are beating the wind," said the engineer. "If we can keep this pace up we shall soon overtake them."

"How long have they been gone?" shouted the fireman above the roar of the engine.

"I don't know," screamed the woman, without taking her eyes from the horizon, where the rails met the sky. "It may have been two hours or more. They were playing in the empty car."

"How did she get out of the siding?" (He meant the car.)

Ah! something ahead. Was it the runaway car? No the next station. What a terrible pace! Twenty miles already!

"Oh, don't stop!" cried the woman, as she saw the engineer put his hand on the throttle-valve.

I must, marm. We are getting out of water, and perhaps we can learn something of the runaway."

The sudden arrival of a solitary engine, containing two men and a woman, startled the station-master, and he came out to see what it meant. He seemed to guess at the truth, for he said:

"After the runaway car?"

"Yes, yes. There were three children inside."

"Oh, Marm, I'm sorry for ye. It went past here, going twenty miles an hour. It came down-grade all the way, but the up-grade begins about two miles out. I was inside when it passed, and didn't see it till it had gone past the door."

How long it took to fill the tender! The engine stood hot and smoking by the water-tank, and the water came out in a slender stream, while the poor mother stood loooking on, tearful and impatient.

"Good-bye! I'll put up the pipe. Heaven help ye!—the up-grade—"

The rest was lost, for the engine shot ahead, on and on out over the open prairie. The water-tank seemed to sink down into the earth, and the shining rails stretched longer and longer out behind.

Ah! What was that? A cloud of steam on the horizon, far ahead. The engineer took out his time-book and studied it carefully.

"Freight No. 6., bound west, stopping on the two-mile siding."

How swiftly Freight No. 6 rose above the grass and grew big along the way! Listen! A whistle. The engineer whistled in reply and shut off steam. Their engine quickly slowed down, and they could see men leaning out from the other engine, as if to speak to them.

"It's ten minutes back. Running slow on main-line—road—clear—"

"Thank Heaven!" said the woman. The engineer said nothing; but at that instant the engine gave a great leap and shot ahead, at the rate of fifty miles an hour, up the easy grade. How long the minutes seemed, and yet each meant almost a mile!

Ah! A speck—a black dot on the horizon! The car? Yes. It was the car. It grew bigger and bigger. Now they could see it plainly. But the children! Where were they? The fireman sprang out through the forward window, and ran along the engine and down upon the cow-catcher. The monster began to slacken its terrible pace, and in a moment it struck the car with a gentle jar and stopped.

The fireman thought himself a lively man, but the woman was before him and sprang up into the car.

There they lay, safe and sound, in the corner of the car—Mary and Tommy fast asleep, and Kitty watching over them.

"Oh! mother! I knew you would come. Mary and Tommy cried themselves to sleep, and I—I."

Nobody could say a word. The fireman tried to rub his eyes, and only marked his face with black streaks. The mother laughed and cried all at once. The engineer picked up the little ones and quietly took them into the cab of the engine.

"There, now, my hearties, you have had a risky ride; but it's all right! Come! We're more than thirty miles from home, and it won't do to be late to dinner. Fire up, Jack."

"Aye, aye, sir," said Jack.—St. Nicholas.

"You Old Scoundrel!"

It was in a Pullman "sleeper" between Albany and Buffalo.

Among the passengers was a middle-aged couple evidently on their first journey, and a sour-faced old maid, desiccated in aspect, who was traveling alone.

The couple had an upper berth, and the ancient maiden lady the upper berth in the adjoining section.

In the same car were a couple of gay youths, ready for any sort of mischief.

Bed-time came, and all hands retired. But the husband could not sleep. It was probably because of the novelty of his situation. Try as he would, slumber would not visit his eyelids.

At length it occurred to him that he was thirsty, and the more he thought of it, the more thirsty he got.

So he called the porter, who brought a ladder and helped him down.

Now, while he was gone for water, one of the "boys" stepped out of bed and shifted the ladder so that it rested up against the berth in which the ancient maiden was sleeping, and then returned to his berth to note the result.

In a short time the thirsty man returned and crept quietly up the steps, anxious to make as little noise as posible, so as not to awaken his wife.

The occupant of the berth thus rudely intruded upon awoke with a start, and screamed.

The husband, supposing it to be his easily frightened wife, tried to reassure her, and said: "It's only me!"

"Only you, you old scoundrel!" said the venerable maiden. "I'll teach you a lesson!" And with that she seized him by his remaining locks, and screamed as only a woman can.

Then he howled with pain.

His wife, awakened by the noise, discovered where her husband was, and raised her voice in lamentation, heaping reproaches upon her faithless spouse.

The passengers all got up and demanded an explanation of the commotion, and foremost among them was the bad boy who caused it all.

Then the husband, covered with confusion, (otherwise lightly attired,) and utterly unable to account for what he had done, climbed down and slunk away to bed, where he was soundly lectured for his unfaithfulness.—Boston Transcript.

Curing Bad-Tempered Horses.

The stable-boy told me a year or so ago that my horse had got to acting very ugly when he drove him out of the carriage-house; prancing, jumping, backing, and cutting up generally. On taking the reins myself the next time he was harnessed, I found that this was indeed the case. I had some difficulty in getting into the street without knocking the carriage to pieces against the gate-posts, and when we got there there, was quite a circus exhibited before we behaved ourselves.

I took a night to meditate upon the difficulty, for it seemed to me a pretty serious one, as I had known many horses to fall into a vicious habit of that kind and never get out of it. The next day when he was put to the carriage I carried out an apple and gave him, and while he was enjoying it I got into the buggy and took up the lines, and he walked out of the barn as quietly as a kitten. For more than six months afterward he never showed the slightest return of his rebellious behavior, thinking no doubt, every time he was harnessed, of that delicious apple, though the luxury of bribery had not been once repeated. But, a few weeks ago, the lad who takes care of him told me that Bobtail (so called becasuse his tail sweeps the ground) was getting into his tantrums again; I told Phil to give him a potato the next time he took him out, apples being out of market. This worked an equally sudden cure which lasts until the present writing. Now, I deem, as Gen. Jackson used to say, that this same treatment will cure balkiness also, as well as any other bad habit of a horse that grows out of vexation of mind. The mental constitution of this animal, and his moral constitution too, are much like that of a child. Now you can never beat anger out of the bosom of your children, but rather does every blow make it hotter; neither can you argue it out; but a stick of candy will do it, or any other indulgence to which the patient is not accustomed.

Poverty is the burden of some, and wealth is the load of others—perhaps the greater load of the two. It may weigh its bearers to perdition. Bear part of the load of thy neighbor's poverty, and let him bear with thee the load of thy wealth. Thou lightenest thy load by lifting his.

Duty is a short word, but it covers a a vast space. If you doubt the assertion, try to do it faithfully, and you will become convinced.

Corns and Their Treatment.

Corns may be developed on any part of the body where pressure and friction exist to an inordinate degree: thus, they may be occasioned by too tight or too loose a shoe; in the one case being due to pressure, in the other to friction; and they are most actively produced when both causes are combined. They are met with most frequently on the feet, on account of the unpliant nature of the coverings of those organs: between the toes from pressure only and on all parts of the body from distortion. Corns are of four kinds, viz.: clavus (bunion) callus, soft, and the common corn. The callus may be softened by moisture, as by soaking in warm water; by the application of a starch or soap poultice; and being softened, the thickened cuticle may be thinned by scraping, with a blant knife. When the thickening has been reduced sufficiently, it may be kept down by daily washing with soap. Clavus and the soft corn require removal with a knife; and in effecting this purpose their mode of formation is to be borne in mind. If the soft corn be of moderate size, a single pinch with a pair of pointed scissors will effect its removal, while the hard callus will require a patient digging with the point of a not too sharp knife. After the operation, the corn should be covered with a piece of soap plaster for a day or two, and a perforated plaster of buff leather subsequently worn to keep off pressure from the center of growth. The removal of a callus or soft corn may be very considerably aided by the use of the compound tincture of iodine painted on the swelling. When the corn is painful, this application subdues its sensibility and renders the cuticle dry and friable, and easy of removal by means of a file. Soap and water, so useful to the skin in many ways, are especially serviceable to feet afflicted with corns, and especially soft corns. Daily washing with soap and the subsequent interposition of a piece of cotton wool between the toes, may be considered as a cure for soft corns; and in these cases the skin may be hardened by sponging with spirits of camphor after the washing. The cotton wool should be removed at night, and this is a good time for the use of camphorated spirit.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

Sage Cheese.—Pound fresh sage leaves in a mortar, to obtain the juice, and mix it withe milk while warm, after the rennet is put in. Spinach juice is an improvement.

Ramequins.—Take two eggs, two spoonfuls of flour, two ounces of melted butter, and two of grated cheese. Mix all well together, and bake in molds or tart-pans for a quarter of an hour.

Fried Ramequins.—Grate half a pound of cheese, and melt two ounces of butter; when the butter is cool, mix it up with the cheese and the whites of three eggs well beaten. Lay buttered paper on a frying-pan, put slices of bread upon it, and lay the cheese on the top; set it on the fire for about five minutes, then take it off and brown it with salamander.

A Delicious Johnny-Cake.—Take two cups of corn meal, one of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, one well-beaten egg, half a cup of molasses, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, or one cup of sour milk, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of saleratus; stir well together until about the consistency of griddle-cakes, adding the saleratus the first thing. Then bake in a hot oven until nicely browned.

Baked Indian Pudding.—Sift a pint of Indian meal, and scald it with boiling water. Place over the fire a quart of milk, cut up a quarter of pound of butter, and melt it in the hot milk; add a pint of sugar-house molasses, and mix them together until the milk boils. Stir it into the meal, mixing it well with a wooden spoon. Beat seven eggs until they are perfectly light, pour them into the bowl that holds the meal, with ten drops of essence of lemon, or a little lemon juice. Stir the mixture until it seems quite light, and bake it in a moderately hot oven.

Chicken Jelly.—Cut a chicken up into very small pieces, bruise the bones, and put the whole into a stone jar with a cover that will make it water-tight. Set the jar in a large kettle of boiling water, and keep it boiling for four hours. Then strain off the liquid, and season it a little with salt, pepper and mace, or with loaf sugar and lemon juice, according to the taste of the person for whom it is intended. Return the fragments of the chicken to the jar, and set it again in a kettle of boiling water. You will find that you can collect nearly as much jelly by the second boiling. This jelly can be made from an old fowl.

Doing up Lace Curtains.—It is very difficult to do them up so they will not look stiff; but a writer thinks she has solved the mistery:

Before you do up these curtains, be sure you have a good supply of pins. If the curtains are new, soak awhile to take out the starch before putting them into the suds. Wash and boil, suds and rinse. Starch in thin boiled starch, [to get the water all out] and then in very thick boiled starch, which should be deeply blued. Now take as many sheets as you have curtains, and stretch and pin them to a carpet in a room as free from dust as possible; then pin the curtains to the sheet [stretching them to their former size]. The pins in the curtains should not be more than three inches apart. When dry, they are ready to hang up, and if they don't look more like new than ironed ones, I will give up.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure makes a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and vigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

MEMORY'S PEARLS.

Down deep in the ocean of time
Lie many of memory's pearls;
And when held to our view they outshine
Those owned by the lords and earls.

A glance at their beauty and grace,
When we are most weary and sad,
Will oft lend a charm to life's race,
And keep the heart cheerful and glad.

It may be the days of our childhood
Have furnished the pearls we love best—
Hours that we spent in the wildwood,
The days that were happy and blest.

It may be a friend of our youth
Was a pearl we thought of great price,
Adorned with the beauty of truth,
In whom we found much good advice.

It may be the father, the mother,
That was ever a pearl most rare;
It may be a sister or brother
Who helped us life's burden to bear.

Then weave me a beautiful chain
Of the pearls most precious to all,
And close round my heart be it lain
Till the angel of Death shall call.

Animal Sagacity.

REMARKABLE INSTINCT OF THE MARTIN.

For some years the writer his occupied a cottage near Esher. Under the trellised porch was a martin's nest, which was repaired every season for at least three years, and from which a brood of four or five young birds took their flight year by year. The porch was covered with zinc, and the nest was built against the wall, close against the angle formed by the slanting sides of the roof. One morning, before the brood was hatched, one of the old birds was found in the porch dead, owing probably to the unusual heat of the sun shining upon the zinc covering, which was only a few inches above the nest. Opposite the porch, and separated from it by the width of the garden walk, was an arch of wire covered with roses and honeysuckles. About eleven o'clock on the morning of the day when the bird had been found dead, the writer's attention was attracted by an unusual twittering, and looking towards the porch, he observed a martin, which he presumed to be the male bird, flying in and out of the porch on to the arch, and evidently endeavouring to coax another bird into his snug quarters. After a while the second martin took several short flights, and dived under the porch along with her companion, who twittered and flew round her in a state of the greatest excitement. This continued for about half an hour, until the stranger took possession of the nest, where she finally hatched the brood.

A POINTER'S CONTEMPT.

In proof of the dislike a pointer will show to a bad shot, Mr. Jesse adduces the following anecdote, given on reliable authority. A gentleman, on his requesting the loan of a pointer dog from a friend, was informed by him that the dog would behave very well so long as he could kill his birds; but if he frequently missed fire, it would run home and leave him. The dog was sent, and the following day was fixed for trial; but, unfortunately, his master was a remarkably bad shot. Bird after bird rose and was fired at, but still pursued its flight untouched, till at last the pointer became careless, and often missed his game. As if seemingly willing, however, to give one chance more, he made a dead stop at a fern-bush, with his nose pointed downward, the fore-foot bent, and his tail straight and steady. In this position he remained firm till the sportsman was close to him with both barrels cocked; then, moving steadily forward for a few paces, he at last stood still near a bunch of heather, the tail expressing the anxiety of the mind by moving regularly backwards and forwards. At last out sprang a fine old blackcock. Ban! bang! went both barrels, but the bird escaped unhurt. The patience of the dog was now exhausted, and, instead of dropping to charge, he turned bodily round, placed his tail between his legs, gave one howl, long and loud, and set off as fast as he could to his own home.

A CAMEL'S REVENGE.

A valuable camel, working in an oil mill in Africa, was severely beaten by its driver. Perceiving that the camel had treasured up the injury, and was only waiting a favorable opportunity for revenge, he kept a strict watch upon the animal. Time passed away; the animal perceiving that it was watched, was quiet and obedient, and the driver began to think that the beating was forgotten, when one night, after the lapse of several months, the man was sleeping on a raised platform in the mill, whilst, as is customary, the camel was stabled in a corner. Happening to awake, the driver observed by the bright moonlight that, when all was quiet, the animal looked cautiously around, rose softly, and stealing towards the spot where a bundle of clothes and a bernous, thrown carelessly on the ground, resembled a sleeping figure, cast itself with violence upon them, rolling with all its weight, and tearing them most viciously with its teeth. Satisfied that its revenge was complete, the camel was returning to its corner, when the driver sat up and spoke. At the sound of his voice, and perceiving the mistake it had made, the animal was so mortified at the failure and discovery of its scheme, that it dashed its head against the wall and died on the spot.

A newspaper and newspaper editor that people don't talk about, and sometimes abuse, are rather poor concerns. The men and business that an editor sometimes feels his duty to defend, at a risk of making enemies of another class, are often the first to show their ingratitude. The editor who expects to receive much charity or gratitude will soon find out his mistake; but he should go on and do and say what he conscienciously thinks right without regard to frowns or smiles.

Socrates was pronounced by the oracle of Delphos to be the wisest man of Greece, which he would turn from himself ironically, saying, there could be nothing in him to verify the oracle, except this, that he was not wise, and knew it; and others were not wise, and knew it not.—[Lord Bacon.

First Steam-Whistle on the Missouri.

The story of the first steam-whistle on the Missouri River is amusing. Its introduction dates back to 1844. At that time the settlers on the Missouri River were in the habit of making regular yearly visits to St. Louis to do their trading for themselves and friends. They were not provided with daily intercourse with the outside world; and many who lived back from the river seldom, if ever, saw a steamboat more than once a year. It happened that, during the fall of 1844, the new steamboat "Lexington" started up the Missouri River, loaded down to the guards with freight. Among the passengers were Judge Joseph C. Ranson, Theodore Warner of Lexington, Ben Holliday (afterward the famous overland stage proprietor), Col. Pometoy of Lexington, and a planter of Platte County, named George Yocum.

The steamer "Lexington" was provided with a steam-whistle—the first used on the Missouri River; and, as it happened, no one knew anything about it except Warner, who was a wag, and a lover of a joke. The night after leaving St. Louis, the passengers were collected together, playing cards (for fun,) in the cabin, when the talk turned upon steamboat explosions, then very common.

"I feel perfectly safe on this boat," said Warner as he dealt the cards.

"Why?" inquired Yocum, the planter.

"Why?" echoed the rest of the company.

"I will tell you why," said the wag, carefully studying his cards. "This boat is provided with a new patent safety-valve, which notifies the passengers on board just when it is about to blow up. It is a concern which makes an unearthly noise; and, when you hear it, it is time to get back aft, or jump overboard."

Notwithstanding the fact that Warner told his story with the most solemn and earnest countenance, some were skeptical. Not so, however, with the planter. Next morning, when the "Lexington" was steaming up the long stretch of river just below Washington, Mo., the passengers were at breakfast. The meal had been called; and all were busily engaged in doing justice to the kind of meals they were accustomed to serve on steamboats in those days. Suddenly the whistle commenced to blow, the first time on the trip. The passengers looked at each other a moment; and horror and dismay spread itself over their faces. The first man to realize the situation, and act, was Yocum the planter, who, with hair erect and blanched face, jumped up, crying as he pulled over one after another of the passengers—

"Run, run for your lives! The d—d thing's going to bust! Follow me, and let's save ourselves!"

Of course there was a stampede for the rear of the boat; and it was only by the exertions of some of the crew, that the more excited were restrained from jumping into the river.

A little thoughtful attention, how happy it makes the old. They have outlived most of the friends of their early youth. How lonely their hours! Often their partners in life have long filled silent graves; often their children they have followed to the tomb. They stand solitary, bending on their staff, waiting till the same call shall reach them. How often must they think of the absent lamented faces; of the love which cherished them, and the tears of sympathy which fell with theirs; now all gone. Should not the young cling around them, cheering their gloom with songs and happy smiles?

Sunshine is God's legitimate agent to give life and light. It enters into everything which is for the comfort or well-being of mankind; without it we would eke out a short, intolerable existence. As in the material world, so in the inner life. A man without sunshine in his nature is like a plant growing in the dark; it is weak, it is sickly, its very vitality is poisonous.

Why an object of loathing and disgust to yourself and society from catarrh, when Sanford's Radical Cure externally and internally administered, will cure every symptom of the disease. Every package is a complete treatment. Only $1.

It is a peculiar fact, which we should not lose sight of, that the most useful animals eat only vegetable food. The powerful elephant and patient camel, the horse, the ox, the donkey, the reindeer, all obtain their muscular power from nature's simplest production—the vegetable kingdom.

PILES! PILES!! PILES!!!

A Sure Cure Found at Last. No One Need Suffer.

A sure cure for the Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr. Williams (an Indian remedy), called Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 and 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, Instruments, and Electuaries do more harm than good. Williams' Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching (particularly at night after getting warm in bed), acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for Piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

TECUMSEH, MICH., AUG. 4, 1881.

President Garfield's condition has again taken a favorable turn. At this writing he is so much improved that public anxiety is disappearing, and the bulletins from the White House no longer furnish exciting news. Since the last operation by Dr. Agnew about a week ago, the people's patient has been gaining strength daily, and he is now able to partake of solid food, and pass a few hours each day boistered up in bed. The hope is now settling down into a conviction that the worst is over, and the President on the highway to recovery. There is no occasion for despondency now, but much reason for hopefulness. Still it must be borne in mind that the bullet has not been removed and the wound is not yet healed. He may have many ups and downs yet before final recovery, and at best there are many weeks of struggle ahead ere he can attend to his official duties, as he was wont to do before the 2d of July.

DEATH OF JOHN J. BAGLEY.

Every family in the commonwealth became heartfelt mourners when the news flashed over the wires that Governor Bagley was no more. He died at San Francisco, whither he had gone to recuperate his failing health, on the 27th of July, in the fiftieth year of his age. Gov. Bagley's biography, during the past twenty-five years, would make a conspicuous chapter in the history of Michigan. The business, social and political circles of which he was the master spirit will mourn his death as an irreparable loss to them. He was justly regarded as one of the leading business men, not only of Detroit, but of the Northwest as well. He was not only a great man in business, but was a great man in personal character also—self made, large hearted, generous, enterprising, justly ambitious in all proper directions, and irreproachable in every relation of life. Though a young man still, not having completed a half century of life, he had amassed a large fortune, had learned how to care for it wisely, and how to judiciously use it. He was a man of generous impulses, and hence his wealth was used in dispensing charities and building up new business enterprises. He was of a genial, social, democratic disposition, a friend of the poor, with a kind word for everyone. In his domestic relations he was exceedingly fortunate. His home was a model one, and no happier household could be found in the state than his. Although he lacked the advantages of early education, still his indomitable industry and love of books atoned in a measure for this privation. During the last fifteen years of his life he was a diligent student, and his library was a vade mecum of the best literature. We cannot better close this feeble tribute, than by using the words of Senator Caplis when at Lansing last winter he advocated Gov. Bagley's election to the U. S. Senate.

When you and I, Mr. Chairman, and our associates in this chamber shall have ceased to struggle for the rewards and honors of this world; when the passions and animosities engendered by the conflicts of rival hopes and interests and ambition shall have passed away and are forgotten; when the distinguished gentlemen who are contesting here this evening for the possession of that seat in the Senate of the United States adorned in days passed by Cass, Howard and Chandler shall have followed those eminent citizens to the dark house and the long sleep, the name and memory of John J. Bagley will be gratefully remembered, revered and honored by the people of Michigan. Then the simple but instructive and splendid story of his life and character will be read and understood in the light of truth and reason, unalloyed by passion, uninfluenced by prejudice and unaffected by the mercenary glare of politics. Then all men will admit that he was a good man, a true patriot and a great Governor—that he administered his high office in the spirit of absolute devotion to the best interests of all the people; and that take him for all in all, no nobler soul has ever trod the soil or breathed the bracing air of the State which he loved so well and served so faithfully, than that which moved, animated and inspired the huge body and massive frame and glorious heart of John J. Bagley.

ORIGIN OF THE TERM "LENAWEE."

The folowing letter from Hon. Jno. J. Adam of this village will be of interest to many. It is taken from the Adrian Record.

MESSRS. WHITNEY & BONNER:—I find that on the last page of your Vol. II of Biographical Records of Lenawee County, you give place to a paragraph from Able Whitney about the origin of the name of the county, copied from the Adrian Times of June 10, 1878. In regard to such a 'theory' it is only necessary to say that neither 'the French' nor 'the Territorial Council' had anything to do with giving the name of Lenawee to this county. The county was first laid out and named by Gov. Cass in an executive proclamation of Sep. 10, 1822, about two years before there was any Legislative Council in the Territory. And I do not believe that Gen. Cass had, or was likely to have, any such 'vile' idea in his head as Mr. W. speaks of, when he gave the name to the county. I still think that the most probable origin of the name was that suggested on page 39 of your first volume. J. J. ADAM.

Tecumseh, July 30, 1881.

Following is the article referred to written by Mr. Whitney, in the 2d volume:

"Lenawee appears to be a compound of the words Lena and wee, the etymology of Lena being 'a sluggard,' as applied to man; to a stream, small, slow, sluggish, shrunken; and wee, vile, wretched. Therefore the small, slow, sluggish Raisin, or sluggard men who inhabited the region embraced within the limits of Lenawee county (the Indians). The presumption is that the name was given this region of country by the French from the above reasons, and adopted by the Territorial Council, in giving name to the county."—Adrian Times, June 10, 1878.

Following is the note on the 39th page, 1st volume:

"Having had occasion to refer to the reports on the Pacific railroad surveys made in 1853-4, of which ten volumes were published by Congress from 1855 to 1859, and of which a full set was presented to me by Honorable Charles E. Stuart, then one of the United States senators from Michigan, I came across the vocabularies of Indian languages collected by Lieutenant Whipple, and with remarks by Professor Turner, who was connected with the surveys. The Delewares are there spoken of as the eastern, and the Shawnees as the western division of the Algonkin stock, and as the only two branches of that stock. The Indian name of the Delewares is there given as "Le-na-pe," and by some other writers they were desighated as "Leni-Lenape," as if to say "Man Indian." In Lieutenant Whipple's vocabulary of Delaware and Shawnee words, "man" is given as "Lenno," in the first dialect, and "Il-le-ni" in the other. In none of the other Indian dialects given in Lieutenant Whipple's report do I find anything from which the name of our county could, with any probability have been derived."

ELECTION OF SCHOOL EXAMINERS.

The meeting of Township Superintendents of Schools for the election of three examiners under the new school law was held at Adrian on Tuesday last. The meeting was called to order by County Clerk Hunter, and all but three Superintendents in the county were present.

Mr. C. E. Mitchell, of Fairfield, thought it would be in order to organize by choosing a chairman. The other members were of the same opinion, and a choice was made of Mr. Mitchell for that position. After the election of chairman was effected, extended remarks were made upon the feasibility of choosing one of their own number to serve in the capacity of school examiner, in which Messrs. C. T. Barber, of Morenci; C. E. Conley, of Tecumseh; D. A. Hammond, of Blissfield; C. G. Wilcox, of Adrian, and M. L. Pratt, of Weston, were the principal participants.

Mr. C. E. Conley then made a motion that the chair appoint a committee of three to take the matter under consideration and make a report at the afternoon session. After a few remarks upon this motion it was carried.

The chair then appointed as the committee, Mr. C. E. Conley and E. L. Mills of Tecumseh, and D. A. Hammond, of Blissfield.

At the afternoon session the following were elected examiners:

Three years—E. G. Walker, of Adrian.

Two years—H. D. Hammond, of Blissfield.

One Year—C. D. West, of Madison.

WE do not often make any editorial mention of the proprietary medicines advertised in our columns, but we believe it to be a duty we owe to our readers to call their attention to the advertisement of Dr. J. C. Ayer's Ague Cure which appears in this issue of our paper. We know from sad experience that nothing is more disheartening than the insidious approaches and periodical attacks of malarial and miasmatic disorders. The remedy prepared by Dr. Ayer & Co. has been in use many years, and has proved a positive antidote for disorders of this nature. It is, withal, a safe and harmless one to take, being composed entirely of vegetable ingredients, without either quinine or minerals, unlike other so-called Ague Cures, and consequently incapable of producing the deplorable effects which follow the use of these drugs. Our western people owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Ayer for the production of this valuable medicine. Its timely use will save much suffering, and we recommend it to do all that is promised for it.—Atkins, Ark., News.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

One Ground of Agreement.

Adrian Times: Mr. Robertson calls at the White House, and Mr. Conkling calls at the White House, so it seems there is one ground on which these two gentlemen are able to meet in agreement.

A Possibility.

Philadelphia Times: Roscoe Conkling appears just now the deadest politician in the United States. And yet the death of Mr. Garfield, whose life seems hanging by a thread, would make Conkling the actual, though not the nominal, head of the government.

A Comedy of Errors.

Chattanooga Times: Two babies were born in the same house at Oakland, Tenn. The mothers were sisters, closely resembling each other, and the infants are both girls. In the excitement of the occasion the little ones got mixed, and this happened before they were dressed, or in any other way marked for identification.

How Grant is "Fixed."

"Gath" in the Cincinnati Enquirer: "Yes," said John R. Young, "I think Grant's income cannot be far from $50,000 a year. He has an active interest in a New York business house which has been very successful. He gets, perhaps, $25,000 a year from the railroad companies, and the two funds raised by Jones and the Drexels for him amount to $360,000. It is not true that he has sold his St. Louis farm." Mr. Young said: "I have never taken much stock in that Grant phalanx, except Grant himself. I think he is a broad-minded liberal man—sometimes going pretty far for his friends. He may have indulged that good quality too far toward Conkling."

The State Printing.

Detroit Free Press: Two years ago J. F. Hadger, of this city, was the lowest bidder for the State printing. His bond contained the name of but one surety. Although this surety was abundantly responsible, the Board of Auditors rejected the bid because there was but one surety, and W. S. George & Company, the next lowest bidders, were awarded the contract. This year the House "straw bid" was put in with one surety, but W. S. George & Company were not the next lowest bidders. The board did not reject the House straw bid because of the one surety, but hung on to it and held the matter open until in some mysterious manner the one name had increased to two. Then they awarded the contract to House, who turned out, by a remarkable coincidence, to be a mere agent of W. S. George & Company, to whom the contract actually goes. What do the people of the State, who pay the piper think of these little family arrangements.

Two Senators of Two Great States.

New York Sun: The two greatest States of the Union, the Empire and the Keystone, will swell with fresh pride in their pre-eminence when they look at their representatives in the Senate. We say nothing about the private character of any of these Senators; they may all be respectable enough at home. But Mr. Cameron, the only one of the four who is known beyond his native village, makes no pretensions to statesmanship and is incapable of making a ten-line speech in defense of any interest of his constituents. Mitchell sets under his coat-tail and shows himself when bidden. He will be used by the Pennsylvania stalwart to bridge the chasm between him and the administration. As to New York, Lapham is Lapham and Miller is wood pulp from Herkimer. They will both appear at Washington plastered with the muck of Albany. It will seem like a sad change indeed to Mr. Cameron when his subdued eye wanders over the seats of New York and encounters Lapham and Pulp where men were wont to be.

The Comet's Latest Mischief.

Philadelphia Times: General Butler's refusal to give this year's canvass in Massachusetts its usual picturesque vigor by taking up the standard of opposition has fairly discomfited the regulars. The evidences of his abscence are already perceptible in the incoherent discussion of the press. The General declines running this year because he counts the stars as unfavorable. The comet particularly he regards as a bad omen. This leaves the two parties free to select their most respectable and most mediocre material. The Democrats with no hope of success, will simply "compliment" some of their veterans by naming them for the offices, while the Republicans will "point with pride" to Dawes, Hoar and Long and invoke the usual majority, which will doubtless be given the ticket. The whole country will miss General Butler from the field. His fights are always stirring and even his defeats are more inspiring than his adversaries' victories. He has made the Massachusetts dry bones rattle pretty thoroughly in the past and he owes it to the country to keep up the entertainment, even though the sinister sign of the comet does intervene.

STATEMENT UNDER OATH.

A Startling Revelation of Suffering!

"Oh, My God, How I Did Suffer!"

"I have been afflicted for twenty years with an obstinate skin disease, called by some M. D.'s Psoriasis, and others Leprosy, commencing on my scalp, and in spite of all I could do, with the help of the most skillful doctors, it slowly but surely extended, until a year ago this winter it covered my entire person in form of dry scales. For the last three years I have been unable to do any labor, and suffering intensely all the time. Every morning there could be nearly a dustpanful of scales taken from the sheet on my bed, some of them half as large as the envelope containing this letter. In the latter part of winter my skin commenced cracking open. I tried everything almost, that could be thought of, without any relief. The 12th of June I started West, in hopes I could reach the Hot Springs. I reached Detroit, and was so low I thought I should have to go to the hospital, but finally got as far as Lansing, Mich., where I had a sister living. One Dr. —— treated me about two weeks, but did me no good. All thought I had but a short time to live. I earnestly prayed to die. Cracked through the skin all over my back, across my ribs, arms, hands, limbs, feet badly swollen, toe-nails came off, finger-nails dead and hard as bone, hair dead, dry and lifeless as old straw. O, my God! how I did suffer.

"My sister, Mrs. E. H. Davis, had a small part of a box of Cuticura in the house. She wouldn't give up; said 'We will try Cuticura.' Some was applied on one hand and arm. Eureka! there was relief; stopped the terrible burning sensation from the word go. They immediately got the Resolvent, Cuticura and Soap. I commenced by taking one tablespoonful of Resolvent three times a day, after meals; had a bath once a day, water about blood heat; used Cuticura Soap freely; applied Cuticura morning and evening. Result, returned to my home in just six weeks from the time I left, and my skin as smooth as this sheet of paper.

Adrian Record: Jo Ladoncure's horse was struck by the Sunday morning train, going east at Blissfield and immediately killed. He had just turned him into the road to graze in front of his house, having only been out five or ten minutes. He started to cross the track close by as the train was approaching. When he stepped on to the track, parties from the other side attempted to stop him, but he turned and ran ahead of the engine, jumped the cattle guards and as he landed on the other side, the engine struck and carried him ten or twelve rods, landing him in the ditch, killing him instantly. He was worth $60 or $70. Jo had just got the horse paid for, and was intending to get another one to make him a team. This, with many other misfortunes which Jo has fallen victim to, renders him so far in life very unfortunate. A change of luck we greatly hope for in the future.

MICHIGAN TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

The State Teachers' Institute for Washtenaw county will be held at Manchester, commencing at 2 o'clock P. M., Monday, August 15, and closing Friday following. Prof. J. W. Robinson, Manchester, local committee. It is desired to make the Institutes of this series of the greatest practical benefit to teachers. For this purpose some of the most experienced and successful instructors have been engaged to conduct the various exercises. The outlines of institute work were revised at the State Institute held at Lansing, July 5—8; and with the experience of the past to aid us, it is believed that the present series will be of unusual value to all.

The new school law requires teachers hereafter to be examined in the theory and art of teaching, and after the present year in U. S. History and Civil Government, in addition to the branches heretofore required. Especial attention will therefore be given to these subjects, and teachers will find it greatly to their interest to be present at all the sessions to prepare for the increased requirements.

FISHING AND BOATING.

The Herald Employees Take a Day of Recreation at Sand Lake.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." This is as true as preaching, and no class of men have better reasons for thinking so than the printers. Accordingly last Friday morning, at the early hour of six A. M. saw the entire HERALD force loaded into a three seated spring wagon, behind a spanking span of Bidwell's bays, and headed for Sand Lake. It was rather an early hour for some of us to shake off the embrace of Morpheus, but as this was a special occasion, it was not a very hard task to get up in decent season for once. It was a beautiful day for a lake trip; neither too hot nor too cold, too wet nor too dry.

The first object of interest we passed after leaving the corporation was a wind mill. A discussion arose among the boys as to what the apparatus was for, one insisting that it was a threshing machine, another claiming that it must be a potato digger, while a third offered to bet his old boots that it was a self-binder. The discussion increased in warmth and interest until we came to another windmill planted close by the road with a pump under it. The foreman alighted and made an examination. He knew that the pump was a pump, and under the pump he discovered a well. With this additional evidence before us the verdict was unanimous that the huge machine propped upon four legs was a windmill. It was generally conceded that the HERALD office must have a windmill. It might save future complications the next time the water works froze up, and during a dearth of news it would be an admirable method for working up local items. It was then and there voted to get a windmill the very first opportunity we had to buy one on trust. This problem having been satisfactorily solved we proceeded on to new conquests.

Perhaps it would be well to mention in this connection that our pressman handled the reins. He has charge of the "steam power" in the office, and we thought he could best be trusted to run the horse power on this extra occasion, and the event proved the wisdom of our choice. We only upset once, knocked off three horse shoes and run off the tire of two wheels before getting to Sand Lake.

But in due course of time and space Sand Lake was reached, and mine host, C. H. Adam, had cared for the team and bid us all feel at home.—This latter injunction was unnecessary, for a man cannot help feeling at home there at once. Good accommodations for man and beast, plenty of boats, lots of fishing tackle, and the fattest kind of grubs for bait, are advantages that are not to be sneezed at on a fishing excursion.

Before proceeding to business, however, the following committees were appointed to take charge of the various departments of the day's program:

On Sports and Amusements—The Boss.
On Finance—The Commodore.
On Team—Billy.
On Boats—Mac.
On Eatables—Burly.
On Fishing—Peeler.
On Bait—Moir.

After sufficient bait had been dug, purchased and stolen, and the chip hats had been drawn from beneath the buggy seat and placed in proper position, the committee on boats piped all hands on deck, and the fun began. The party divided into two squads, and each squad sought a fishing ground. One of them relied on their own judgment as to the best fishing place, while the other hired the hostler to pilot them to a good shoal. It is needless to say that the last squad had the best luck. As the sun approached the meridian they were admonished that dinner time was at hand so they all paddled into port and then reviewed their respective catch. They all did well considering. In the number of fishes caught the news department seemed be ahead. That party had 315 minnows ranging in size from one to three inches in length, while the other party had three bull-heads, a pond lily and a mud-turtle. Both parties were highly elated over their success and proceeded to make way with a good square meal.

Dinner was finally over, to the great joy of the landlord and cook, and the ensuing two hours were devoted to Morpheus and Pedro, the latter absorbing the lion's share of the company. It was then decided to row round the north-west promontory and all hands take an old fashioned swim. The boats were again loosened from their moorings, and after a half hour's row a fine site was found where we could disrobe on top of a perpendicular hill thirty feet high and roll down into the lake. C. D. Bills, of Tecumseh, happened along about this time and made a valuable addition to the party. In less time than it takes to relate it the boys were paddling around among the fishes, but as a matter of precaution Mac and the Boss remained on shore, that they might go for the coroner in case any of the swimmers should take the cramp and drown. Two exciting incidents happened during this part of the program, but nothing of a serious character. The commodore safely stowed away his clothes in a boat to protect them from the musquitoes, and the boat was accidentally upset in ten feet of water. This roiled his composure somewhat, for his new pewter watch, his calf boots and a big copper penny with a hole in it, all went to the bottom. He even insinuated that the devil upset the boat purposely. We don't know what other printer's devils might do under a like provocation, but the HERALD devil is entirely above such business. Things looked blue, however, for a few minutes, and Mac prophesied a hail storm within half an hour. But the storm indications soon blew over, and the practical problem that before us was how to recover the lost property. The boss suggested that a lost notice had better be inserted in this week's paper. The cost would be only fifty cents, and if that did not result in recovering the property nothing else would. But after considerable debate his wishes were overruled and it was finally decided to appoint Peeler and Moir a committee of two to dive for the lost articles. Peeler brought up the watch at the first onset and hurled it to shore in triumph. Moir then went for the boots but did not return in proper time. The spectators began to grow uneasy and so a messenger was sent down for him. He was found hanging to a root at the bottom of the lake with a boot under each arm. Upon being brought up he fainted away, and it required the medical skill of the entire party to restore him. We rubbed his head with gravel stones, gave him a spoonful of Eureka salve, put his feet into the dinner pail, and fed him a quart of lake water, all to no purpose. It was not until we had rubbed his back with a bull-head that he came to. The big penny was left where it fell.

The party mournfully gathered up their baggage, put themselves in civilized trim again and returned to the hotel. After a short respite they all went out for another fish, dividing into three squads. A lucky fate guided the whole party this time, for the fishes bit faster than the hooks could be baited. The sun went down and the bait gave out almost at the same moment, when the squads weighed anchor and leisurely rowed into port. Among our trophies were several big sun fish, divers perch, sundry bull-heads, and minnows so numerous that we couldn't stop to count them. It was voted by all hands that an hour's better fishing had not been done this season on Sand Lake.

Well, printers, like common folks, generally feel in the mood of taking supper when supper time arrives. A splendid evening meal was served for us, and then the team was brought around, and we set out for home. But by some unaccountable accident the team got headed towards Charley Akins', over on Wampler's Lake, where there was to be a bowery dance in the evening. They say that the longest way round is the nearest way to a fire, and it seems that the longest way round is the nearest way home from the lakes. A drive of three miles, over sand knolls and cobble-stone beaches, through lake, marshes and cranberry swamps, brought us to Charley Akin's grove, which was finely illuminated with Chinese lanterns for a bowery dance. The young men and maidens soon began to assemble. The rustic maid was there clad in pea-green calico and barber-pole stockings, and perfumed with bear's oil and onions. Enough country swains were there to keep the HERALD boys in hot water. The music was splendid, being composed of two fiddles and a saw-horse. The floor manager was well up in his part, and when he cried out "All Ready," the business began. This part of the day's entertainment sadly demoralized our little party. The pressman was wild with delight, the foreman was twenty years younger then when catching fish in the afternoon, while the committee on finance recklessly squandered his last nickle for individual dance tickets. Peeler and Mac took five cent cigars and a bologna, Moir hoisted in a lemonade, while Scove emptied the shingle nails, pencils and matches out of his coat pocket and had it filled with five cents worth of peanuts. Our party all entered into the spirit of the occasion and made themselves entirely at home. During the last waltz, when Billy was dancing with the prettiest girl in the company, and the dancers were going through that exciting waltz "Meet me in the Moonlight," his partner's slipper became unloosed and flew across the dance hall. It was a critical moment. The question was whether the dance should stop or the young lady finish the dance with one slipper on. But she was equal to the emergency. The dance did not stop, and the way that slipper went on again brought down the house with applause. This incident upset the equilibrium of our party to such an extent that we deemed it prudent to start for home. The team was ordered, the driver was conveyed to the wagon on a stretcher, and the bays were let out with their faces towards Tecumseh. What transpired on the road we know not, as during the most of that time we were in dreamland.

The saddest part of this sad tale remains for us to tell. Spike, being afraid of horses and preferring to go when the woman folks went, stayed at home to keep office. Five customers came in during the entire day. One was an old maid who had lost her green umbrella and wanted to advertise it. The second was little Polly Smith, of Raisin, who brought in the biggest hen's egg that has been produced in this latitude since the discovery of the last comet. It measured four inches from tip to tip and would fill an ordinary barber's cup. The next was a little girl who lives on Killbuck street, whose mother sent her in to beg a nickle's worth of old papers to put on the butter shelves. The next was a female peddler who was selling an infallible remedy for baldness. She sold him the recipe for one dollar and a day's board. The last was a buxom matron from Milan who called to thrash the editor because he had failed to publish some obituary poetry she sent in about a month ago. Spike politely informed the lady that the editor was absent. He was an innocent job printer and had nothing to do with the newspaper. But she knew better. He was baldheaded and had a sinister look and she knew he was himself the editor. He couldn't play possum with her. So she drew a rawhide, that was concealed about her clothing, bounded over the counter, and ——. What followed we can only conjecture. The police came in shortly and found the furniture in the office badly demoralized. After a search through the building from the sky parlor to the dumb well in the cellar, they found Spike crouched behind the wood type cabinet, with his head bound up in an empty ink keg, a mallet in one hand and a big monkey wrench in the other. He has since recovered sufficiently to go to work, but his nerves were so unstrung that he has not yet been able to recall the details of the conflict.

A Chunk of Gold.

AN AMERICAN'S EXPERIENCE IN AUSTRALIA.

One day while I was at work in the drift, one of our party, who was bailing in the shaft, said:

"There's something big happened up above, Tom; I hear a great buzzing and shouting."

"Perhaps it's a fight," I suggested, as I struck my pickaxe into the soil and unearthed a nugget as large as a walnut.

"Perhaps it's a find," replied my mate.

"There's a find here," I said, as I came out of the drift and exhibited the nugget I had just taken out. Then I heard the clamor also; it was like the murmur of distant waves.

We shook the rope, and receiving no answer to our signal, concluded that something important had happened, as our mates above had evidently left the windlass. A moment later a shadow appeared above, and Bill's voice was heard shouting:

"Come up, boys, and see the big find."

"Where is it?" I asked on reaching the surface; but I scarcely needed to ask, for it must be where the crowd was collected, some fifty yards or so from our claim.

The crowd was large, and every minute increasing, but being brawny and broad-shouldered, I elbowed my way through it, and was almost overwhelmed with astonishment at the sight which greeted my vision. It wasn't a nugget—it was a boulder! No wonder that the miners were excited. The spectacle was enough to excite the most phlegmatic individual that ever breathed.

It was a solid mass of gold as large, or larger, than a leg of mutton, and not unlike one in shape. This was the mass which afterwards became widely known as the Welcome Nugget. A fac simile of it may now be seen in the mineral department of the Boston Museum of Natural History, where the weight is given as 2,169 ounces, and the value as $41,822.70.

The further information is imparted that the nugget is the largest piece of gold ever found, but that is a mistake. A larger nugget was found in Bendigo lead on Feb. 3d, 1869. It weighed 189 pounds 1 ounce Troy, or 2,269 ounces.

I had been mentally congratulating myself on the discovery of a nugget as large as a walnut; but the sight of this mass of gold took all the conceit out of me. Nevertheless I was glad that the nugget had been found, for the claim from which it was taken was right in the direction in which we were working, and our claim was daily growing richer in ore.

The Welcome Nugget, as large as it was, did not enrich its finders, for there were twelve shareholders in it, and it brought to them less than a thousand pounds apiece. It would have been a lucky find for a couple of mates.

The man who dug it out fainted dead away before he unearthed it. When his pick first struck it, he put forth his hand to pick up the lump; the light from his candle shone on it and revealed its nature. To his surprise, it did not yield to the touch. Then he began to feel about it with his hands, and it grew in proportions under his exploring digits. He gave it a wrench, but it did not budge. Seizing his pick, he began to dig around it, and as its outlines grew under his eye, the spectacle overcame him, and he fainted.

The Children.

"Can any one tell the world how to make home attractive to the children?" It is a vital, humanitarian question. It may be necessary to know all about the finances of the country, to ascertain the full meaning, by study, of Christianity, but it is of more importance to know how to keep the children off from the streets, out of saloons, and at home. Some parents buy them costly presents, but there is little virtue in that unless their hearts accompany the gifts. Others abound in "Pecksniff" utterances. They are "exhorters," but fear briars; they are skillful disputants in theology, but hypocrites withal, and their offspring know it. Others—and they belong to the wise class—become a part of their little ones, and no matter if they live in a hovel, it is a home, and absence from it is a burden. These parents tell stories to their bairns, become interested in their plans, etc. There is something in a bear story, for instance, that pleases a child from "six to sixty." If you tell that some bears are killed by suspending heavy sticks of timber from heavy trees, and when they scramble for the honey they come in repeated contact with the swinging timber, and are soon "done for," a moral lesson is given. To those of older age, you might tell them of Boones prayer. At one time this matchless hunter came in contact with a grizzly—a bear that has terrible claws and a huge frame. Just as the conflict was about to begin, Boone offered up this supplication: "O Lord, here is going to be one of the biggest bear fights you ever did see; O, Lord, if you can't help me, for God's sake don't help the bear."

In reading the life of the poet Southey there was nothing that interested me more than the fact that he very frequently wrote poetic stories for his children; at one time saying: "I am laureate to them and the king." This custom, then, of going down into the child's world, or, rather, up—for it partakes more of heaven than anything else—is the best means of detaining your little ones around the fireside, and keeping them away from sin and death. Would that parents would become more interested in this matter.

Two Valuable Lessons at West Point.

Two valuable lessons, not from text-books, are taught at West Point—strict honesty and truthfulness. A cadet guilty of lying is expelled. There is no hope for him, and there ought to be none. Of all mean and detestable vices, falsehood is the meanest and most detestable. A cadet guilty of dishonesty is expelled. Dishonesty and falsehood go hand in hand. They are twin vices. No young man who should show the taint of these vices goes through West Point if the authorities can help it. By extreme circumspection a youth whose imagination is too lively for his judgment may occasionally get through, and even rise to comparatively high command in the army afterward; but certain it is that he must walk with great care while passing through West Point; and as to honesty of its graduates as a class, that fortunately is beyond a doubt.

If you were as willing to be as pleasant and as anxious to please in your own house as you are in the company of your neighbors, you would have the happiest home in the world.

The Gaudy Sex.

WOMAN'S DRESS A BADGE OF INFERIORITY.

As to the question of the sexes, I think that woman's love of dress is the stamp of her inferiority. It ends the discussion with me. I can't respect my sex as I do the other while we are such creatures of dress. Here a man and his wife are projecting a journey. The man is equipped in an hour, and his attention is free for the higher considerations of the occasion; but the woman must have a week for her preparations, and starts off fagged out with shopping and dress-making and packing.

Go to Wilhelmj's concert. You find the gentlemen performers are not distinguished at all by their dress, unless it is by its simplicity. Wilhelmj's black coat is buttoned across his breast up to his collar, and his wristbands are quite inconspicuous. But the lady singer comes in dragging a peacock's tail unspread and tattooed from head to foot with colors and frills and embroidery.

What is a wedding to a woman? It is a bride's satins and laces and jewels. The sentiment of the great circumstance is all smothered in dress. She can neither feel solemn nor gay—she is a spectacle of clothes. You bring me Scripture for her relief: "Can a maid forget her ornaments, or a bride her attire?" I don't say she can any more than a leopard can change its spots; I only say it is something which stamps her inferiority. The human female seems to have lost her natural prestige, and is fain to make herself attractive in meretricious ways.

Imagine a man compressing his ribs with stays or trammeling his legs with skirts, let alone swathing them after the mummy fashion of to-day. Imagine him spending an hour every morning in fixing his hair for a day-long torment. He will have his dress subservient to health and comfort and freedom of breath and motion. You say he is in bondage to the changes of fashion as well as the women are. But he contrives to keep these conditions intact. His new styles are not allowed to intrench on his comfort and health and the highest interests of life. If he changes the cut of his hair, he still keeps the sweetness and unconsciousness of short locks; he does not let them grow inconveniently long, or canker his head with a frowzy chignon. If he changes the fashion of his coat it is almost unnoticeable, and you may be sure it is at no sacrifice of ease. His pantaloons may be cut a little more bagged or a little more statuesque, but never with trails or any impediment to his natural gait. His hat is always the same serviceable sunshade, and his cap the same protection from the weather, no matter what the details of style.

Well, you say the women dress to please the men, and if women are foolish men make them so. My answer to that is, that men are as fond of pleasing women as women are of pleasing men, and more so; but they have wit enough to accomplish their object without the monstrous sacrifices women make. Whether any amount of education and opportunity will give women the wit, or diminish the advantage man has gained, remains to be seen.

MONEY—FARMS—ABSTRACTS.

If you want to hire money at very low rates.

If you have money to loan.

If you want to buy a farm or a home.

If you want to sell your real estate.

If you want a deed or mortgage correctly made.

Among other Farms for sale I have one of 100 acres and one of 80 acres in Palmyra both being well tiled and fenced, and first class in every respect, with four market towns within easy driving distance, in good neighborhood. Also 125 acre farm 1½ miles west of river road from Deerfield. Also 160 acre farm and 90 acre farm, and 20 acre farm in Riga, any of which are decided bargains, and good reasons given for naming low prices.

Every purchaser of Lands should insist on being furnished an abstract of title, for our experience of more than 20 years shows that not more than one title in ten is perfect of record, and every week purchases agreed upon are abandoned owing to imperfections of title. I have a good carriage or farm horse, 1300 lbs. in weight for sale at a bargain.

A few thousand dollars now on hand to loan at six per cent, and on long time if desired.

A. L. BLISS,
Examiner of Titles, Loan and Land Agent, Adrian Mich.

"Don't waste your time clipping at the branches," said a woodman to his son, "but lay your ax at the root of the tree." And the young man went out and laid his ax at the the foot of the tree like a good and dutiful boy, and then went fishing. Truly, there is nothing so beautiful as filial obedience.

Greatest Remedy Known.

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumptive is certainly the greatest medical remedy ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity.—Thousands of once hopeless sufferers now loudly proclaim their praise for this Discovery to which they owe their lives. Not only does it positively cure Consumption, but Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Hoarseness and all affections of the Throat, Chest and Lungs yield at once to its wonderful curative powers as if by magic. We do not ask you to buy a large bottle until you know what you are getting. We therefore earnestly request you to call on your druggists, M. Wright & Son, and get a trial bottle free of cost which will convince the most skeptical of its wonderful merits, and show you what a regular one dollar size bottle will do. For sale by M. Wright & Son, Tecumseh.

We shall not accomplish much without zeal and enterprise. But the mistake is often made by supposing that zeal is hurry, rush, recklessness, and indifference. It is not so; steady momentum is often more effective than unrestrained vigor.

The Cyclopaedia War.

The month of July, 1881, witnesses the completion of the largest and most important literary work this country and the century have seen. It is the Library of Universal Knowledge, large type edition, in 15 large octavo volumes, containing 10 per cent more matter than Appleton's Cyclopædia, at less than one-fifth its cost, and 20 per cent more than Johnson's Cyclopædia, at a little more than one-fourth its cost.

Chambers's Encyclopædia, which forms the basis of the Library of Universal Knowledge (the last London edition of 1880 being reprinted verbatim as a portion of its contents), is the laborious product of the ripest British and European scholarship. It has developed through a century of Cyclopædia making; its various editions having been many times revised, in successive years, till it has come to be universally recognized, by those competent to judge, as standing at the very front of great aggregations of knowledge, and better adapted than any other Cyclopædia for popular use. It contains such full and important information as the ordinary reader, or the careful student, is likely to seek, upon about 25,000 subjects in every department of human knowledge. Chambers's Encyclopædia, however, is a foreign production, edited and published for a foreign market, and could not be expected to give as much prominence to American topics as American readers might desire. To supply these and other deficiencies a large corps of American editors and writers have added important articles upon about 15,000 topics, covering the entire field of human knowledge, bringing the whole number of titles under one alphabetical arrangement to about 40,000. Thus the work is thoroughly Americanized, and the Library of Universal Knowledge becomes at once the latest and most complete Encyclopædia in the field, at a mere fraction of the cost of any similar work which has preceded it.

Victory For The

Price of the 15 volumes, complete, in extra cloth binding, $15.00. In half Russia, sprinkled edges, $20.00. In half Russia, gilt top, $22.50. In full library sheep, marbled edges, $25.00.

The superlative value and importance of this great Encyclopædia lies especially in the fact that it is brought within the reach of every one who aspires after knowledge and culture. It is really a library of universal knowledge. It brings a liberal education easily within the reach even of every plowboy of the country and apprentice boy of the city. Every farmer and every mechanic in the land owes it to himself and to his children that such a Cyclopædia shall henceforward form a part of the outfit of his home. To the professional man, and every person of intelligence in every walk of life, a Cyclopædia is a necessity.

Revolution

Of course the old and wealthy publishers who have grown rich (it is said that the Appletons have made a profit of nearly two million dollars on their Cyclopædia) from the sale of their high-priced publications are not pleased that their monopolies are broken and their power overthrown. Of course the book agents and booksellers who have been used to getting from 40 to 60 per cent commission for selling these high priced books are not so well pleased to sell the Library of Universal Knowledge on 15 per cent commission, though those who are not short-sighted discover that their own interests, after all, are identical with the interests of the people, and their real profits, in the end, are increased by the immense sales which result from meeting the people's wants. The majority of booksellers, however, are better pleased to slander than to sell this, and our numerous other standard and incomparably low-priced publications. But the Literary Revolution has always looked to the people, in whose interests it is, for its patronage, and it has never looked in vain, as our more than one million volumes printed last year (this year being increased to probably more than two millions) abundantly prove. You can order the Cyclopædia directly from us, and by uniting with your neighbors and friends you can secure club rates as follows:

$10,000 Reward

To Club Agents.

A discount of 10 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering at one time three or more sets of the Cyclopædia; and a discount of 15 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering five or more sets at one time.

As a special inducement to our friends and patrons to go to work promptly and vigorously, each doing what he can for the dissemination of universal knowledge, we propose to distribute $10,000 in special premiums as follows, in addition to the regular discount to clubs:

$5,000 Reward to be distributed equally among the first 500 club agents who send us clubs of not less than five subscribers, after June 15th and before September 1st.

$5,000 Reward in addition to the first $5,000 to be distributed among the 500 club agents who, during the same time, send us the largest number of subscribers, not less than twenty in number, the amount to be distributed proportionately to the whole number of subscribers which each of the 500 club agents may send us.

The names of the subscribers must in every case be forwarded to us. The first $5,000 named will be distributed as specified as rapidly as the orders are received, and the remaining $5,000 will be distributed promptly on Sept. 1st. The names of the persons receiving these rewards will be printed, with the amounts received by each, and the list sent to all the club agents entering into competition for them. Subscribers must be actual purchasers for individual use, to entitle the club agent to the rewards under this offer, and not booksellers or agents who buy to sell again.

Persons desiring to raise clubs may send to us at once for sample volumes, if they desire, in the various styles of binding, paying us 75 cents for the volume in cloth, $1.00 for the volume in half Russia, sprinkled edges, and $1.25 for the volume in library sheep. Orders for the full sets will be filled by us with the utmost promptness, within our ability to manufacture, beginning not later than July 10th, orders being filled in the order of their receipt by us.

Specimen pages of the "Library of Universal Knowledge" will be sent free upon request. Descriptive catalogue of our large list of standard publications, with terms to clubs, and illustrated pamphlet describing book-making and type-setting by steam, will be sent upon application. Remit by bank draft, money order, registered letter, or by express. Fractions of $1.00 may be sent in postage-stamps.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

MAIL SERVICE.

The order making a special assignment of mail service on the Mississippi river south of the Missouri state line, and upon all rivers west of the Missouri and south of the Missouri state line is rescinded, and charge of the mail service upon these rivers reverts to the superintendents of the respective divisions to which they belong.

A DISPUTE SETTLED.

The minister of foreign affairs of the Argentine Republic sends the following cablegram regarding the long-disputed boundary question between that republic and Chili: "A treaty has been signed with Chili, with the good offices of the United States ministers to both countries."

AN INTERESTING VOLUME.

The Superintendent of the Dead Letter Office has published a volume containing the avenues, streets, and alleys of all the cities in the United States where there is postal service, except Little Rock, Ark., and Zanesville, Ohio, of which places the postmasters neglected to give the requisite information.

THE PRESIDENT'S PHYSICAL STRENGTH.

Dr. Bliss says: "He is, of course, weak, but not so weak as seems to be generally supposed. He moves his arms and legs pretty freely, can help himself in turning over, and by clasping his hands around the neck of one of the attendants he can support a part of his weight while being lifted. The grip of his hand is still quite firm and strong."

HOMESTEAD ENTRIES.

Atty. Gen. MacVeagh has decided that where homestead entry of public lands has been made by a settler the land so entered can not, while such entry stands, be set apart by the president for a military reservation, even "prior to completion of full title in the settler," but that where preemption has been made of public lands the land covered thereby may be set apart by the president for such reservation at any time previous to payment and entry by the settler under the preemption law.

THE INFERNAL MACHINES.

Secretary of the Treasury Windom addressed communications to the collectors of customs at Boston and New York, from which ports, it is alleged, the infernal machines and combustibles which recently arrived at Liverpool were shipped. The letters contained instructions to the officers to use every endeavor to ascertain the name of the consignor of packages. The secretary, speaking on subject, said that, while it may be impossible for the collectors to ascertain directly the name of the person, he hopes to at least discover a clue which may lead to the detection of the guilty ones.

TREASURY NOTES.

The amount of 6 per cent bonds, which matured July 1, redeemed by Treasurer Gilfillan to date, is $13,197,400.

Orders have been given to close up, as speedily as possible, the London agency for the receipt of 5 and 6 per cent. bonds for continuance at 3½ per cent.

The treasury department has ordered discontinuance of the manufacture and sale of gold tokens stamped "quarter dollar" and "half dollar." Persons manufacturing or selling such tokens are rendering themselves liable to penalties, both of fine and imprisonment.

Secretary Windom has approved Judge Robertson's bond as collector of customs at the port of New York.

INDIAN AFFAIRS.

The commissioner of Indian affairs, with a view to effecting a friendly arrangement looking to the gradual consolidation of the various Indian agencies and bringing nearer together the various tribes of Indians now scattered over a wide area, has sent out letters to the Poncas, Omahas, Winnebagoes, and Lower Agency Sioux, instructing them to send three delegates from each tribe to Washington by Aug. 1. Replies have been received from each tribe, declaring a willingness to do so. The especial object of the conference at this time is to arrange for some better location for the Poncas in Nebraska, who refused to go to Indian Territory.

THE AMERICAN NAVY.

The Naval Board appointed some time since by Secretary Hunt, to inquire into the needs of the navy in respect to new vessels, and the best suited to the defense of the country and the maintenance of its dignity in other countries, has arrived at important conclusions. The Board has decided to recommend the construction of three classes of fighting cruisers to have a speed of thirteen, fourteen and fifteen knots an hour. The largest class is to have a capacity of 5,700 tons. They also recommend the construction of a number of gunboats for river service, to have a capacity of 700 tons, and a speed of ten knots an hour, and to carry one gun each. These are designed to serve on Chinese and other coasts, for which there are no suitable boats now existing in the navy. The gunboats will be of wood, but the larger vessels of iron.

QUEER GIFTS.

There arrived at the White House on Tuesday by express a stuffed humming-bird, perched on one of the impossible little trees that are affected by taxidermists. It came from Rhode Island, and was destined by the sender "to relieve the monotony of the sick-room." How it could afford such relief not even Dr. Hamilton could tell. Another arrival was a small box of "alleged crackers." They were to "satisfy the appetite and at the same time impart much strength." They looked and tasted like half-cooked biscuits, which had been allowed to harden.

PUBLIC FEELING IN ENGLAND.

The Standard, in an editorial, says: "In England every incident of President Garfield's illness is watched with keen but mournful interest. Had he been a British statesman, it would have been hardly possible for the English people to have manifested a truer sentiment of sympathy than that which they have extended to his family, and to his country. In no part of the United States will the news that Mr. Garfield is out of danger be more joyfully received than in England. In no part of the union will the tidings of his death, should that melancholy event occur, excite a deeper or more genuine feeling of sorrow than it would produce throughout her majesty's English-speaking dominions."

ON THE WAR-PATH.

A detachment of soldiers from Ft. Stanton report that a courier had arrived from the Mescabro Indian agency, forty miles from Ft. Stanton, reporting that parts of the Mescabro tribe, under Head Chief Natzillia and Chief Rowan, Chiquito, had left the agency to take the war-path, and had already killed two American and two Mexican families in Tullaresa Canyon, near the agency. Should the report be true it is feared much damage may be done, as the garrisons in Southern New Mexico have been much depleted by drafts for the Ute country. Natizallia was one of the chiefs with Victoria, and surrendered to Gen. Hatch on April 12 of last year. From the Navajos the latest is that in the presence of Capt. Bennett they told Agent Eastman that they would not allow him to be their agent, and that if he persisted in staying they would surely kill him.

THE CHINESE MINISTERS.

It is reported that both the Chinese ministers, Chin Lan Pin and Yung Wing, have been recalled. At the embassy they are very reticent about the matter, but such information as can be had rather tends to confirm the report. It is said that the recall is not because of any international matter or displeasure on the part of China, but grows out of the purpose on the part of that government to abolish its custom of having two ministers in each embassy. The Chinese government has reduced its embassies to other governments to one minister, but it is said both Chin Lan Pin and Yung Wing want to remain here; that their government to avoid a display of partiality for either, recalls both, and will send a new man here, but will provide for both of the present ministers elsewhere.

AN ENGLISH MEDICAL REVIEW.

The Lancet, the leading medical journal of London, in discussing President Garfield's wound, says: "A portion of his dress may have been carried into the wound, and each abscess that forms is not only a direct source of danger from pain and fever, and a danger of its extending deeply, but with each there is fresh liability to blood-poisoning. It is quite impossible to feel any certainty that we may not hear of another abscess or relapse and it is of great importance that the patient's constitutional vigor should be maintained at as high as possible, in view of future troubles. The absence of fever and severe exhaustion removes any cause for immediate alarm, but until the wound is quite healed and the bullet either removed or safely encysted there will be liability to recurring abscesses, each attended with risk of blood-poisoning."

UNITED STATES NOTES.

Superintendant Davis, of the New Orleans mint, reports to the treasury department that he will, during the movement of the cotton and sugar crops, put out from New Orleans between 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 of standard silver dollars. The annual boom of the silver dollars is about to recommence, to be followed inevitably by a backward flow of the coin into the treasury vaults.

Not until the recovery of the president can the Whitaker case be decided. The record of the court-martial must be first reported to the president by Gen. Swaim. Meanwhile Whitaker remains a cadet in the regular army.

HARTMANN'S MISSION.

Leo A. Hartmann, the Russian nihilist, told a reporter that he had come to America with the intension of telling the Americans about the state of affairs in Russia. "It has been very absurdly suggested that I came here for the purpose of organizing a nihilistic party in America. That is very far from my purpose. A similarly ridiculous notion exists in Europe that the centre of nihilism outside of Russia is Geneva. Both notions are equally false. I shall disseminate in every way all the ideas necessary to a thorough understanding of the Russian nation. I have many secret orders of the Russian government which I hope to be able to publish, and which will throw much light upon this subject."

"Are you in sympathy with the Fenian plots of this country?" asked the reporter.

"I am not sufficiently acquainted with their methods and purposes to answer that question. My entire attention has been given to Russia, and although I recognize a brother in a socialist, I do not know the aims of this class in America, and I do not desire to identify myself with them. My object is striving for a general congress of delegates elected by a universal suffrage to frame a universal constitution which the people themselves may adopt. The nihilists do not even set forth a programme; they simply ask that the people be granted the liberty to establish their own form of government. The nihilists will oppose nothing that the people may desire. The Czar has inaugurated his administration with such a policy that would be difficult to institute a change. I do not consider it possible for any liberal change to occur under him, but I do consider it highly probable that after his death there will be an internal agitation that will result in popular liberty. There were eight attempts to kill Alexander II.; only one succeeded. One thing is apparent; Without the aid of a greater number of people it is impossible to maintain a party as exacting in its requirements as the nihilists are; the entire people must be enlisted. If the nihilists were trying to accomplish their aim through terrorism alone I would have doubts, but the increasing misery of the people increases the spirit of revolt, and consequently other causes than our own are at work. If this spirit of revolt, of self-preservation, does not make progress in Russia that country will in a few years become a desert, since the percentage of death is much larger than that of birth."

"How long since you were in Russia?"

"I was there three weeks ago. Oh, it is an easy matter; I can go there at any time by the aid of my friends."

THE INDUCTION BALANCE.

Prof. Bell is working diligently upon his electrical apparatus for discovering the presence and locality of bullets in a human body, with a view of trying it upon the president as soon as the latter becomes strong enough. Bell's induction balance consists of coils of wire, there being two coils, one each of two spools or cylinders so arranged that electricity is induced from one coil to the other, and by arranging the coils at proper distances from each other the current of electricity is perfectly balanced by induction. When a piece of metal is brought near one set of coils it disturbs the balance. This disturbance is a once indicated by means of a microphone and clock-work indicator, the interruption being marked by the checking of the escapement of the clock. This apparatus has been used with success in analyzing metals.

Prof. Bell's idea is to apply it to the location of bullets. To do this, he has been obliged to remodel the whole apparatus, with a view of increasing its sensitiveness. He is endeavoring to improve on it so that it will be affected by a bullet four or five inches below the surface of the body. This improved apparatus has coils arranged on cylinders so that they can be moved about the body like cups or the hand pieces of a galvanic battery. Prof. Bell hopes to get the coils so nicely arranged that they will be sensitive to disturbing influences at some distance from them. The sensitiveness of the indicator has been increased by using a little thin strip of metal and a magnet. When the currant is interrupted, each interruption is noted by a vibration of this thin strip, and the apparatus is so finely constructed that the interruptions are indicated at a rate of one hundred or more a second. Vibration of the strip makes a musical sound. When the apparatus is placed in position in the White house, the coils only will be in the president's room. The battery and indicator will be in a room in the basement, connected with the president's room by wire. There will also be a telephone connection between the two rooms. When the exploring coil is passed over the president's body, one of the operators will have his ear at the trumpet of the telephone. The instant the musical sound is heard through the telephone, the position of the coil will be noted. This invention has never been used by surgeons yet, but several experiments have been tried by Prof. Bell upon persons having bullets in their bodies. These experiments were only partially successful in indicating the location of the bullets, but they served to point out improvements necessary to perfect the apparatus.

A FRIENDLESS PRISONER.

The Star publishes an interview with Gen. Crocker, warden of the jail, about Guiteau. Gen. Crocker said, speaking of Guiteau: "There has been no events in his life during the past week that is worthy of mention. He eats, sleeps, and wakes up like any other prisoner. No one has come to see him from the day he was brought here. No one has manifested any friendly interest in him. He does not seem to have any friends. His brother-in-law was here, but he did not appear to take any special interest in him. There was no animosity shown, however. If his mother or brother or any of his friends come to see him, I would let them see him, just as I would do in the case of any other person. The only people who have been here to see him are those who came out of mere curiosity. Guiteau is as quiet as any other prisoner. He seems to have made up his mind to patiently await the result. He has not asked for a lawyer; he has not asked to see any one. I asked him if he wanted a lawyer. He said: "No, not at present." He claims to be a lawyer himself. He knows enough not to talk; he is sane enough for that. He hasn't even expressed a desire to talk with anyone except Mr. Bailey, the stenographer, who has been taking his statements. He has sometimes asked to have him come. There is no such thing as solitary confinement in this jail; there is separate confinement. Guiteau can hear other prisoners talk, and can talk with them, though he is separate from them. The guards talk with him on subjects connected with his prison life, but not about the president. Nobody here wants to talk with him about his crime. I do not think he has any knowledge of the president's condition. He reads a great deal."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Leo Hartmann, the noted nihilist, is known to be in New York, but is making ready to return to Russia with his comrades.

The track of the Erie road between Rochester and Corning was reduced to the standard guage in three hours on Saturday morning, 450 men being employed in the work.

Dr. Boynton states that the track of the original wound in the president's back continues to heal, and is now nearly closed. Secretary Blaine has discontinued his bulletins to Minister Lowell. Mrs. Garfield has given the Soldiers' home an inspection, with the intention of soon removing the president thither.

The Williams bandits, who are being tracked through the Wisconsin woods, tied a stolen horse to a tree and left it to starve. When found it had been several days without food or water, in which condition it was turned over to Sheriff Anderson, of Henderson county, Illinois.

The citizens of Meadville, Pa., have completed a railroad connecting that city with the Pittsburg and Erie road, which will be operated by the Pennsylvania Central.

The former treasurer of Stark county, Ohio, is serving a term of twelve years for a defalcation of $50 000. An investigation just made shows a deficit of $11,700 in the accounts of the present treasurer.

Ten thousand persons, including William H. Vanderbilt, assembled at Philadelphia to see Maud S. go against her Pittsburgh record. She made the first mile in 2:12, the second in 2:13¼, and the third in 2:12½, which is considered the greatest of turf achievements.

At Gunnison, Col., a stage-driver named Frank Shaw was fatally stabbed by an unruly passenger whom he had ejected near Echo City. The assassin fled into the mountains.

Steamship agents at New York are taking every precaution against the shipment of dynamite. As the result of a formal conference, O'Donovan Rossa has been deprived of the sub-agency of the Allan line.

Eight Indian scouts, headed by Buffalo Charlie and Yellowstone Kelley, with thirty bloodhounds hitherto employed on the plains by the government, have reached Wisconsin to join in the hunt for the Maxwell bandits in the Eau Claire woods.

The attorney general of Mexico decides that congress can annul railway grants if it finds that the president has exceeded the authority given him to act between the sessions.

In an American boarding house recently opened in the City of Mexico by an Englishman named Carmichael, Biscaino, a Mexican employed on the National railroad, was shot twice by the landlord for intimacy with his wife. Biscaino is dying in the hospital; the Carmichaels are in jail.

Secretary Windom calls upon the customs collectors at Boston and New York to make every effort to ascertain the identity of the consignor of the infernal machines which found their way to Liverpool.

In raking the Dominion for old 'uns, there were turned up Paul Guenard, of St. Augusta, aged 110, and Alexander McDougall, of Argenteuil, a member of the yeomanry cavalry in the Irish rebellion of 1798.

Nathan Clifford, one of the justices of the United States supreme court, died on Monday, at Cornish, Me., aged 78. He had twice been a member of congress, was attorney general in the cabinet of President Polk, and subsequently minister to Mexico.

In the case of Deputy Collector Brayton, of South Carolina, who is known to have been murdered by McDow, the moonshiner, the coroner's jury dared only to render a verdict of death at the hands of unknown parties. A reward of $300 for the butcher has caused the organization of several scouting parties.

The gauge of the Illinois Central extension to the gulf was on Friday changed to the standard width from Cairo to New Orleans. The track is 550 miles long, and 3,000 men completed the task in eleven hours, at a cost of $300,000.

Jack Hughes, one of the villians who served a term in Joliet prison for an attempt to rob the tomb of Abraham Lincoln, has been identified by James Cheasbro, of Cortland, Ill., as the person who knocked him down and took $400 from him.

Four masked men, heavily armed, entered the farm house of Robert Marvel, near Indianapolis, robbed the aged couple of $630 which they had concealed in an upper room, and tied them up so securely that they, could not release themselves for hours.

The Pennsylvania road has cut the rate to Chicago to $6, in which the other lines soon joined, the scalpers selling at $8.00. The Grand Trunk road continues to sell tickets from Boston to Chicago for $5, but the Albany and Tunnel lines have raised their rate to $9.50.

An attache of the Chinese embassy was interviewed at Cheyenne on the withdrawal of the students from the American schools. He stated that his government would hereafter send its young men to England, France, or Germany, beyond the reach of the progressive ideas taught in the United States.

A journalist of Peoria claims to have discovered that the infernal machines shipped to Liverpool were manufactured in that city and charged with dynamite in New York. On the contrary, a maker of burglar-alarms in the latter city announces that he constructed the clock-work for a mysterious customer last winter.

In the belief that the carpets in the president's room secreted too much dust and absorbed impurities from the atmosphere, they were taken from the floor, after the president had been removed to another chamber, overlooking Lafayette park. Dr. Boynton predicts that the president will be out of bed in ten days.

The warden of the jail at Washington says that with the exception of a brother-in-law no one has called to see Guiteau since his incarceration, and no letters come for him. There is nothing peculiar in his actions. He reads the bible and the constitution of the United States more than any other books in the library.

Bishop Philip Klingen Smith, a participant in the Mountain Meadow massacre, whose exposure of that atrocity caused the execution of John D. Lee, was found dead in a prospect hole in Sonora, Mexico. He expected to be killed by the Mormon church, and the circumstances indicate that his prediction was correct.

Among the candidates for Justice Clifford's vacant seat on the supreme bench are ex-Attorney General Devens and Chief Justice Gray, of Massachusetts. It is thought that the appointee will be from New England, and each state in that section will have one or more applicants.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

BROOKLYN.

With the end of harvest comes Saturday night racing, and no degree yet marked by the thermometer exempts horses from the whip, or people from exhibitions of cruelty. Why any village should be made an arena for all that is disagreeable for the price of four hundred dollars per year is a mystery. I don't want to be thought guilty of cramming an advertisement, but I wish to say that being one of a population of six hundred, my share of the money is 66⅔ cents. Any one is welcome to the fraction if they will take the show off my hands. Will some of the gentleman get their slates and figure out the local value of a nuisance.

Dr. Porter is home from Colorado, but will return there and take Mrs. Porter with him in the fall. We shall miss them but they are willing to exchange us for more profitable friends. The other tourists are still absent, but will no doubt become as crazy about the west and its wealth as he is. Those who dispensed with western travel, relieve restlessness by frequent excursions to camping grounds around the lakes.

A mania for universal freedom in dress is becoming epidemic. Limp bathing suits may be fanciful toggery to the eyes of the unsophisticated fish, but their taste could be cultivated by a view from the bank. If they have any musical talent, they could sing The Half was never Told, without instruments from Boz.

Some unknown friend has sent me a copy of Among the Clouds. I regret that I am not measuring mist fringe between earth and sky, but the tameness of safety is recreation easier attained by

PEARLIE.

ADDISON.

The cool pleasant days and nights enjoyed at present are in pleasing contrast with the hot and oppressive ones of last week.

Just now there is a little lull in the farming ranks which causes more activity in town.

Revs. Bray and Charles are both sick at this writing, the latter being in a truly dangerous condition.

Elder M. Hartley, of Ohio, preached at the M. E. church Sunday afternoon.

The long continued stove suits between Messrs. Hewitt and Primmer, of this place, are at last brought to a close, Mr. H. holding the disputed property.

The new horse barn erected on the lot occupied by E. S. Lapham was removed last week to J. W. Crandall's place, east of town.

Rumor says that the organization of Addison brass band No. 2, is on foot. The movement is one upon which it is advisable to think before acting.

Sick ones are becoming the rule in these parts instead of the exception.

CLINTON.

Albert Pulcipher is on the sick list.

D. H. Silvers is breathing Detroit atmosphere this week, and visiting friends there.

Henry Chandler is improving slowly.

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor" is a commandment which seems to have been forgotten of late, or purposely violated by a certain "Priest" of this village, in some of his recent able discourses. Be sure there is not a "beam" in your own eye, Mr.

Mrs. J. E. McCollum, Mrs. D. H. Silvers and others from here and at Tecumseh are pic-nicing to-day, Wednesday, at Blood's grove, 1½ miles below Tecumseh, eating fried lamb, Boston baked beans, succotash, etc., having a jolly time as it were.

Rumor says that Ed. Clark is to occupy his father's new store when finished with a brand new stock of notions, candies, cigars, etc. Here's luck, Ed.

A new barber shop is to be opened shortly in the Reynold's block. This time by a "sticker"; at least we have his word for it. Says he is going to stick till fall anyhow, which is as long perhaps as his purse and grit will last.

Bob Terryberry is the master meat seller in this section. He started out Tuesday with a half beef in his ambulance cart, and sold every ounce, bone and all, in less than two hours. Next trip he takes two beeves.

PICKPOCKETS were plenty at Adrian on Tuesday last.

RIDGEWAY.

Ladies missionary society held a very pleasant social at Mrs. D. W. Force's last week Wednesday.

Mrs. Ella Burch, of Jackson, is visiing her sister, Mrs. L. Rappleye.

G. P. Waring has got his new hearse home, and can produce as fine an outfit as any in the county.

Dan Wiggin lost five or six fat hogs one day last week from the heat.

Lightning struck By. Beals house a few days ago but did no serious damage.

Richard Adams had a cow killed by lightning last week.

Hon. G. P. Waring has been spending a few days in the shade at Petoskey.

Irv. Osborne has shipped six cars of lumber from Britton's within a week.

The name of the station will be changed to Balch, after the Wabash takes possession of the road.

THE NEW SCHOOL LAW.

A very important question has arisen under the new school law, as to whether township superintendents can examine teachers prior to the organization of the board of examiners on the 23d of August. The question raised is pertinent from the fact that a number of schools in the county commence about the middle of this month, for which teachers have been engaged, but who have not been examined, an examination being necessary before the teachers can assume their duties. County Clerk Hunter addressed a letter to the Superintendent of Public Instruction, asking his opinion thereon, and received the following reply:

LANSING, August 4, 1881.

Thos. M. Hunter, Esq., Adrian:

Dear Sir—Your favor of August 2, is at hand, and in answer I would state that the law seems somewhat obscure in regard to who may examine during the interim between the election of examiners and the organization of the board, and from its provisions it appears that during the present year, there is really no one authorized to examine and license teachers during that time. The chairman of the boards of inspectors were authorized to examine and license teachers only until the examiners were elected and qualified. As the examiners may qualify at any time after election, the exact time of the termination of the inspectors' powers is not a certain matter; consequently I am of the opinion that the only way out of the dilemma, is to let applicants for certificates wait until the board has been organized. If any district desires to commence school before that time, let it then employ a teacher who holds a certificate already granted.

Resp'y, V. B. COCHRAN,
Sup't Public Instruction.

P. S.—Until the examiners elect do qualify by filing oath of office, the chairman of boards of inspectors may continue to examine and license teachers for their respective townships.

Clinton News: On Monday afternoon this section of country was visited by a very severe storm of wind, rain and hail. The violence of the storm seems to have been spent in the eastern part of the village, the storm moving in a southeasterly direction. It commenced to rain about 3 o'clock and lasted about forty minutes, during which time over two inches of water fell. During about twenty minutes of the storm, hail fell in large quantities, stripping the growing crops and nearly ruining the gardens in the eastern part of town. The window lights also suffered considerably. Eighteen or twenty sections of stained glass in the windows of the Congregational church were broken, and a large number in various parts of the village. A half mile west of town it did not rain at all.

Adrian Times: Good progress is being made on the north hall of the college buildings. The windows are about all in, and the plastering is in a forward state. Part of the building will undoubtedly be ready for occupancy the first of September. There is an encouraging prospect of an increased attendance the coming year, the names of new students already sent in being considerably in excess of any previous year.

We wish to say to the public as a general answer to several inquiries that we never furnish or publish a testimonial of Arthur's Elixir of Sulphur which is not genuine and true. The immense number we have, and the positive assertions of wonderful cures of Lung Diseases, may have caused the inquiry. B. F. Arthur & Co., Proprietors. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

TECUMSEH PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The Annual Announcement, for '81-'82.

The annual circular of the Tecumseh Public Schools, containing a list of the teachers for the coming school year, the form of its organization, terms of admission, rates of tuition, nature of examinations, relation to other schools, synopsis of the course of instruction in the primary and grammar grades, outlines of the high school courses, calendar for 1881-'82, list of text books, rules and regulations, list of the graduates from the high school since 1866, and statistics of attendance during the past year, will be issued in a few days from the HERALD job rooms.

COURSES OF STUDY.

There are three distinct courses of study in the high school; a Latin Course which prepares students for the B.L. Latin course of the state university; a Scientific Course which is preparatory to the B. S. course of the university; a General English Course, which is, also, preparatory to the B. L. English course of the university.

The Latin and Scientific courses indicate all and only the work required of pupils for admission to these departments of the university. The Scientific Course provides for two years of Latin and two years of German. Students not preparing for the University will be allowed to substitute an equivalent of English or Scientific studies for either Latin or German.

The English Course has been extended to four years, and does not provide for the study of any language except English. It is quite complete in its provision for the study of English language and literature, mathematics, history, natural and political science. It is by far the most practical course for those who do not intend to continue their study beyond the high school, and it also provides a full and complete preparation for those desiring to enter the English course of the university.

The arrangements with the normal school are such that upon certificate from the superintendent students may receive full credit there for work completed here, without special examination.

Adrian college proposes to award a scholarship to the student in the graduating class who completes the course with the highest honors. The one receiving it is not required to use it if he does not desire to do so.

Diplomas of graduation will be presented to those completing any of the prescribed courses. Certificates will be given upon the completion of any study.

Studies may be selected from any of the regular courses but students will generally find it to their advantage to enter some regular course as soon as possible.

EXAMINATIONS.

Candidates for admission to the different grades will not be required to undergo any severe examination, only such as will enable the examiner to decide whether the candidate is able to do the work of the proposed grade.

Those applying for admission to the high school should come prepared to pass an examination in practical arithmetic, spelling, geography, English grammar and United States history.

In the grammer and high school grades, written examinations will be held at the middle and end of each term's work, and at such other times as the superintendent may direct.

OFFICERS AND TEACHERS.

		Term Expires.
Lucius Lilley,	Assessor,	Sept. 1881.
S. C. Stacy,	Director,	" "
David McNair,		" 1882.
Samuel Catlin,		" "
E. B. Wood,	Moderator,	" 1883.
William Hayden,		" "

The following named teachers have been engaged for the ensuing year:

High School:—

Miss Louise C. W. Kahler,	A Div.
Miss Margaret E. Morton,	B Div.

Grammar Department:—

Miss Georgiana Carman,	8th Grade.
Miss Alice S. Wimple,	7th "
Miss Mary Frazer,	6th "
Miss Minnie E. Keeney,	5th "

Primary Department:—

Miss Manie M. Monaghan,	4th "
Miss Metta McBride,	East Br'ch.
Miss E. May Henderson,	West "
Miss Nannie Kyle,	North "

FAVORABLE AUSPICES.

These teachers have been selected with special reference to their qualifications for the respective positions, and the success of the schools, so firmly established, will not only be maintained but augmented. The favorable auspices for the coming year lead the school board to expect a liberal share of the public patronage.

Students who have gone to the university from the Tecumseh high school have invariably been successful in their examinations and have stood among the foremost in their classes.

STATISTICS FOR 1880-'81.

The following table contains the principal statistics for last year by departments:

GRAIN AND FRUIT PROSPECTS.

The Detroit Post and Tribune of August 4, contained a report, by counties, of the condition and prospects of the grain and fruit crops in this State. The report is prefaced by a summary from which we clip the following:

The reports are marked for their favorable tenor. It was expected that the wheat crop would be a light one, but the results of the harvest in almost every instance are unexpectedly promising. The yield for the State will be much better than the most sanguine estimates of May and even June, while the quality is invariably superior to that of several past seasons. The yield is very uneven; not a few fields throughout the State give a very large crop, viz: 25 to 30 bushels to the acre, while others are scarcely worth harvesting. The general estimates range from 10 to 16 bushels to the acre, with an average of about 12 to 13 bushels for the State at large. The "official" acreage May 1, 1881, is say 1,800,000 acres; this would give an estimated yield of 21,600,000 to 23,400,000 bushels for the State, or about three-quarters of a crop, upon the basis of 30,000,000 bushels for an average one. We believe "official" returns when collected next year will show the crop not far in amount to that estimate, viz: from two-thirds to three-quarters of last year's product.

The oat crop has now been secured in excellent condition, and is reported to be among the largest and best ever harvested. Corn is generally doing well and, with favorable weather, promises a good yield. Latest returns relative to potatoes are also favorable with very few exceptions. In some parts of the State the drought is almost unprecedented, and unless rain falls soon this product will suffer.

Apples will be a light crop, as also will peaches. Relative to the first, however, reports from quite a number of points are unexpectedly favorable. Among these we notice returns from Battle Creek, Hastings, Ovid, Corunna, Buchanan, Bellevue, Benton Harbor, Capac, Holland, Allegan and Tekonsha, as also are estimates for Berrien and Eaton counties at large.

Hudson Post: Mr. Cooley the man who was shot last week by his son, and who was afterwards held for trial while his son was released, was bro't before Justice Hiller, Monday, but as no charge could be brought against him he was discharged. The boy was arrested the same day at Adrian; and will likely be sent to the asylum.—Mrs. Bailey, a friend of the Cooleys, called on the Post reporter last Saturday, and stated that Mrs. Cooley and the girls were in no way to blame for the acts of Cooley, that he was a wretch in every respect and made as much trouble in the family as he possibly could; that rather than have her name brought before the public Mrs. Cooley had patiently stood his abuse. She said that he (Cooley) was the cause of the boy's sickness, and also the cause of the daughter he was whipping at the time of the accident being a dwarf.

THE END OF A BACHELOR.

Not a laugh was heard, nor a joyous note,
As our friends to the bridal we barried,
Not a wit discharged his farewell joke,
As the bachelor went to be married.

We married him quickly to save his fright,
Our friends from the sad night turning;
And we sighed as we stood by the lamp's dim light,
To think him not more discerning.

To think that a bachelor free and bright,
And shy of the sex as we found him,
Should there at the altar, in dark of night,
Be caught in the snare that bound him.

Few and short were the words we said,
Though of cake and wine partaking;
We escorted him home from the scene of dread,
While his knees were awfully shaking.

Slowly and sadly we marched adown
From the top to the lowermost story;
And we have never heard from or seen the poor man
Whom we left alone in his glory.

Power of Imagination.

Many persons are sick merely from the effect of imagination or habit, the old woman for example, who has been bed-ridden for years with her rheumatics. She was left alone one summer day at the farm-house. She saw a mad bull tearing across the pasture in the direction of the house, and feeling that it was "neck or nothing" she bounced out of bed in double-quick time, barred both doors and never complained of rheumatism afterwards.

Many cases are given in medical journals of persons who have been bitten by dogs and have afterwards taken to foaming at the mouth, shuddering at the sight of water, and imitating a dog's bark, imagining that these are signs of hydrophobia, and have actually died in convulsive agonies, the facts being that mad dogs don't foam at the mouth, never bark and can drink water "like a fish." So far from running about in desperation as if a hundred thousand dilapidated tin-pans were tied to their caudal prolongations, really mad dogs are the quietest individuals in the world, make no noise, seem to want to be alone, keep their mouths shut, the distinctive symptoms of such madness being great restlessness, pawing the face and eating their own fresh rejections. Mad dogs do not run after people, but will snap at any one who comes in their way, especially individuals of their own kind; they seem to trot or run as if looking at something straight ahead. Infinite mischief is done in publishing cases of persons becoming hydrophobic, one, ten and even twenty years after the last remembered biting of a dog, the reporters of such tales not having taken pains to inquire if there had not been a later biting. Such monstrous absurdities are well calculated to keep nervous persons who have once been bitten by a dog in a state of wearying uneasiness all their life long afterward. If a person has been bitten by a dog supposed to be mad, the animal should be put in a quiet room and let alone, only slipping in food and drink from time to time; if really mad, death will take place in a day or two, and if not mad a complete recovery will ensue. Only one bite in twenty of dogs supposed to be mad is fatal.

A dog in New Jersey last year bit a woman and ran under the sofa; her husband dragged him out by the tail, held him up and whipped him; in this position the dog got a chance of biting his master, who died in a few days of hydrophobia; this shows that the state of mind of the animal gives virulence to the bite. A mother nursing her infant child was thrown into a sudden tempestuous rage; as soon as it was over, she finished nursing the child, which was at once taken with convulsions; the state of mind of the mother imparting virulence to the milk of her bosom. A lady saw at a distance a window sash falling immediately on the ends of the fingers of her little grandchild; the child's fingers were crushed; those of the grandmother were similarly affected. This is given on the testimony of the distinguished Dr. Brown Sequard. The lesson is, seek to control the imagination and to guard against mental excitement by habituating the mind to take a calm, measured and deliberate view of all the circumstances of life. Intelligent people should bear these things in mind. The greatest throat-swabber of the age began to think he had sore throat too, and swabbed himself every day; when he died, his throat was found to be as well as anybody's.

The best way to escape imaginative diseases is to be just as busy as you can in doing something useful, profitable or good; to have the mind fully employed in some commendable object; it is thus that the washerwoman is oftener happier than the wife of the millionaire, the hod-carrier than he who has "retired from business."

WHY HE WOULDN'T TRUST HIM.—A printer recently walked into a certain business house on his rounds to learn who desired anything in the way of advertisements, and noticed that a drummer stood by the counter with his sample valises ready to open.

"Anything you want to say in the paper this week?" quried the printer of the man behind the counter.

"No," said the business (?) man; "I don't believe in advertising; I wouldn't give a cent for any amount of advertising."

The drummer waited until the printer was half way to the door, and then slowly taking up his sample valises, remarked:

"Well, that lets me out. I do not care to sell on time to any man who in this age does not believe in advertising. I perfer to deal with live men. When I want to strike up a trade with a dead man, I will go to the graveyard and swap tombstones. Good day, sir."

THE FAMILY SCRAP-BOOK.—In many papers which you do not care to preserve you will find items of interest which are worth saving. To meet this case, make a scrap-book. You can get from a junk dealer, some old books with good binding, as, for example, old ledgers, day-books, journals, etc., of defunct firms, or public reports of all descriptions. Always index the contents of your book. You will find it tedious work, but it is worth a mine when done. It is not a bad plan to cut slips from political papers from time to time, which represent your views, give you an idea of how men change, and will tend to make a man less partisan. On all accounts a scrap-book is invaluable.

Two very important events in the life of man are when he examines his upper lip and sees the hair coming, and when he examines the top of his head and sees the hair going.

The Lyre Bird.

One of nature's singular and beautiful freaks is found embodied in the lyre bird, an inhabitant of the mountains of Australia. It seems strange enough to find this large bird classed with the wren family, those tiny warblers of English hedgerows, but science pronounces them of similar construction, however different in appearance. The name of lyre bird has been bestowed on account of the resemblance of the tail feathers of the male to an ancient lyre, but the natives of Australia call it bullen bullen, in imitation of its wild, shrill cry. The color of its plumage is rich rather than brilliant. Mostly of a dark brownish gray, it is brightened by red on the throat and the short feathers at the base of the tail.

It is very shy in its habits, choosing haunts among the thickly-wooded cliffs which are almost inaccessible to the most daring hunter. Its nest is generally placed in the crotch of some tree very near the ground, as it is not a bird of lofty flight, and loves best to hide among the low undergrowth of the forest. Its nest is roughly built of sticks and leaves, of a round form, with the entrance on one side, and seen from a little distance resembles a heap of forest rubbish tumbled together by chance; but, inside, nothing could exceed the softness and delicacy of the feather lining supplied by the mother bird. In this downy nest she deposits one single egg of ashy gray spotted with brown. As she only nests once a year, it is natural these birds should not be very numerous. They are generally found in isolated pairs, and the male jealously resents any infringement upon his domain, fighting with a good will any other suitor that may dare to cast eyes on his lady. This jealously is often made use of by the natives to entrap the bird. They fasten a tail from some captured bird upon the head, and conceal themselves in the bushes, more sufficiently to give a natural swaying motion to the feathers. When the male sees the appearance of a supposed rival, he advances, furious for battle, and falls an easy prey to the hunter.

The lyre bird might properly be called the Australian mocking bird, for besides its own pecular note, it imitates the song of other birds, and even human voices. A saw-mill was at one time situated among the Australian mountains where these birds were known to have their haunts. On holidays, when the mill was stopped and all was still, from out the wild, unbroken forests came sounds of human laughter and singing, barking of dogs, even an imitation of the rough, rasping noise of the saw, mingled with notes of all kind of birds, and at intervals the sharp, shrill bullen-bullen, which betrayed the lyre bird as the imitative singer. Efforts have been made to raise the young of the lyre bird, but they invariably droop and die after a few months of captivity.

Household Peril.

Under this head the Boston Journal of Chemistry names several dangerous substances which find their way into households. There are two or three volatile liquids used in families which are particularly dangerous, and must be employed, if at all, with special care. Benzine, ether and strong ammonia constitute this class of agents. The two first named liquids are employed in cleansing gloves and other wearing apparel, and in removing oil stains from carpets, curtains, etc. Liquids so highly volatile will flash into vapor as soon as the cork of the vial containing them is removed. Their vapors are very combustible, and will inflame at long distances from ignited candles or gas flames, and consequently they should never be used in the evening when the house is lighted. Explosions of a very dangerous nature will occur if the vapor of these liquids is permitted to escape into rooms in considerable quantity. In view of the great hazard of handling these liquids, cautious housekeepers will not allow them to be brought into their dwellings, and this course is commendable.

As regards ammonia, or water of ammonia, it is a very powerful agent, especially the stronger kinds sold by druggists. An accident in its use has recently come under our notice, in which a young lady lost her life from taking a few drops through mistake. Breathing the gas under certain circumstances causes serious harm to the lungs and membranes of the mouth and nose. It is an agent much used at the present time for cleansing purposes, and it is unobjectionable if proper care is used in its employment. The vials holding it should be kept apart from others containing medicines, etc., and rubber stoppers should be used.

Oxalic acid is considerably employed in families for cleaning brass and copper utensils. The substance is highly poisonous, and must be kept and used with great caution. In crystalline structure it closely resembles sulphate of magnesia or Epsom salts, and therefore frequent mistakes are made and lives lost. Every agent which goes into families among inexperienced persons should be kept in a safe place, and labeled properly and used with care.

Outdone by a Boy.

A lad in Boston, rather small for his years, worked as an errand boy for four gentlemen who do business there. One day the gentlemen were chafing him a little about being so small, and said to him:

"You will never amount to much; you never can do much busines; you are too small."

The little fellow looked at them.

"Well," said he, "as small as I am, I can do something which none of you can do."

"Ah, what is that?" said they.

"I don't know as I ought to tell you," he replied.

But they were to anxious to know, and urged him to tell what he could do that none of them were able to do.

"I can keep from swearing!" said the little fellow.

There were some blushes on four manly faces, and there seemed to be very little anxiety for further information on the point.

A cheerful temperament is no doubt an excellent thing, and it may be cultivated both mentally and by wise attention to physical health. But it will not prevent nature from sweeping men away by earthquake, plague, and famine, without mercy or justice. It will not alter the grim facts of the dispensation, and as the dispensation is, so men will see it, not in their convivial hours, but in their serious and reflecting moods, which make the grand tone of life. In the characters of the greatest men, and those who have done most for the race, the element of sadness has predominated, though beneath it there was a cheaper spring of joy.

Hints About Rural Homes.

Happiness is the grand aim of life, and to secure its fullest blessings we must cultivate the mind and all the graces of the spirit. We always associate leisure, innocence and peace with rural life, combined with the kindred joys which competence and contentment bring. Almost our first thought of a country home is one of pure air, green earth, gentle breezes laden with the breath of many flowers and whispering pleasure, and where every shade promises cool and sweet repose. The thought of a rural home is full of promises of the fond ideal and of cherished meditation. Every person of sentiment reverts to the country with pleasant anticipations; it is a feeling inbred in our very natures. Fields, meadows and groves, singing-birds and fragrant flowers, running brooks and grazing herds, are ever the delight of mankind.

Money-making is not one of the incentives of a country residence upon which a practical or a sensible man builds ardent hopes. Nor does a man of sound judgment seek a country home upon which to foolishly squander the fortune his industry and economy have enabled him to accumulate through years of toil and sacrifice and self-denial. But it is the place where he can realize the cherished tastes of cultivated thought, refinement and study—the place where his fond ideals, long anticipated, become the real enjoyments of rational realities—the quiet abode of retirement and of domestic ease—the place of rest—the place where the altar is sacred to the affections, and where love radiantly reigns supreme, and peace spreads even the frugal board, and joy is reflected from face to face, making home happy—where freedom and independence proclaim the man king, the woman queen, and their darlings princes and princesses, in this rural kingdom. Here the greatest fortune is the wealth of domestic affection, and the sweetest sounds the cadences of loving hearts. It is the bower of retirement and the home of the family.

Our rural homes should be as beautiful as our purses and tastes will enable us to make them. If our means have provided ample space for a comfortable house, it should be surrounded by lawn and ornamental grounds, planted with fruit and shade trees, shrubs, flowers, a well-appointed garden filled with the choicest vegetables for the use of the family; and if our resources and taste permit us to keep a horse, we ought by all means to keep a cow, as the care of keeping both will add but little to the man's labor who cares for the grounds and garden. If the family is large, and horses are kept, a good cow will be a comfort and a pleasant feature of the place at but little expense.

It will be better to have an experienced gardener lay out and occasionally superintend the garden and grounds, unless you can afford to keep a good gardener during the summer. Knowledge of gardening and lawn decoration is an accomplishment suitably becoming the lady and gentleman of any well-conducted rural home. For, unless the proprietors understand their business, both within and without doors, the employes soon become masters and mistresses of the situation, and the management of the place will be perverted to the interests of others. How much of the happiness of rural life depends upon the care bestowed upon the house, the grounds, the garden, the fruit, the flowers, the horse, the cow, and the birds by ourselves can only be estimated by him who has bestowed that care, and who reaps the pleasures flowing therefrom.

Presidential Finances.

Washington left an estate werth $800,000. John Adams died moderately well off. Jefferson died so poor that if Congress had not given $20,000 for his library, he would have been bankrupt. Madison was economical and died rich. Monroe died so poor that he was buried at the expense of his relatives in Baltimore. John Quincy Adams left about $50,000, the result of prudence. His son, Charles Francis Adams, gained a large fortune by marriage. Jackson died toleraby well off. Van Buren died worth some $300,000. It is said that during his entire administration, he never drew any portion of his salary, but on leaving took the whole $100,000 in a lump. Polk left about $150,000. Tyler married a lady of wealth and accomplishment, and died rich. Taylor left about $150,000. Fillmore was always an economical man and added to his wealth by his last marriage. Pierce saved about $50,000. Buchanan left about $200,000; Lincoln about $75,000; Johnson about $50,000.

Self-Improvement.

Propose to yourself a noble object; pursue it from motives that are high. Let what is best in you take the mastery. You will be ranked with the wise and good long before you are either.

And as you go on in the course of improvement, the idea of your better self shall become more definite, and the life of this idea of wisdom and goodness shall be dearer and stronger in you. You shall be named after the idea of your life; you are becoming so.

In all right courses of life, a man resolutely desirous of becoming a wiser, a better informed, better disciplined, more useful individual, will find his thoughts, both of the end and way, get clearer as he proceeds in his work. He sees more truly and more brightly what it is that he wants; he sees more fully the means for its attainment. And with better prospects, both of the end and way, there comes inward motives for the self-improving effort of the journey.

Big Trees.

Australian forests have produced two trees, the news of the dimensions of which will set our American cousins rambling through some of the forests they have not yet cut down, or will set their inventive faculty at work. Until lately a sequoia in the neighborhood of Stockton, in California, estimated to be 325 feet high, enjoyed the reputation of being the tallest tree in the world. But an official of the forests department in Victoria, Australia, measured not long since a fallen eucalyptus in Gippeland and found that it was 435 feet long from the root to the highest point of the branches. But even this is exceeded by another eucalyptus still standing in the Dandenong district in Victoria, which is estimated to be 450 feet from the ground to the top.

Can anyone tell why it is a man blows the foam off a glass of beer before drinking it?—Shreveport Times.

Give it up. Never saw a man drinking foam that had been blown from a beer glass.—N. O. Picayune.

Marketing of Potatoes.

There are two ways of disposing of this crop, both of which make it a profitable one to raise. The first is to market them, and the other, to boil and feed them to stock. Small potatoes are just as good for the latter purpose as larger ones, while the large ones will bring a far better price if the little ones are entirely picked out. Parties in town who buy them for home use are always willing to pay a good price for medium and even-sized clean potatoes, but grumble when small ones are mixed in. If farmers would pick them over, and use the inferior ones to cook for hogs, and market those of good size, they would find it greatly to their advantage.

When taking them to market, throw a quantity of hay in the bottom of the wagon-box, and then carefully put the potatoes in and cover them with a blanket or hay. Do not bring them in sacks or in the box without hay or straw, for in both these ways they become bruised, and look badly.

There is always a demand for good fruit and vegetables, and the farmer who brings choice potatoes, nicely picked over, to any market, will never lack customers, and will always receive the highest market price.

The National Live Stock Journal says: A slop made of green corn and oats, ground in about equal parts, with a little oil meal added, makes the best food for the sow while suckling to increase the flow of milk; and this with clover pasture and plenty of soaked corn through the summer will promote a healthy and rapid growth of the pigs.

A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

Singers and Public Speakers should use Downs' Elixir, as it removes hoarseness and increases the power of the voice.

OUR CHIP BASKET

A barber refused to color the mustache of an inebriated man because he did not want to dye a drunkard.

We should accustom the mind to keep the best company by introducing it only to the best books.

A weak mind is like a microscope, which magnifies trifling things, but cannot receive great ones.

When you are sick, it comes easy to promise all sorts of reformations; and when you recover, it is just as easy to forget them.

Our system of thought is often only the history of our heart. Men do not so much will according to their reason as reason according to their will.

Cunning leads to knavery; it is but a step from one to the other, and that very slippery. Lying only makes the difference; add that to cunning and you have knavery.

A string of opinions no more constitutes faith than a string of beads constitute holiness.

The same Bible that gives us the Ten Commandments, enjoins that charity which believeth all things, hopeth all things.

Sickness should teach us what a vain thing the world is,—what a vile thing sin is—what a poor thing man is, and what a precious thing an interest in Christ is.

The Bible does not need defence so much as proclamation. It defends itself wherever it is known. Deep in the soul there dwells forever a witness to the truth, whose clear eye and steady voice will see and respond to it wherever it is known.

Use sin as it will use you; spare it not, for it will not spare you; it is your murderer and the murderer of the whole world. Use it, therefore, as a murderer should be used; kill it before it kills you; and though it bring you to the grave, as it did your Head, it shall not be able to keep you there. You love not death; love not the cause of death.

A lady told her little son, who was teasing for something to eat, to wait until breakfast. With a tear in his eye, he burst out: "I jest honestly sometimes think you're a stepmother!"

"Why," asked a governess of her little charge, "do we pray God to give us our daily bread? Why don't we ask for four days, or five days, or a week?" "Because we want it fresh," replied the ingenous child.

A man went home the other evening and found his house locked up. Getting in at the window with considerable difficulty, he found on the table a note from his wife: "I have gone out; you will find the door-key on one side of the door-step."

One Sunday a Sunderland, Mass., superintendent, after the lesson was closed, asked the little boys the following question from the smaller question-book: "Who knows better than father or mother?" A little five-year-old promptly answered "I do."

Boyhood is candid, and middle age, though it may think the same things, is reticent. "What part," asked a Sunday-school teacher, "of the burial of Sir John Moore do you like best?" He was thoughtful for a moment, and then replied: "Few and short were the prayers we said."

A correspondent at Portland, Oregon, furnishes this of the "Heathen Chinee:" "John" had bought a watch at our jeweler's, but as it ran to slow, he took it back, saying, "Watchee no good." "What is the matter with it?" asked the jeweler. "Oh," said John, "watchee too muchee ticky-tacky b'm b'y."

"Professor," said the cheeky soph., "is there any danger of disturbing the magnetic currents if I examine that compass too closely?" And the stern professor, loving his little joke, promptly responded: "No, sir; brass has no effect whatever on them;" thereby scoring 3 against the unsuspecting man of cribs.

A Chapter on Flies.

The most irritating fly is the Spanish fly.

Flies are always on hand early in the morning.

You have all seen a kite fly.

Some people employ the blind to keep flies from the room.

I have often seen flies hand-cuffed.

The only popular fly—"shoo-fly."

Flies are like rivers; they are often dammed.

Stage flies are painted.

Butchers and grocers exhibit flies in their windows.

There are musical flies. People often speak of that base fly.

Wheat-Growing Maxims.

Somebody has been at the trouble of condensing a great deal of information about wheat-growing, as follows, into very small compass, and somebody else has set it afloat without giving credit to the author.

1. The best soil for wheat is a rich clay loam.
2. Wheat likes a good, deep, soft bed.
3. Clover turned under makes just such a bed.
4. The best seed is heavy, oily, plump and clean.
5. About two inches is the best depth for sowing the seed.
6. The drill puts in the seed better and cheaper than broadcasting.
7. From the middle of September to the last of October is the best time for sowing.
8. Drilled, one bushel of seed per acre; If sown broadcast, two bushels.
9. One heavy rolling after sowing does much good.
10. For flour, cut when the grain begins to harden; for seed, not until it has hardened.

A French Way of Washing Clothes.

Two pounds of soap is reduced with a little water to pulp, which having been slightly warmed, is cooled in ten gallons of water, to which is added one spoonful of turpentine oil, and two spoonfuls of ammonia; then the mixture is agitated. The water is kept at a temperature which may be borne by the hand. In this solution the white clothes are put and left there for two hours before washing them with soap, taking care in the meantime to cover the tub. The solution may be warmed again and used once more, but it will be necessary to add a half spoonful of turpentine and another spoonful of ammonia. Once washed with soap the clothes are put in hot water, and the blue is applied. This process, it is obvious, saves much time, much labor and fuel, while it gives to the clothes a whiteness much superior to that obtained by any other process, and the destructive use of the washboard is not necessary to clean the clothes from the impurities which they contain.

Where doctors have failed to cure, and have given their patients up to die, Electric Bitters have often been used, and a cure effected, greatly to the astonishment of all. Diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs are positively cured by Electric Bitters. They invariably cure Constipation, Headache and all Bilious Attacks. Try them and be convinced that they are the best medicine ever used. Sold by C.A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents a bottle.

COTTON-SEED meal is one of the richest vegetable substances used as cattle food, containing a large percentage of nitrogen and phosphoric acid; and this is why the manure of animals fed on it is so valuable. The process of digestion consumes the oil and other carbonaceous matter in the meal, leaving nearly all the nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash to be present in the excrements. In well known English experiments it has been found that while the manure from feeding a ton of hay is worth $10, that made from feeding a ton of cotton-seed meal is worth $18.

Better than Quinine. Few constitutions can stand the continuous use of quinine. It is not only a very expensive medicine, but will ultimately cause the patient to succumb to its powerful influence upon the nervous system. But if you want to get rid of Malaria and all Fevers of that nature use the Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters. The whole treatment for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

Irish bids fair to be put upon the list with the "dead languages." In a paper recently read before the London Statistical Society, it was stated that in 1871 the area in which Irish was spoken had decreased from 10,000 square miles in 1851 to 6,000, while the number of people speaking it had decreased during the same twenty years from 1,500,000 to 600,000, of whom less than 400,000 spoke Irish only. It is also said that throughout Ireland there are now probably not 5,000 persons who read an Irish book, and not a single Irish paper is being published in the country.

Some one has suggested that if the inventor of the phonograph would bring out a little machine to be attached to the door, which would say when the landlord called for the rent, "Come again next month," it would have a good sale. So it would, and if he wanted a name for it he might call it the postponograph.

Why an object of loathing and disgust to yourself and society from catarrh, when Sanford's Radical Cure externally and internally administered, will cure every symptom of the disease. Every package is a complete treatment. Only $1.

A cure for whooping cough—a teaspoonful of castor oil to a spoonful of molasses. Give a teaspoonful of the mixture whenever the cough is troublesome. It will afford relief at once, and in a few days will effect a cure. The same medicine relieves the croup, however violent the attack.

'I have suffered beyond endurance.' 'My life has been a burden to me.' 'I have been denied the pleasures of society.' Extracts from testimonials of those cured of skin and scrofulous humors by the Cuticura Remedies.

The only absolute specific we know of for sneezing, snuffing and choking catarrh or head colds is Sanford's Radical Cure, which for the small sum of $1 affords instant relief and invariably cures.—Medical Times.

PILES! PILES!! PILES!!!

A Sure Cure Found at Last. No One Need Suffer.

A sure cure for the Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr. Williams (an Indian remedy), called Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 and 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, Instruments, and Electuaries do more harm than good. Williams' Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching (particularly at night after getting warm in bed), acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for Piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

Read what the Hon. J. M. Coffinberry, of Cleveland, says about Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment: "I have used scores of pile cures, but it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave such immediate and permanent relief as Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment."

THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs, demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

DR. A. FRASER'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

ALL SORES, CUTS, BRUISES, SPRAINS, BURNS, SORE THROAT, LAMENESS, RHEUMATISM, PILES, INFLAMMATION of LUNGS and BOWELS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, SALT RHEUM, CHILBLAINS, AFFECTIONS of the SPINE, FEVER SPELLS, NERVOUS IRRITATION, and all disorders attendant with INFLAMMATION.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve, and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it cures readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should feel perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

Comets and politicians bear a striking resemblance to each other. They flash upon the firmament unexpectedly, have a brief but brilliant existence, and then vanish into space.

Dr. Tanner has been heard from again. He proposes to embark on another fast, and intends to hang on for ninety successive days. The sexton will have a job or the medical college a subject this time sure.

Mrs. Partington has been heard from on the new Revision. She does not believe in the reversed scriptur' at all. The conjunctions of the Bible as laid down by the inspirators in King James' time are good enough for her.

A shark has been discovered in a dock at Baltimore. Long Branch must look to her laurels. This favorite seaside resort will be eclipsed unless she can manage to get a shark too. A good shark would be a nice thing to interest the bathers.

Eight hundred cigar makers are on a strike in Detroit. Let the employers raise their wages at once and have done with it. If men will smoke they must pay for the luxury, and men who are obliged to roll cigars for a living should be well paid for their labor.

Vennor was a little off in his predictions for August. From the 2d to the 5th he prophesied "generally pleasant weather, with fairly warm days and cool to cold days and fall-like evenings and nights." If last Thursday and Friday were cool days with fall-like evenings and nights, may the Good Lord deliver us from any more summer weather this season.

Mr. Becker, of New York, can not sleep. After being informed of his wife's suicide, and being assured by the coroner that she had been properly cared for, the good woman drops in a month after to inform him that she had only been out shopping, and presents a batch of dry goods and milliner's bills for him to pay. Is it any wonder that Mr. Becker is somewhat restless?

The political campaign in Ohio is warming up to a white heat. The Democratic organs call the Republican candidate for Governor "Calico Charlie," and the Republican organs retaliate with the knock-down argument that the man who heads the Democratic ticket is "Pocketbook-walter." We are happy to know that the politics of Ohio are settling down upon a sound argumentative basis.

The question of prohibition has been fought out in North Carolina, and prohibition has gone to the wall. Parties were strangely mixed on the subject. The Democratic party organization favored prohibition, but a large minority of that party, united with the whole Republican strength and the solid colored vote, buried prohibition out of sight. After all, it was folly to suppose that prohibition could succeed in a State where turpentine and whisky grow wild in the woods.

One of the most cheering signs of the times is the remarkable business boom which is progressing in the Southern States. It is a fact that the South is flourishing as never before. Emigration and capital are flowing into that section from all quarters. Powerful syndicates have been formed among leading capitalists of the Eastern States, which have purchased the principal railroad lines in the South and are rapidly building new ones. They are reaching out for the control of the Southern trade, and by stimulating the building of new towns and cities are opening large fields for new business enterprises. It is estimated that during the past eighteen months over one hundred millions of foreign capital have been invested in the South in railroads alone. These investments have enriched local capitalists and placed in their hands millions of dollars which they are investing in agriculture, manufactories and other enterprises. This has given a marvelous impetus to all branches of business. No section of the country possesses so many advantages for enterprising business young men having a little capital to invest, as the belt of Southern States stretching from Virginia to Texas. If Greeley were alive now, he would revise his injunction and say "Young man, go South."

Gen. Hancock has been invited by the Secretary of War to command the troops at the Yorktown celebration, and has signified his acceptance. Gen. Hancock has been down into Virginia before and is pretty well posted on the lay of the land there. His selection is an eminently fit one.

In its issue of August 6th, the Lansing Republican contains a tabulated statement of the official canvass of the State board of canvassers of the votes given at the general election held on Monday, April 4, 1881, for Justice of the Supreme Court and for Regents of the University. Below we give a statement of the votes cast for the principal candidates:

FOR JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Whole number of votes cast	247,666
Isaac Marston	72,492
Augustus C. Baldwin	72,780
John B. Shipman	33,256
Charles G. Hyde	12,774

FOR REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY.

Whole number of votes cast	243,919
James F. Joy	127,532
Austin Blair	126,617
Geo. V. N. Lothrop	73,318

The funeral obsequies of the late Ex-Gov. John J. Bagley, took place from the family residence in Detroit last Sunday afternoon. It is estimated that over thirty thousand people attended the funeral or lingered on the avenue near by to view the procession as it passed. Every room on the ground floor of the spacious mansion was crowded with the personal friends of the deceased, not only Detroit being represented but also many places in the interior of the state. The floral offerings filled the parlors and perfumed the entire building with their fragrance. An address was delivered by Rev. T. B. Forbush, Pastor of the Unitarian church, and a personal eulogy by Justice Isaac Marston of the Supreme Court. The procession was an imposing one, being made up of Gardner's band, policemen, the different military organizations of Detroit, and nearly one hundred carriages. The deceased governor was beloved by all who knew him, and nearly all Detroit came out upon the beautiful Sabbath afternoon of his funeral to pay their tribute of respect to the memory of a noble man.

The President has suffered another relapse, although it is not considered a serious one. His condition on Sunday was not as favorable as it had been during the week, his fever running rather high, and intimations of a pus cavity presenting themselves.—Dr. Hamilton, who had intended to leave Sunday afternoon, remained over, and the surgeons were all present on Monday morning, when a further operation was decided upon. It was the unanimous opinion that his increased temperature was due to a tardy flow of pus. Ether was administered and Dr. Agnew performed the necessary operation. An incision was made at the mouth of the incision of two weeks ago in a downward direction and of larger size, making the pus channel below the twelfth rib instead of above it. By this means the channel of the original wound has a chance to heal up. The President was much more comfortable after the operation, but still he suffered with some fever on Tuesday and yesterday. The last pull-back only demonstrates more forcibly the theory of the HERALD at the outset, that the wound was a very dangerous one and his recovery must be slow and tedious.

Mr. Joseph Nimmo, Jr., chief of the statistical bureau, has lately made a detailed exhibit of the trade between the United States and foreign countries during the past twenty-five years. An examination of the figures in this report will disclose one of the principal causes for the great business prosperity with which we are blessed at the present time. During the fourteen years from 1860 to 1874, our imports exceeded our exports every year but one. In 1862 they were nearly even, with a small excess of exports. Since 1875 the excess of exports has been on the increase, and during the six years ending June 30, 1881, our exports have surpassed our imports by the snug little sum of $1,180,681,641. While the value of our imports has about doubled, comparing 1860 with 1881, having increased from $353,616,119 in 1860 to $643,593,219 in 1881, the value of our exports during the same period has nearly thribled, rising from $333,576,657 in 1860 to $902,319,473 in 1881. The subjoined table presents the excess of either exports or imports for each fiscal year from 1860 to 1881, inclusive:

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

A Little More Foolishness.

Detroit Evening News: The democrats and greenbackers had a chance to capture one of those vacated congressional districts in Maine, but they could not reconcile their differences, and nominated two straight candidates. This gives the district to the republicans.

Mighty Glad of the Chance.

Columbus (O.) State Journal: This fall's campaign is to be a still hunt on the part of the Democracy. That is the advice of Senator Pendleton. Able Democratic organs are to count as nothing. They have been commanded to hold their peace, and they are obeying the injunction like little men.

A Complimentary Back Down.

New York Tribune: We attempted to say yesterday that the Mississippi Democratic Convention was 'to meet' to nominate a candidate for Governor, but a printer with an unholy animosity toward the Democratic party made the observation read 'too weak.' If there is anything in this world which is strong it is a Democratic convention, and we do not wish to be put on record as denying that fact.

Rather Too Expensive.

New York Herald: One Ohio town has a great deal of difficulty in looking for a candidate to run on the temperance ticket. The temperance party has orators enough in the town, but the gentlemen who have been asked to become candidates object on the ground that it costs too much to treat the crowd.

A Heavy Responsibility.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The Republicans of New York State are depending on popular sympathy with Garfield to carry their State this year. While there is no doubt general sympathy with the President, it will neither make the entire country Republican nor unite the quarreling Republican factions. The responsibility for the attempted assassination of the President rests heavily upon his own party.

How Can This Be.

Chicago News: Senator Frye, of Maine, is out in a letter theoretically repudiating, but practically restraining, repudiation. The reader will ask "How can this be?" Easily enough. Senator Frye says that he repudiates repudiation, but nevertheless, when it comes to choosing between repudiators and debt-payers in Virginia—which is the practical part of the matter—he is for the repudiators. He is evidently strong in the faith, but weak in the practice of political morals.

Young Man, Go South.

New York Herald: There is no reason in the world why any man with a good constitution and a stout pair of arms, able and willing to work should not at the present time be in receipt of fair wages, be well fed and comfortably clothed. From all sections of the country there comes up the cry for workers—workers skilled and unskilled, workers in the mine and the factory, in the wheat fields of the West, and on the cotton plantations of the South. Europe is pouring in upon us the surplus of her population to an extent never before witnessed. A number of people sufficient to make one of the second class cities of the largest size have landed at Castle Garden alone during the past twelve months; but still the demand for workingmen and women is greater than the supply. Especially is this true in the South. That section of the country which has so long suffered from war and the wounds of war is evidently on the eve of a great industrial development. It is not improbable that in the near future the advice to the thrifty and the industrious will be not "Go West," but "Go South."

What Was Intended.

New York Sun: Suppose Mr. Lincoln, in pursuance of Booth's first plan, had been seized and carried away by the public enemy, would anybody have questioned the right and the duty of Mr. Hamlin to take up and exercise his authority? The captive President might have been removed no further than Arlington Heights, and might have been able to look into the very windows of the White House; but no human being would have thought of respecting an executive order dated in the camp or the prison of an enemy. On the other hand, it is perfectly clear that Mr. Lincoln's inability would have lasted no longer than this forcible detention. Had he been released by a fortunate advance of the Union arms, the powers of the office would have instantly attached to him again. In a case of a President confined to a sick chamber, and rigorously kept from the direction or even knowledge of public affairs, essentially different from the above?—Fortunately that condition appears to be nearly terminated, but should it continue, not merely for a month, but for a year, or for four years, what then? It was intended that this Government should never be for an instant of time without a responsible executive head. It was not intended that it should ever be managed by a council of irresponsible ministers, unknown to the Constitution, and who are designated by law merely and only as the secretaries of the President.

STATEMENT UNDER OATH.

A Startling Revelation of Suffering!

"Oh, My God, How I Did Suffer!"

"I have been afflicted for twenty years with an obstinate skin disease, called by some M. D.s Psoriasis, and others Leprosy, commencing on my scalp, and in spite of all I could do, with the help of the most skillful physicians, it slowly but surely extended, until a year ago this winter it covered my entire person in form of dry scales. For the last three years I have been unable to do any labor, and suffering intensely all the time. Every morning there would be nearly a dustpanful of scales taken from the sheet on my bed, some of them half as large as the envelope containing this letter. In the latter part of winter my skin commenced cracking open. I tried everything almost, that could be thought of, without any relief. The 12th of June I started West, in hopes I could reach the Hot Springs. I reached Detroit, and was so low I thought I should have to go to the hospital, but finally got as far as Lansing, Mich., where I had a sister living. One Dr. —— treated me about two weeks, but did me no good. All thought I had but a short time to live. I earnestly prayed to die. Cracked through the skin all over my back, across my ribs, arms, hands, limbs, feet badly swollen, toe-nails came off, finger-nails dead and hard as bone, hair dead, dry and lifeless as old straw. O, my God! how I did suffer.

"My sister, Mrs. E. H. Davis, had a small part of a box of Cuticura in the house. She wouldn't give up; said 'We will try Cuticura.' Some was applied on one hand and arm. Eureka! there was relief; stopped the terrible burning sensation from the word go. They immediately got the Resolvent, Cuticura and Soap. I commenced by taking one tablespoonful of Resolvent three times a day, after meals; had a bath once a day, water about blood heat; used Cuticura Soap freely; applied Cuticura morning and evening. Result, returned to my home in just six weeks from the time I left, and my skin as smooth as this sheet of paper.

THE WHEAT CROP.

The last issue of the Michigan Farmer has these observations on the wheat crop of the present year:

Returns from the new crop are still being received. From Ohio it is said the average yield will be a trifle less than the estimate of the State Board of Agriculture just before harvest. That estimate was 77 per cent of an average crop, and it is now put at 70 per cent.

Iowa reports announce half a crop of wheat this season, which was less than was estimated before harvest.

Illinois makes the poorest showing of any of the winter wheat States and her crop will be a very small one.

Indiana will have about two-thirds of an average crop, of good quality.

Wisconsin has a good crop of wheat generally secured in good condition, and the prospects there appear to be about the best of any of the winter wheat States.

In Europe the wheat crop will not turn out as well as anticipated earlier in the season. This is especially so in France and Germany. It is now said the French crop will be less than last year, and that she will have to import just as much or more than last season—about 56 to 57 millions of bushels. Germany has a poor wheat crop, and both rye and barley will also be short. The Russian crop is generally a good one, and that country will have a large surplus for export—from 30 to 40 millions of bushels more than last year. The English wheat crop is deficient, and that of Scotland very poor, while in Ireland the yield is excellent. The Egyptian crop, from which much was expected, has turned out badly, as has also that of Portugal.

Looking over all the reports received, Russia is the only country besides the United States that will have any considerable surplus to export, and these two countries will be relied upon to make up all deficiencies, which are estimated to be about the same as last year.

AN ERROR CORRECTED.

August 9th, 1881.

EDITOR HERALD:

In your last week's issue we wished to express our thanks to the physicians and others who attended Robert in his last illness. The statement that the treatment here proved unavailing is wrong. We called Dr. Jenkins in April, 1880, who was the first to express his opinion that he was suffering from hip joint disease, and he treated him accordingly, mitigating his sufferings very much. Last October he was able to drive over to Ann Arbor, when and while there consulted Dr. McLean, who agreed with Dr. Jenkins relative to the nature of the disease. He afterwards went to Ann Arbor for treatment because the accommodations were supposed to be better there than could be obtained at home, and remained there until within a week of his death, when he was brought home and placed under the care of Dr. Jenkins, who upon his death made a post-mortem examination which verified the opinion expressed by himself and Dr. McLean. The statement that we were burdened for many months with Robert conveys an entirely erroneous impression; nor do we wish such an impression conveyed to the public. He never seemed to us a burden nor never could have. We would again express our thanks to one and all who aided and sympathized with us in our affliction.

Deerfield Record: Blissfield's common council have settled the suit for $20,000 damages against that village, of Dr. Cassidy, by paying his attorneys $500. The large amount for damages claimed by Dr. Cassidy, who it will be remembered was seriously injured by falling through a defective sidewalk last fall, has considerably frightened the Blissfieldites, and they can congratulate themselves on getting off so cheaply. They will probably keep the walks in good condition hereafter.

DEATH OF DR. L. M. GOODRICH.

The following tribute to the memory of the late Dr. L. M. Goodrich, of Corunna, is taken from the last issue of the Shiawassee American. It was prepared by a friend of the deceased in Clinton. Dr. Goodrich had many friends in Tecumseh who will sincerely regret his departure, and extend their sympathy to the bereaved relatives.

The remains of Dr. L. M. Goodrich, who died at Corunna, July 27, 1881, aged 29 years, 6 months and 7 days, son of George W. Goodrich of this place, were brought here from Corunna, for interment, accompanied by his bride of eight months, a lady friend Mrs. Tanner, his father and his pastor, Rev. Geo. Atchinson, who conducted the services, which were held at 10:30 Sunday morning. The church was filled to overflowing by sympathizing friends. The pall bearers were selected from his class mates at Tecumseh. The choir sang at the opening "I would not Live Always," and then Rev. G. Wilson offered a very touching and appropriate prayer. His pastor delivered a deep and impressive discourse, closing with a beautiful tribute to the deceased. The remains were followed to the grave by a large procession, numbering fifty-four carriages. As the coffin was lowered the choir sang that selection so dear to sorrowing ones, "Shall we Meet Beyond the River.

To us the occasion was one of great solemnity as we laid away our dear friend until the resurrection morn. We trust that Jesus was with and leading him to promised glory. We desire to express our sympathy with his bereaved young wife, father, mother and three sorrowing brothers. We cannot, as of old, restore the son to his mother and friends, nor would we if we could, for we believe "for him to die is gain." We trust that his spirit rests in that radiant clime, where death is unknown and where farewell words are never spoken. We would not call him back to earth if we could, but rather say, "sleep on, dear one, thou art but another tie to draw our spirits heavenward." We will meet again where no parting comes and sin cannot enter. We cannot blot out from the memory of the sorrowing ones the thought of their bereavement, nor would we if we could, but we can extend to you our prayers, and plead the great comforter to come to your lonely hearts and homes, knowing that we have a strong arm to deliver. Let us trust Him ever, and at evening time it shall be gloriously light.

The meeting was called to order by the President, and Dr. McCormick was appointed Secretary pro tem. A committee consisting of Drs Armstrong, Bruce and McCormick was appointed to write a short history of the deceased and draft resolutions of condolence.

Dr. L. M. Goodrich was born at Clinton, Lenawee County, Mich., Jan. 20, 1852. He spent his boyhood upon the farm, up to the age of 12 years, after which he attended the Tecumseh High School for two years, and then the Clinton High School for three years. At the age of twenty he began the study of medicine with Dr. A. W. Alvord of Clinton, and after three years spent in his office he attended the medical department of the University at Ann Arbor and graduated at the session of 1873. He began the practice of his profession at Unadilla, where he remained two years. He next removed to Corunna, leaving home for this place July 29th, 1879. Exactly two years from that date he was carried to his parental home a corpse. He married Miss Emma Mounteer of this city on the 1st of December, 1880. The marriage was a happy one, the young couple being very much attached to each other. He was taken sick about two weeks ago and despite the best of care and treatment of all that love could suggest or science devise, he quietly passed from life July 28, 1881.

Dr. Goodrich is the first of our little band who has been removed by death. He was most active in founding our society and has always been one of our most efficient workers. He was cut down in the morning of manhood, in the vigor of his years—the kind husband and friend, the skillful, warm hearted physician has passed to his rest.

Adrian Times, Aug. 6: Last night burglars entered the house of Geo. A. Wilcox. Mrs. Wilcox thought she heard footsteps in the night, but nothing was known of the visit until this morning, when Mr. Wilcox found his pockets rifled and some papers scattered on the floor. When he went to bed he had three cents and two jack-knives in his pocket. One of the knives was found out doors, so that the loss foots up three cents and a jack-knife. George is sure he had only three cents, because if he had had five he should have bought a cigar on his way home last night. His watch and chain lay on the mantle undisturbed.

Adrian Record, Aug. 6: Yesterday morning's Fort Wayne Gazette closes a lengthy notice of the arrival in that city of the water works committee from Adrian as follows: "We hope sincerely that the gentlemen from Adrian may find their stay in our metropolis pleasant and profitable, and that impressed by our fine system of water works, the Holly company may have another customer in the pretty little Michigan city, which is evidently bound to be a city not only in name but in very fact."

FRANK FULLER and daughter and Arthur Pratt, of Franklin, started last Tuesday for New York state to visit friends.

Death from Sunstroke.

Adrian Times: Three weeks ago last Tuesday Samuel Smith and family emigrated from England to Adrian, occupying part of the house of a relative on the corner of Beecher street and the Treat road. Smith worked a few days near the depot, but has been unemployed most of the time since he came here. He was a coal miner in the old country. Thursday he went to Jackson to look for employment in the coal mine, his son accompanying him. In the afternoon he went to the depot to take the train for Adrian. The boy says he stepped into the ticket office, leaving his father standing on the platform. In a moment Smith fell backward, overcome by the heat, to which he was little accustomed. He was picked up and carried into the depot, and a physician was hastily summoned. Smith then rallied sufficiently to sit up, and was placed on the train. On the passage the sick man suffered such a relapse that a physician was telegraphed for, and was found waiting at Tecumseh. The physician gave certain directions, and left medicine with the attendants, but it was impossible to make Smith swallow anything. A dispatch was then sent to Adrian, which was telephoned to Dr. Stephenson, who was speedily at the depot. Smith was then breathing heavily, and frothing at the mouth. He was taken from the car and carried into the shade when he immediately expired. The deceased was about 45 years of age. He leaves a wife and five children in rather destitute circumstances.

DIED.

He was born in Scotland, and lived there learning and working at his trade as shoemaker till 1855, when he emigrated to Canada. He resided there for about ten years and then moved to Detroit, living there until he moved to Tecumseh in 1873. About a year before he came to Tecumseh his health began to fail and his whole frame seemed to shake beneath the stroke of some wasting disease, until he became an invalid. For eight years he has been unable to help himself, and for seven years he has been totally blind. During all these years he has been carefully and willingly cared for by his wife and children, and with all his suffering might still have been called a happy man, never complaining and having only words of cheer for his good wife and children who were working for him. He lived by the motto, "God is good, and all is for the best," and patiently and cheerfully bore the burdens assigned to him.

Advice to a Young Man.

You want to remember, my son, that wearing twenty-two inches of coat propped out across only sixteen inch shoulders doesn't make a gymnast of you by any means, any more than a straight back, a measured step, and a Burnside hat with a cord and acorn give you a war record. There have been young men, aye, and old men too, before your time, who owed the tailor for their chest and shoulders, and owed them for a precious long time, too. There have been young men who could waltz for an hour and sixty-eight minutes without once sitting down to rest, who couldn't saw enough wood to warm a flannel cake, not if starvation stared them in the face and tried to drive them to it. Don't worry about your shape, son. Men will admire your crooked legs if your trowsers are paid for, and if your back is so lop-sided that you have to keep your helm hard a-port all the time to keep from walking around the block to starboard when you want to go straight ahead, you'll never think of it if you don't owe for the coat that lies in such ungainly, honest wrinkles across it. The man who doesn't owe a dollar is a rich man, even if he hasn't a crust to eat in the house. And don't borrow. If you can't get along without having more than you've got, don't borrow; steal. You'll feel better about it, and as a general thing, you will be more respected and less tormented.

A Hunchback's Industry.

A queer hunchback died at Rue Cuvier, Paris, at a comparatively advanced age, who, being rich, healthy and unmarried, spent his life in traveling and collecting statistics on the subject of people deformed like himself. He left a voluminous manuscript containing the fruit of his researches. He found hunchbacks most abundant in Spain, instancing a small hamlet in the Sierra Morena, where every thirteenth inhabitant was hunchbacked; next to this he found the deformity most frequent in the basin of the Loire. One person in a thousand was, he estimated, hunchbacked, hence, he arrived at the conclusion that there were 1,000,000 hunchbacks in the world whose humps—average twenty centimeters, or about eight inches each—would, if placed one above the other, make a pile 500,000 meters high, or as he placed it, as high as "ten Cordilleras, twenty-five Mont Blancs, plus all the Pyramids, plus all the spires of all the cathedrals in Europe." He formulates the theory that the form of the hump is in keeping with the general character of the surrounding country. He left directions for placing over his grave a marble fac-simile of his hump, with this epitaph: "Here lies a hunchback, who had a taste for humps, and knew more about them than any other hunchback."

About Jute.

Prof. Wiesher has proved, by accurate investigation, that jute fibre has a much greater disposition to undergo the ligneous change, and to darken with age like wood, than either flax or hemp—also that while damping with sulphate of aniline turns jute into a deep golden color, hemp gets only a pale yellow, and flax is scarcely affected at all. To distinguish jute, therefore, from flax or hemp, this test is sufficient; it happens, however, that other fibres are sometimes sold for jute, which in this respect have similar properties, and to come to an accurate determination relative to this point, a resort to the microscope is necessary. The fibre of jute is not, like that of other kinds, one hollow tube, but an agglomeration of several uneven tubes, or longitudinal cells, not closely connected, and sometimes with air spaces between them. Unlike, too, the fibres of flax or hemp, the sections of different fibres are very uneven, nor does the inner contour of the cell follow the outline of the outer surface, and thus the tube is of varying thickness.

Gold-Beating.

Gold-beating by hand is tolerably simple. The hammered metal, gold, brass or tin plate, is laid on a massive anvil and beaten with hammers; to produce the greatest expansion of the metal, the hammer and anvil must both be convex; the convexity of the latter is of great importance. The sheet becomes so thin after a short time that further beating must be done with the sheets between animal skins. Great care must be taken that the skin is perfectly even and covers the whole sheet, which must be smaller, so as to give room for extension. The beater endeavors never to strike twice consecutively in the same place, and moves the skin after every blow. It requires considerable practice to ascertain when the body of the metal has the required thinness, as a fold will be produced by any doubling, and the separation of the leaves, sorting, etc., must be done very carefully between tissue paper, and carefully protected from any draught. Gold leaf is beat out so thin, that 507 square inches of it weigh only one grain.

How to Keep Eggs Fresh.

A correspondent of the Lancaster Farmer writes: "It is sometimes desirable to stow away eggs in the summer or fall, when prices are so low that we cannot afford to sell them; they are often very scarce, and then will be keenly relished, or can be disposed of at a good price. To keep them thus we believe there is no more efficient way than the one I have always practiced, and which was successfully practiced by my father for the last thirty or forty years. This is by taking none but perfectly fresh and sound eggs and setting them in layers on the tip or small end, in a box or basket or anything that will hold eggs. We do not put anything between them, nor do we put them up air-tight, but always put them in the cellar. Eggs we have put away in this position are as good and fresh six months after as the day they were laid, and we have never found one among them that was spoiled or stale when thus served. We feel confident that they would keep good and fresh for one year.

One day Billy and Sammy were playing by a mud-hole, and Billy he said: "Now, Sammy, les play we was a barnyard; you be the pig, and lie down, and I'll be the bull, and beller like everything." So they got down on their hands and knees, and Sammy he went in the dirt and wallowed, while Billy bellowed like distant thunder. Bimeby Sammy he came up muddy—you never saw such a muddy little fellow—and he said: "Now you'll be pig and let me beller." But Billy he said: "I ain't a very good pig except for dinner, and it'll be time 'nuf for you to beller when yer mother sees yer close."

The Fate of Arctic Explorers.

Behring's Straits derives its name from Vitus Behring, a Russian naval Captain in the service of Peter the Great, who died from exposure on the Arctic coast nearly a century and a half ago. Baffin, whose name is borne by the bay which he discovered, met with a violent death. James Hall, under whom he had previously served, met a similar fate. Still earlier in date, Sir Hugh Willoughby, who sailed to discover a northeast passage, was with his whole crew frozen to death. Sir Hendrick Hudson became famous as a discoverer, and his voyage to the month of the river which bears his name was simply because his crew would not bear the severity of the northern climate. He afterwards discovered Hudson's Bay, and on his return voyage was the victim of a mutinous crew. Gosnold, who discovered Massachusetts and gave Cape Cod its name, died miserably on the James river. Captain Cook was slain and eaten by cannibals. Sir John Ross, who many years afterwards undertook an exploring voyage, was imprisoned in the ice for four winters and was only rescued by a Russian ship which happened to learn of his condition. The mysterious fate of Sir John Franklin hardly needs more than a mere reference here, but it may be added that Dr. Kane, who commanded the Grinnell expedition, was a martyr to his enthusiasm. The disease which he contracted while in search of Sir John Franklin carried him to his grave soon after his return. He died early, but had already won distinction and conferred honor upon his country.

MONEY—FARMS—ABSTRACTS.

If you want to hire money at very low rates.

If you have money to loan.

If you want to buy a farm or a home.

If you want to sell your real estate.

If you want a deed or mortgage correctly made.

Among other Farms for sale I have one of 160 acres and one of 80 acres in Palmyra both being well tiled and fenced, and first class in every respect, with four market towns within easy driving distance, in good neighborhood. Also 125 acre farm 1½ miles west of river road from Deerfield. Also 160 acre farm and 90 acre farm, and 20 acre farm in Riga, any of which are decided bargains, and good reasons given for naming low prices.

Every purchaser of Lands should insist on being furnished an abstract of title, for our experience of more than 20 years shows that not more than one title in ten is perfect of record, and every week purchases agreed upon are abandoned owing to imperfections of title. I have a good carriage or farm horse, 1300 lbs. in weight for sale at a bargain.

A few thousand dollars now on hand to loan at six per cent, and on long time if desired.

How to Avoid a Bad Husband.

Never marry for wealth. A woman's life consisteth not in the things she possesses.

Never marry a fop, who struts about dandy-like in his gloves and ruffles, with a silver-headed cane, and rings on his fingers. Beware! there is a trap.

Never marry a niggardly, close-fisted, mean, sordid wretch, who saves every penny, or spends it grudgingly. Take care lest he stint you to death.

Never marry a stranger, whose character is not known or tested. Some girls jump into the fire with their eyes wide open.

Never marry a mope or a drone—one who draggles through life, one foot after the other, and lets things take their own course.

Never marry a man who treats his own mother or sister unkindly or indifferently. Such treatment is a sure indication of a mean and wicked man.

Never on any account marry a gambler, a profane person, one who in the least speaks lightly of God or of religion. Such a man will never make a good husband.

Never marry a sloven, a man who is negligent of his person or dress, and is filthy in his habits. The external appearance is an index to the heart.

Shun the rake as a snake, viper, demon. Avoid him.

Finally, never marry a man who is in the least addicted to the use of ardent spirits. Depend upon it, you are better off alone than you would be tied to a man whose breath is polluted, and who is being destroyed by alcohol.

Salt for Poultry.

The question as to whether salt is injurious to poultry has often been mooted. To get at the true facts, I have been feeding salt to all my poultry, both young and old, and closely watching the result.

I have fed it in cold and hot mush, in bran and everything else, all the season, with the following results:

The poultry will eat all kinds of salted food in preference to unsalted; they have better general health; not a louse of any kind on young or old, (the first year I have been able to say so) and they are all beginning to moult, many of them laying as though not moulting.

Eggs are now cheap, and the hens will be ready for fall laying when eggs are scarce. This may or may not be the result of feeding salt plentifully to them, but I am compelled to believe it to be so, as are some other peculiarities.

I have noticed one feature which may not be in favor of salt. The hens have seemed to be more persistently inclined to set, it being more difficult to break them up.

All seem voraciously fond of all kinds of green food, and have eaten a large quantity of clover, grass, young corn, and similar food.

My observations lead me to the conclusion that salt is necessary for all poultry, and in most points beneficial. Pigeons are excessively fond of it, and why should not poultry be also?

The easiest way to succeed in everything is to undertake nothing but what you know you can accomplish; but the man who runs no risks accomplishes no great deeds.

The Cyclopaedia War.

The month of July, 1881, witnesses the completion of the largest and most important literary work this country and the century have seen. It is the Library of Universal Knowledge, large type edition, in 15 large octavo volumes, containing 10 per cent more matter than Appleton's Cyclopædia, at less than one-fifth its cost, and 20 per cent more than Johnson's Cyclopædia, at a little more than one-fourth its cost.

Chambers's Encyclopædia, which forms the basis of the Library of Universal Knowledge (the last London edition of 1880 being reprinted verbatim as a portion of its contents), is the laborious product of the ripest British and European scholarship. It has developed through a century of Cyclopædia making; its various editions having been many times revised, in successive years, till it has come to be universally recognized, by those competent to judge, as standing at the very front of great aggregations of knowledge and better adapted than any other Cyclopædia for popular use. It contains such full and important information as the ordinary reader, or the careful student, is likely to seek, upon about 25,000 subjects in every department of human knowledge. Chambers's Encyclopædia, however, is a foreign production, edited and published for a foreign market, and could not be expected to give as much prominence to American topics as American readers might desire. To supply these and other deficiencies a large corps of American editors and writers have added important articles upon about 15,000 topics, covering the entire field of human knowledge, bringing the whole number of titles under one alphabetical arrangement to about 40,000. Thus the work is thoroughly Americanized, and the Library of Universal Knowledge becomes at once the latest and most complete Encyclopædia in the field, at a mere fraction of the cost of any similar work which has preceded it.

Victory

For The

Price of the 15 volumes, complete, in extra cloth binding, $15.00. In half Russia, sprinkled edges, $20.00. In half Russia, gilt top, $22.50. In full library sheep, marbled edges, $25.00.

The superlative value and importance of this great Encyclopædia lies especially in the fact that it is brought within the reach of every one who aspires after knowledge and culture. It is really a library of universal knowledge. It brings a liberal education easily within the reach even of every plowboy of the country and apprentice boy of the city. Every farmer and every mechanic in the land owes it to himself and to his children that such a Cyclopædia shall henceforward form a part of the outfit of his home. To the professional man, and every person of intelligence in every walk of life, a Cyclopædia is a necessity.

Revolution

Of course the old and wealthy publishers who have grown rich (it is said that the Appletons have made a profit of nearly two million dollars on their Cyclopædia) from the sale of their high-priced publications are not pleased that their monopolies are broken and their power overthrown. Of course the book agents and booksellers who have been used to getting from 40 to 60 per cent commission for selling these high-priced books are not so well pleased to sell the Library of Universal Knowledge on 15 per cent commission, though those who are not short-sighted discover that their own interests, after all, are identical with the interests of the people, and their real profits, in the end, are increased by the immense sales which result from meeting the people's wants. The majority of booksellers, however, are better pleased to slander than to sell this and our numerous other standard and incomparably low-priced publications. But the Literary Revolution has always looked to the people, in whose interests it is, for its patronage, and it has never looked in vain, as our more than one million volumes printed last year (this year being increased to probably more than two millions) abundantly prove. You can order the Cyclopædia directly from us, and by uniting with your neighbors and friends you can secure club rates as follows:

$10,000 Reward

To Club Agents,

A discount of 10 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering at one time three or more sets of the Cyclopædia; and a discount of 15 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering five or more sets at one time.

As a special inducement to our friends and patrons to go to work promptly and vigorously, each doing what he can for the dissemination of universal knowledge, we propose to distribute $10,000 in special premiums as follows, in addition to the regular discount to clubs:

$5,000 Reward to be distributed equally among the first 500 club agents who send us clubs of not less than five subscribers, after June 15th and before September 1st.

$5,000 Reward in addition to the first $5,000 to be distributed among the 100 club agents who, during the same time, send us the largest number of subscribers, not less than twenty in number, the amount to be distributed proportionately to the whole number of subscribers which each of the 100 club agents may send us.

The names of the subscribers must in every case be forwarded to us. The first $5,000 named will be distributed as specified as rapidly as the orders are received, and the remaining $5,000 will be distributed promptly on Sept. 1st. The names of the persons receiving these rewards will be printed, with the amounts received by each, and the list sent to all the club agents entering into competition for them. Subscribers must be actual purchasers for individual use, to entitle the club agent to the rewards under this offer, and not booksellers or agents who buy to sell again.

Persons desiring to raise clubs may send to us at once for sample volumes, if they desire, in the various styles of binding, paying us 75 cents for the volume in cloth, $1.00 for the volume in half Russia, sprinkled edges, and $1.25 for the volume in library sheep. A MAN

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y

is The Great Connecting Link between the East and the West!

Its main line runs from Chicago to Council Bluffs, passing through Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Geneseo, Moline, Rock Island, Davenport, West Liberty, Iowa City, Marengo, Brooklyn, Grinnell, Des Moines (the capital of Iowa), Stuart, Atlantic, and Avoca; with branches from Bureau Junction to Peoria; Wilton Junction to Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield Eldon, Belknap, Centreville, Princeton, Trenton, Gallatin, Cameron, Leavenworth, Atchison, and Kansas City; Washington to Sigourney, Oskaloosa, and Knoxville; Keokuk to Farmington, Bonaparte, Bentonsport, Independent, Eldon, Ottumwa, Eddyville, Oskaloosa, Pella, Monroe, and Des Moines; Mt. Zion to Keosauqua; Newton to Monroe; Des Moines to Indianola and Winterset; Atlantic to Griswold and Audubon; and Avoca to Harlan and Carson. This is positively the only Railroad, which owns, and operates a through line from Chicago into the State of Kansas.

Through Express Passenger Trains, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, are run each way daily between CHICAGO and PEORIA, KANSAS CITY, COUNCIL BLUFFS, LEAVENWORTH and ATCHISON. Through cars are also run between Milwaukee and Kansas City, via the "Milwaukee and Rock Island Short Line."

What will please you most will be the pleasure of enjoying your meals, while passing over the beautiful prairies of Illinois and Iowa, in one of our magnificent Dining Cars that accompany all Through Express Trains. You get an entire meal, as good as is served in any first-class hotel, for seventy-five cents.

Appreciating the fact that a majority of the people prefer separate apartments for different purposes (and the immense passenger business of this line warranting it), we are pleased to announce that this Company runs Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars for sleeping purposes, and Palace Dining Cars for eating purposes only. Another great feature of our Palace Cars is a SMOKING SALOON where you can enjoy your "Havana" at all hours of the day.

Magnificent Iron Bridges span the Mississippi and Missouri rivers at all points crossed by this line, and transfers are avoided at Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Leavenworth, and Atchison, connections being made in Union Depots.

At CHICAGO, with all diverging lines for the East and South.

GOOD NIGHT.—How common place is this expression, and yet what volumes it may speak for all future time! We never listen to it, in passing, that this thought does not force itself upon us, be the tones in which it is uttered ever so gay. The lapse of a few fatal hours or minutes may so surround and hedge it in with horror that of all the millions of words which a lifetime has recorded, these two little words alone shall be remembered: Good night! The little child has lisped it, as it passed, smiling to a brighter morn than ours; the lover, with his gay dreams of the nuptial morrow; the wife and mother, with all the tangled threads of household cares still in her fingers; the father, with the appealing eye of childhood all unanswered: Good night! The seal upon days passed, and days to come. What hand so rash as to rend aside the veil that covers its morrow?

One had better sail boldly in almost any direction than drift without any destination at all. One had better sail in the maddest storm that ever troubled the sea of life, than lie on the sea and drift with any chance wind that happens to blow.—Ex. [A very good argument could be made on the other side.]

WASHINGTON NOTES.

THE STAR ROUTE MAIL SERVICE.

Second Assistant Postmaster General Bimer reports a net reduction in star route and steamboat mail service during July amounting to $314,664, and that the total amount of savings by reduction and discontinuances since March 4 is $1,381,442.

A CANARD.

A report has been started here that Postmaster General James contemplated resigning to accept the presidency of a loan and trust company, to be organized by Vanderbilt, in New York. James says there is no truth in it; that he has no thought of resigning.

IMMIGRATION STATISTICS.

The Consul General writes to the Department of State, under date of July 11, 1881, that the total number of emigrants from Bremen to the United States during June amounted to 17,238 and the aggregate of passengers for the half year ending June 30, 1881, amounted to 72,636.

A SUITABLE PRESENT.

District Attorney Corkhill received from Florida, Ala., a bundle of switches, principally hickory, accompanied by a letter advising that they be used on Guiteau, stating that authority for this course is to be found in an old book not much used now, called the Bible, and referring him to Proverbs: xii, 24.

RECLAMATION OF ARID LAND.

The Commissioner of Agriculture proposes to investigate in earnest what can be done to reclaim and render marketable the arid regions of the West, and has formed a commission, consisting of Prof. Hilyard (colored), ex-Gov. Furnasco, Nebraska, and T. C. Jones, Ohio, three of the most eminent scientific agriculturists in the country, to visit the region.

CHALMERS' DESIGNS.

It is confirmed here that Gen. Chalmers has announced himself as a greenback candidate for the United States senate in Mississippi, in opposition to Lamar. This causes some indignation among the democrats here, some of whom say it is a move of Chalmer's to get the votes of greenbackers, in the house of representatives, to keep him in his seat, which is contested by Lynch.

A DEAD LETTER.

Heap, chargé d'affaires United States legation at Constantinople, writes to the department of state that the Turkish decree against importation of American pork into the Ottoman dominion has passed into oblivion and become virtually a dead letter. A large consignment of American hams which arrived shortly after the date of the decree was, after passing the custom-house inspection and paying duties, entered for consumption.

THE YORKTOWN CENTENNIAL.

It is now understood that the French Government will be represented officially at the Yorktown Centennial. The French Consul at New York says he has received private advices from Paris to the effect that the people were very enthusiastic over the matter, and that the country might rest assured that the French nation is preparing a grand surprise for them. It is thought that at least two war vessels and special deputations of French citizens will attend.

REAR ADMIRAL FAIRFAX.

Rear Admiral Donald McN. Fairfax, who was expected to relieve Rear Admiral Howell of the command of the European station, has been excused from that duty, as he is desirous of being placed on the retired list of the navy. Rear Admiral Fairfax was appointed from Virginia, entered the service on the 12th of August, 1837, and has now been in the service forty-four years. He is now on duty at the Government Naval Asylum, in Philadelphia. He will be retired about the first of October. Commodore Nicholson will be ordered to the command of the European station.

THE CHINESE STUDENTS.

It is reported that instructions have been received from the Chinese government modifying the original order for return of Chinese students in this country. It is believed at any rate, that this order will ultimately be reconsidered. There is a suspicion that the refusal of our government to permit Chinese youth to enter our military schools in large numbers had something to do with the recent action of the home government. Then it is true that the boys showed an insubordinate disposition, which rather alarmed the special commission.

BUTLER AND GUITEAU.

A reporter asked Gen. Butler if there was any truth in the insinuation of an alleged newspaper of Chicago that he had some inside knowledge regarding the attempt to assassinate the President, and that Guiteau wanted him for his counsel. Gen. Butler said, in the deliberate way that at times characterizes his speech: "I know nothing in regard to the man Guiteau, his wishes, or his desires, save what I learn from the lying newspapers." The general looks better than he has for years, being apparently rugged, hearty, and good for some time yet.

MILITARY RESERVATIONS ON PUBLIC LANDS.

The attorney general recently rendered an opinion, which has been adopted by the secretary of the interior, relative to the right of the president to establish a military reservation on public lands. The attorney general holds that this power is conceded to the president by the courts and is sanctioned by various acts of congress; that such reservation may be made upon lands claimed for preemption settlers who have not made final proof and payment for lands, but that homestead entry segregates land from the public domain by original entry, and therefore a military reservation can not be declared upon lands entered under the homestead laws.

THE CAGED ASSASSIN.

Guiteau is described by the jail attendants as one of the most quiet and inoffensive prisoners in the jail. Whenever he knows what is wanted of him he complies cheerfully, and never utters a complaint. He sleeps well and does not appear at all stricken with remorse. All his wants are attended to in his cell. His hair is cut and his beard trimmed by the attendant. He does not appear over particular as to his food, the only point on which he insists being that he shall not be served with fat meat, so a piece of lean meat is picked out for him. He relishes his food and seems perfectly content with his meat, bread and coffee.

HARTMANN'S DANGER.

Assistant Secretary Hoit says that while there was no extradition treaty with Russia, still the government had the right to turn Hartman over to the Russian authorities, if they should request it, as a matter of international courtesy. Egypt gave Surratt to our government, Spain turned Tweed over to the United States authorities, Portugal delivered Arthur up at the Secretary of State's request. In Hartmann's case he would be delivered as a criminal, not a political refugee, if his crime was clearly proven and his identity established. The same thing might be done with the men who are manufacturing infernal machines if the machines cause destruction of property or life.

A JUG-HANDLED ARRANGEMENT.

Col. Thompson, Superintendent of the Railway Mail Service, says positively that the Postmaster at Montreal, Canada, is mistaken in saying that the United States uses Canadian bags, and that the use of each other's mail-bags by the two governments is reciprocal. Col. Thompson says this government does not use any Canadian mail-bags in transporting domestic mails. He has telegraphed to the Postmasters at Detroit and New York, asking them if they ever use Canadian mail-bags in sending through the United States, and is confident that they will reply that they do not. Col. Thompson says Canada uses our mail-bags, but we do not use theirs.

MAIL-BAGS.

Agents of the postoffice department who were ordered to investigate the use of United States mail bags in Canada visited the cities of St. Johns, Halifax, Montreal, Quebec, Toronto, Windsor, and Ottawa, and conferred with the Dominion postoffice officials. They found that a large majority of the mail-pouches in use belonged to the United States. The Canadian authorities have become convinced that the postmaster general was determined to break up the custom, and they are now manufacturing a large number of bags for their own use. Investigation shows that nine-tenths of the bags in use in Canada belong to the United States. The reports of agents show that the Canadian government has not hitherto had many new bags, but has relied almost entirely upon United States bags.

A SENSELESS REPORT DENIED.

The report that the President was induced to sign sundry commissions after he was wounded on July 2 is still repeated in certain papers. The afternoon and night before attacked by the assassin, in view of his expected absence, the President made a good many appointments which did not get formally published until after Guiteau had done his wicked work. Seeing the announcement after the shooting, a hasty inference was made that the appointments were made afterward, but the editors who made such an inference must have had a very inadequate conception of the deadly wound inflicted on the President, and the utter prostration that followed. So far from signing commissions after he was wounded, the President has not up to this hour exchanged a word, on public business with any human being.

THE INFERNAL MACHINES.

The First Assistant Secretary stated that the United States Government was wide awake to the importance of prompt action in regard to the shipment to England of dynamite infernal machines, and about which so much has been said lately. He said there had been official correspondence between this government and that of England on the subject, but of course he could not be expected to divulge its character. He said the British officials seemed to have made a great mistake in not keeping the discovery secret. Once the public knew infernal machines had been discovered, of course those implicated hastened to escape. The United States Government did not intend to let the people know what steps it was taking, for the simple reason it wanted its efforts, if possible, to lead to some good results. The matter was receiving careful attention, and as soon as a point was reached where the progress could be disclosed, the public should be informed of it.

THE LAWYER AND LECTURER.

All requests made at the jail for permission to see Guiteau, or even the rotunda, continue to be blandly refused. The fact that the military guard continues to be maintained indicates that the authorities apprehend some danger of an attempt being made to capture the prisoner or of his escaping. It is stated there are organizations in this city as well as Baltimore and Philadelphia whose members are ready to take the law in their own hands if they can get hold of him. One of the anonymous communications received by the District Attorney shortly after the attempted assassination notified him that a large number of young men of Baltimore had banded together for the purpose of punishing Guiteau.

Col. Corkhill was asked if Guiteau had secured bondsmen. "No," was the answer. It is inferred from the fact that Guiteau wants to be released on bail that he knows the President is recovering. Corkhill says: "He does not know it. There are, I suppose, many ways he could learn it. He knows also that it is thirty days since the President was shot, and he can readily reason from that that the President is probably recovering, as he must know he is alive."

THE NEXT SENATE.

Inquiry among democratic leaders and managers here, as to whether any protest or contest will be made against admitting Miller and Lapham, to their seats before organizing, shows that if any such action is contemplated by New York democrats, the party leaders here have not been informed of it. A very prominent democrat, who is associated with the national management of his party, said that he did not believe there would be any objection to seating Miller and Lapham promptly; that no charges of anything wrong had been made in connection with that election, and the only basis for any sort of objection would be in the fact that on one day's balloting less than a majority of state senators was present in joint assembly. He did not think a contest would be made on this point, and besides, he said: "If the democrats inaugurated that kind of warfare in the senate, republicans could and no doubt would retaliate in the house, where so many democratic seats are contested." A prominent democratic senator says he will not sustain any objection to seating Miller and Lapham, if any is made; that the constitutional provision that a state shall not be deprived of her representation in the senate will forbid him doing anything else than to vote for the prompt seating of both the New York senators.

AMERICAN PORK PRODUCTS.

The consular reports recently received from Europe by the state department furnish some very important observations regarding the war against American pork. Mr. John H. Stewart, consul at Antwerp, submits a translation of a circular letter recently issued by the minister of the interior to governors of the different provinces, and also a report of the superior council of public health, both relating to the present agitation of the trichinæ question. The superior council, after a thorough investigation of the subject, advises no restriction in imports and recommend the organization of a service of inspection. To obviate danger they say: To attain this it is sufficient to make it generally known by all possible means that pork meat eaten raw or not completely cooked may cause a disease serious and even fatal, and that it is important to observe carefully and attend to this simple precaution: (a.) The duration of boiling of pork meat previously cut ought to be prolonged for a calculated time, say of one hour per kilogram. Considering also that the addition of a small quantity of vinegar to the cooking water renders it more promptly efficient, (b.) The action of fire upon the meat roasted or grilled should be continued until from the thickest part of the piece there does not flow any pink juice. (c.) There shall not be used raw meat in any culinary preparation where it does not undergo the above-mentioned degree of heat in cooking. In strictly observing these precautions, they may be sure to continue to enjoy perfect freedom from any danger from trichinæ.

THE INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue Raum has addressed his annual communication to Secretary of the Treasury Windom. He says: "During the past fiscal year $135,224,902 was collected and paid into the treasury. The sum collected the past five fiscal years was $662,310,787, and the entire amount, without any loss by defalcation, has been paid into the treasury. The expenses of the internal revenue service the past fiscal year will be shown upon final adjustment of accounts not to exceed $5,025,360. The entire expenses the past five years was $21,993,310, being 3.35 per cent. upon the amount collected, and in the disbursement of this money there has been no loss to the government. This satisfactory result is due to the intelligence, capacity, and fidelity of the officers and employes of the internal revenue service to whom I desire to convey my appreciation of their laudable efforts to reach and maintain the highest standard of excellence. Taxes are assessed and collected in all the states and territories of the union. There are engaged in this work 126 collectors and 226 deputy collectors, with separate offices and that responsibility. There are, besides, 949 deputies, 993 clerks, 413 storekeepers, 116 storekeepers and gauagers, 698 guagers and 35 internal revenue agents, who are charged by law and regulation with important duties in connection with the assessment and collection of revenue. Increased knowledge of the laws and regulations by officers and taxpayers has contributed to greater harmony between taxpayers and the government. Firm enforcement of the laws has almost overcome organized resistance, and I believe the day is not far distant when internal revenue taxes will be collected throughout the country with as little friction as those of state, county, or municipality. District attorneys and marshals are entitled to commendation for their aid in enforcement of laws. I am of opinion, however, that greater certainty in prompt trial and punishment of the guilty by some of the courts of the United States would aid to materially reduce the number of offenses."

Four patients escaped from the insane asylum on Ward's island, New York, on Saturday night. This fact was first ascertained by several cries from Hell Gate for help. It appears that they set out to cross the Harlem river in a leaky scow, and it is probable that two of them were drowned.

Nathan Orlando Greenfield, who murdered his wife in October, 1875, at Oswell, N. Y., was executed at Syracuse on Friday. He clung to the claim that he was innocent. He was three times tried for the offense, at a cost to Oswego county of $50,000, and spent nearly six years in prison under the shadow of the gallows.

Dr. Tanner has located at Erie, Pa. He is preparing a proposition to the medical faculty of New York to fast for three months. Little that is deemed trustworthy can be learned as to the proceedings of the secret conference of Irish leaders which has been in progress in Chicago, but a person who was in attendance on Friday declares that the discussion covered the propriety of dynamite work in destroying British buildings and shipping in the interest of Ireland.

A guard smoking in the government magazine at Mazatlan, Mexico, dropped a spark which razed the structure and destroyed many houses in the vicinity. No less than seventy-five bodies were recovered by the citizens and soldiers, among the victims being District Judge Pena.

At Paso del Norte, Mexico, on Wednesday, Governor Terrazas drove a silver spike into the first rail ever laid from American to Mexican soil, and the first locomotive to cross the Rio Grande passed over. Governor Terrazas was escorted by a company of Mexican infantry and the city council. The Mexican Central road was represented by Superintendent George T. Anthony.

President Garfield was in a rather feverish condition on Sunday. It is intimated that there are indications of another pus cavity having formed. He reports himself as the sole survivor of a surveying party of fourteen at work south of El Paso, who were attacked by a party of forty-five Apaches, six of whom were killed and nine wounded in the fight. Lomprax was held for ransom, and taken down to the Gulf of California, whence he escaped to Guaymas. He will proceed to Washington to lay the facts before the secretary of state.

The Grand Trunk road has opened hostilities in the railway war from the western end of the line. All day on Tuesday tickets to Boston were sold for $15, the condition being that on presentation of the stub at Boston within sixty-four hours the holder would receive a rebate of $10. No retaliatory action has as yet been taken by the other roads; but of necessity they will be drawn into the fight.

A syndicate of American, French and German bankers has resolved to construct a canal from Baltimore to the Atlantic, across the peninsula of Maryland and Delaware, at an estimated cost of $8,000,000. Two men entered the Manufacturers' bank at Cohoes, N. Y., about noon on Tuesday, and, while one engaged the attention of the cashier by asking for change, the other calmly forced the door of the directors' room, stepped to the safe, drew out a package of $10,000 in currency, and started for the street. The discount clerk sprang after the robber and caused him to drop the money package, but he escaped to the woods. AROUND THE COUNTY.

SPRINGVILLE.

Sunday, the 7th, the Springville band returned after a three days' recreation at Beardsley's landing, Round Lake.

On Wednesday Miss Mary Booher returned from Detroit, after an absence of two weeks, leaving Miss R. S. Mosher still there to remain some two weeks longer. She says they have had pleasure connected with business and thinks it a lovely city.

On Thursday afternoon the Sons of Temperance had a social on Mosher's lawn; the evening program was well attended and was a financial success. On the same afternoon a social was held at the residence of our enterprising mechanic Marvin Ladd. A tramp put in his appearance in a perfect nude state, weight 12 pounds. They say he was joyfully received and well provided for.

On Saturday afternoon there was a Grange social held at the house of C. Greenleaf, and there was a crowd out for all well knew that there would be nothing wanting where my hostess Mrs. A. Greenleaf had charge. The Springville band was there by invitation, and gave some good music during the festivities of the occasion.

Miss Jennie Ousterhout, of Medina, is spending a few days with Miss Mary Booher.

Calvin Daniels has engaged Henry Mining to build him a splendid residence this season.

J. H. Smith is now engaged in remodeling the residence of C. A. Blackmar.

Buyers are plenty, engaged in buying all kinds of stock for shipment, paying a good price therefor. E. Ayres purchased over twenty spring calves the past week to go west. That kind of sale is not profitable for our farmers. There is more money in them by their growth for a year or more to come.

On Wednesday last Mrs. C. E. Ayers and Mrs. G. Lyman left town on a visit to their relatives at Patterson, New Jersey, and New York city.—They expect to be absent a couple of weeks.

BROOKLYN.

Picnics are the principle industry carried on here, and do not suffer from strikes. Whether delegates to Woods' conventions are union or non-union they eat about the same quantity of pickles and things, and keep some kitchen range aglow.

The business of sampling smut from every log this side of sundown, is a boy's divine inheritance, but it does seem as if the gift was over done when those of larger growth spend more than six days in a week competing for the prize patch.

Some camping youngsters from Clark's lake were doing this place yesterday, and its only an obscure hint at happenstances to say they were lively as emancipated lightning bugs.

Every style of hat, from an inverted squash blossom to a disintegrated hornet's nest nodded and wagged around Jim Dresser and his peanut and candy counter until he looked as nervous as only a caged bachelor can. It was too bad. Jim has just got home from a Leadville mining camp's seclusion, and they might have displayed a fig's worth of consideration for his sunburnt bashfulness.

Dr. Lyster, of Detroit, paid a Sunday visit to his family to-day. They are staying at his old home in the rectory. His brief return was rendered significant to the children by a swallow that dodged through an open window and flitted several times above his head. The minister preached from the text, "Despise not the day of small things," and the bird received his full share of attention in consequence.

PEARLIE.

CLINTON.

We are looking for orange blossoms soon.

The winged martyrs are now pursued with dog and gun.

Mrs. Eliza Davis to avoid the hay fever has gone to Saginaw.

Miss Rose Davis who has spent most of the summer here has departed for Vonia, Cass county.

Mrs. H. P. Pugh, with her two children have journeyed to Walworth, Wisconsin.

Henry Chandler, who has been sick for several weeks is slowly recovering.

It is reported that Hiram Reynolds is quite poorly.

Saturday George McConnell was taken with paralysis of the left side. At the present writing it looks as though he would not wield the blacksmith's hammer again.

Michael Gillen was taken with a severe attack of neuralgia in the stomach on Sunday. In twenty or thirty minutes he was insensible; but the doctors brought him out.

Albert Pulcipher's death was sudden, and the event cast a shadow over all this community. He was an exemplary young man, and his place in Clark's bank cannot be readily supplied.

Charles Henry has a harness shop in the south east part of Saline township, at Marvin Davenport's arm, where he is prepared to do all kinds of harness making and repairing on short notice.

Adrian Press: We recently mentioned the appearance of a worm in the sweet corn which was first called to our attention by Mr. J. R. Bennett, of this city. Since that time we have heard and seen a good deal more of the pest and it is noticed by our exchanges all through the State. The invader is an unpretending looking fellow about an inch long and makes his way to the ear through the silk at the small end. He begins on the first kernel he reaches and only advances when he has eaten all within reach. He devours usually in a circle about him but sometimes takes a straightforward course along a couple of rows for half the length of the ear. He appears to infest nearly or quite half the ears in a field and evidently prefers the softer kernels though he has the sense not to attack an ear till it has arrived at the "milk" period.

Adrian Times: A baggageman on the Jackson branch this week undertook to transport a baby cart from Adrian to Jackson, but the pesky thing fell out of the car door with the train at 40 miles an hour, and went tumbling down a steep bank. The unfortunate baggageman, when the train stopped at Jackson, at first thought lightning had struck him, but it was only the lightning of an indignant woman's tongue, who demanded a new cart and $10. The distressed man bought her one and pacified the baby owner without the X. Conductor Ketcham has since "raised the wreck" of the lost baby cart which is uninjured.

THE following remedy for cholera, cholera morbus and other kindred summer ailments is called the "Sun Cholera medicine" because of its having been published in the New York Sun some twenty years ago. It is warranted to cure in almost every instance. Take equal parts of tincture of cayenne pepper, tincture of opium, tincture of rhubarb, essence of peppermint and spirits of camphor. Mix, and take 15 to 30 drops in water, every 15 minutes or till relief is experienced. Dose according to age and severity of attack.

COLORADO LETTER.

GEORGETOWN, COL., Aug. 7.

EDITOR HERALD:

This is my first visit to Georgetown. The weather had become so unendurably hot at my home in Longmont, that I determined to "go up higher" and see if I could not find a spot somewhere in the mountains, where the mercury would manifest less ambition to rise in the world and where I could keep cool without resorting to the traditional Georgia costume, consisting of only a shirt collar and a pair of spurs.

Georgetown is peculiarly located. It is at the extreme upper end of the valley, through which one branch of Clear Creek flows. It is shut in on the south, east and west by almost perpendicular mountains, which rise from fifteen hundred to two thousand feet above the level of the streets. The actual width of the city from the foot of the mountains east and west of it, is a little fraction less than 1,600 feet, or about eighty rods. It has a resident population of about four thousand, although during two or three of the summer months, the number of "transients" would bring the actual population up to nearly six thousand. It is the county seat of Clear Creek county, and is the headquarters of one of the most productive mining districts of Colorado. I cannot learn the actual number of mines tributary to Georgetown which are now being worked, but conclude they must count up among the thousands. It has, I think, eight stamp mills, but greatly to my disappointment none of them are running during my visit. But fortunately the ore, sampling and reduction works were running, and in company with my friend A. Blackman Esq., I looked through it. The ore is brought from the mines to this establishment in sacks made of strong canvass cloth, and holding I should judge, from a peck to a half bushel each. These are loaded on the backs of pack mules, or Jacks, excepting in cases where the mine is accessible with wagons, which is seldom the case. When arrived at the Sampling Works, it is weighed, then crushed or broken into small lumps by a heavy iron stamp, then run between two iron cylinders from which it comes about as fine as a coarse grade of corn meal. A small sample of this meal is then assayed, and from this result the assayer is able to fix its value per ton. After deducting from its gross value the milling expenses, the miner gets his cash for all the ore he brings. The process does not materially differ from the wholesale buying of wheat, where a man buys a million bushels without examining or even seeing more than a small sample.

The city is supplied with an abundance of the purest water in the world, by a system of water works owned and operated by a stock company. A mammoth reservoir located five hundred feet above the city affords a pressure sufficient to extinguish any fire that may occur in any part of the town. As a result, the thickest portion of the business streets are dotted here and there with little wooden rookeries standing close up against costly brick blocks. If one of these cabins happen to take fire, as frequently happens of course, instead of letting it burn up, as it would do if they waited for the fire department to arrive on the ground, somebody attaches a hose to the nearest hydrant and squelches the incipient conflagration before it makes any headway. For the same reason they have no established "fire limits," but every man builds of wood, brick, or stone in the thickest portion of the business streets, just as he prefers.

Owing to the peculiar location and surroundings, the temperature of Georgetown is cooler in summer and warmer in winter than at Denver. In consequence of this fact it is fast becoming a popular winter resort for tourists and invalids. Walled in as it is on three sides by almost perpendicular mountains more than one thousand feet high, it cannot be otherwise than comparatively free from those fierce storms of wind and dust, which detract greatly from the attractiveness of Denver as a place of winter resort. And even during the hottest part of the summer, there are only three or four hours in the middle of the day during which the heat is oppressive.

The first discovery of silver in this part of Colorado, was made in 1864, only about eight miles from this city. Since then the face of the mountains on both sides of the valley have been completely honeycombed with tunnels and prospect holes; only a few of which comparatively are now being worked, or have ever yielded any profit to their owners or claimants. "Many are called but few are chosen." The great majority of miners spend their lives in prospecting, going from place to place with pick and shovel, digging holes a few feet in depth and then abandoning them, rich in expectations but poor in purse, always just on the point of "striking it rich," but never reaching the full realization of their hopes. This is the hard sad fate of the many, while the fortunate few amass princely fortunes. The more I see of it, the less am I inclined to engage in mining; for not one in a thousand ever makes the cost of his "grub," excepting those who work by the day or month for parties owning or operating mines which are already productive.

And still, there is no other occupation in which men ever engage, unless it is systematic gambling, which possesses such a strong fascination for one class of minds, as prospecting for gold and silver. They know that there have been persons who have become millionaires through some fortunate discovery of mineral in these mountains. If others, why not they also? And so they willingly deprive themselves of all the privileges of society and the comforts of home, and toil like slaves year after year, sustained by the barest possibility of at last "striking it rich."

There are several points of interest within a few miles of Georgetown, but I visited only two, the mines at Silver Plume and Green Lake. I visited the latter yesterday, but have only time to say of it that it is a beautiful little sheet of perfectly clear water, half a mile long and a quarter of a mile wide, situated at an elevation of 10400 feet above the sea level, and nearly two thousand feet higher than Georgetown, although only two and a-half miles distant from it. But to do full justice to the exquisite beauty of Green Lake and its surroundings would require more space than this letter will occupy. But it is "a thing of beauty," and whoever has seen it and sailed over its placid bosom, will find the recollection of it "a joy forever."

A SERMON IN RHYME.

If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him. Yes, and let him know
That you love him, ere life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow.
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead!

If you hear a song that thrills you,
Sung by any child of song,
Praise it. Do not let the singer
Wait deserved praise long.
Why should one who thrills your heart
Lack the joy you may impart?

If you hear a prayer that moves you,
By its humble, pleading tone,
Join it. Do not let the seeker
Bow before his God alone.
Why should not your brother share
The strength of "two or three" in prayer?

If you see the hot tears falling
From a brother's eyes,
Share them. And, by sharing,
Own your kinship with the skies.
Why should any one be glad
When a brother's heart is sad?

If a silvery laugh goes rippling
Through the sunshine on his face,
Share it. 'Tis the wise man's saying—
For both grief and joy a place.
There's health and goodness in the mirth
In which an honest laugh has birth.

If your work is made more easy
By a friendly, helping hand,
Say so. Speak out brave and truly
Ere the darkness veil the land.
Should a brother workman deer
Falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness,
All enriching as you go—
Leave them. Trust the Harvest Giver,
He will make each seed to grow.
So until its happy end,
Your life shall never lack a friend.

THE OPERATOR'S STORY.

The 6:20 evening train, No. 39, was over an hour late that night. Cause enough, Heaven knows. For twelve hours the storm had raged, and now, instead of showing any signs of breaking, the rain came down in torrents from an inky sky, and the thunder rumbled ominously overhead. A bad storm to drive an engine through, as anybody would have known, and the wonder is that No. 39 was not three hours late instead of one. Old Luke Granger, the trustiest, nerviest engineer on the road, rounded the curve just below Red Ravine station at twenty-six minutes past seven. I breathed a sigh of relief when I saw the headlight cut a hole in the darkness. The second station-bridge might have given way in a storm like that, and I was beginning to get nervous over this thought.

Somehow everything made me nervous that night. It was just the kind of weather when things look all out of gear, anyway. Then, I suppose, the knowledge of that money-package being due and its failing to come on the 11:30, as it should have done, had its effect on me. I didn't relish the idea of keeping $13,000 in cash until the next day. Eldridge & Ricketson had been down themselves to meet the morning train, and, if the package had come, I could have turned it over to them at once, and that would have been the end of the matter. But it didn't come. That's a way things have in this world when you most want 'em.

There wasn't a soul at the station that night except myself, and there were only two passengers who got off the train. I speak of 'em that way, not meaning to be disrespectful or make light of solemn things; only it's habit I suppose; for most, people would say there was only one one passenger got off at Red Ravine, seeing that the second of 'em was carried out of the express car in a wooden box. Usually, when a body was coming on, I got word of it beforehand, but this one took me quite by surprise, and added not a little to the nervousness I already felt.

"Who was it?" I asked, as the box was carried into the station.

The passenger who got off the train, and who was a stranger to me, answered my inquiry:

"The body is that of my sister-in-law," said he. "She was the niece of Thomas Eldridge—doubtless you know him. Her death was very sudden. She is to be buried in Mr. Eldridge's lot, here."

"Then I suppose the body is to be left in my charge until to-morrow?" said I.

"Yes," answered the stranger. "Do you suppose I can get to Mr. Eldridge's myself to-night?"

"Well," I replied, "it's a good four miles, and in such a storm as this—"

"I'll wait until to-morrow," interrupted the stranger. "There is some sort of a hotel here, isn't there?"

"Yes, a good one. You'll have to foot it, though; but it's only a matter of a quarter of a mile, and you can't miss your way, for the road up the hill leads straight to the house."

Here I made my way out onto the platform again and made my way to the express car, where the money-package, which all along I had secretly hoped wouldn't come, was delivered to me by the messenger. As he gave it to me, he said:

"You'll wan't to keep a sharp eye on that, Billy. There's enough in it to make one of your Red-Ravineers put a bullet through your head and never give you the chance to object."

"I'll look out for the Red-Ravineers, and the package, too," said I confidently enough. But, if the truth had been told, I didn't like the suggestion which the messenger had made.

The train moved off quickly, and I swung my lantern, as was my habit, by way of biddtng good night to old Luke Granger. Then I went into the little station house with the package clutched tightly under my rubber coat, expecting to find the man there who had come on with the body. But he had gone, being anxious no doubt, to get to the hotel as quickly as possible. No. 39 was the last train that stopped at Red Ravine until 6:10 the next morning. So my work for the night was done, and I had only to lock up the doors, see that things were all right about the place, and sit down to my newspaper in the little room which served as my sleeping quarters.

Twenty years had passed since I first found myself installed at Red Ravine as telegraph operator in the railway station. Being content with the humdrum sort of life, I had come to attend to all the work which the place required. That is, I was the ticket agent, the baggage-master and the keeper of the station, besides acting for the express company and continuing my charge of the telegraph key. These combined labors made it pretty close work for me, but they all yielded a very comfortable income; and, as I was troubled with no unsatisfied ambitions, I counted myself well fixed. As I have intimated, I slept in the station, partly from choice, for, being a bachelor, and without kin, I had nothing to attract me elsewhere. My duties had grown a second nature, and I had lived in the little town so long that the younger generation had come to speak of me as "Old Billy." That was, I suppose, because my hair was getting gray and my joints a trifle stiff.

The Red Ravine station was a wooden building, about forty feet long by twenty wide. It was divided into two compartments, the larger one being for freight and baggage, and the smaller one for passengers. My own little room was only a piece partitioned off from the freight quarter, about ten feet square, and connected by a door with the box of an office in the passenger room, which served both for selling tickets and holding the telegraph key. In this latter apartment, also, was placed the old-fashioned iron safe, in which I locked up valuable express packages when any happened to come to Red Ravine. The village, I ought to explain, had grown up entirely through the influence of the great iron-works of Eldridge & Ricketson. There were rich beds of ore a few miles to the north, and these, as well as the big foundry, which employed four or five hundred hands, were controlled by the firm I have mentioned. There had been some trouble at the works—a strike or something growing out of delay in paying the men their wages. That is how it happened that the $13,000 money package came into my keeping for a night.

Well, when I had made all snug about the station, and got off my wet clothing, I sat down comfortably with pipe and newspaper, to enjoy my customary reading. The storm outside continued to rage more and more fiercely, but within things were cozy as could be. I had a blazing fire in the stove, a cheerful light, an easy chair, plenty of good tobacco—the one luxury in which I was really extravagant—and a fresh newspaper. Certainly, these were pleasant surroundings for an old fellow like me, and, as a rule, they yielded as much solid comfort as a man has a right to expect in this world. But that night things seemed all out of gear, as I have said. My pipe didn't soothe me as was its wont; try as I might, I couldn't get interested in the newspaper; an uncomfortable feeling of dread—a feeling that some shadowy but horrible thing was about to happen—possessed my mind.

"It all comes of that pesky money package," I muttered to myself. "Why couldn't it have got here on the 11:30, and save me the job of keeping it over night?"

Just at that moment came a terrific clap of thunder, and a flash of lightning vivid enough to make the lamp seem dim. I had locked up the package in the safe, and put the key—there was no combination lock—in my pocket. But I had not the largest faith in the security of the old safe. It had occurred to me often that a person could open it, even if he wasn't a skilled cracksman. It was my custom to leave my door open between my little room and the ticket-office, so that if Red Ravine was called on the telegraph-key I could hear it. The instrument had been clicking away at a great rate for the last hour; but as it was none of my business, I had paid no attention to what was going over the wires. I judged now, from the nearness of the lightning and the jerky sounds of the instrument, that the storm was playing the mischief with the messages. I passed into the ticket-office, where a light was left burning, and stood for some time thinking whether the money package would be less exposed in the safe than it would be under the mattress of my bed; and I finally concluded that the latter place would be hardest for any possible thief to reach. So I took out the heavy brown envelope, and stowed it away under the mattress. Then I made and drank a glass of toddy, which was usually against my rule, but which I thought the circumstances warranted.

Once more I sat down to my paper and pipe, but with no better success than before. The storm seemed now to have centered right over the little station. Peal after peal of thunder rent the air, and the lightning played about the sky like phosphorus on an inky background. If you have ever chanced to be in a telegraph office during a thunder storm, you may have seen the electricity dash across the wires in a way to make timid people nervous. Even veteran operators, like myself, wouldn't want to undertake to receive that sort of message. I was tempted to close the key, but the meaningless ticking had a sort of strange fascination for me in the mood I then was. It was like the incoherent mutterings of a maniac, where now and then, at long intervals only, could one distinguish a word or sentence. Maybe the toddy made me more imaginative than usual, and had given a weird coloring to my thoughts, for, listening to the rapid click-click, I remember fancying that some spirit-hand had hold of the key and was pouring out a wail of woe over the wires.

I was too restless to sit still and too nervous to go to bed. Besides, even if I hadn't been so upset in my mind, it is doubtful whether I could have slept through such a storm as that. To occupy myself about something, I relighted my lantern went out into the freight-room, examined again the bolts of the doors and the fastenings of the windows, and returned to my room more worried and upset than ever. Just as I was entering my nest, the light of the lantern fell squarely on the wooden box, Oddly enough, until that moment I had forgotten all about the dead young woman. Thinking so steadily of the $13,000 had, I suppose, driven the box out of my mind. But I can't say it was any comfort to have it brought back now, for a corpse is never the most cheerful of company, and, feeling as I did then, I would a great deal rather have had no company at all.

It must have been the imp of the perverse, I suppose, that compelled me, after the box had been brought back to my mind, to leave the door open, so that I could sit and stare at it with morbid curiosity. As I have already said, my sleeping apartment was partitioned off from the freight-room, and was connected with the latter by a door. The body had been placed in such a situation, that, when this door was open, the head of the box was in sight. Two or three times I got up to shut the door, but some strange infatuity drove me back to my chair, and cause me to keep in view the box with its sad freight. All this time the storm raged, the thunder discharged its mighty batteries, the lightning flashed, and the mad ravings of the telegraph continued. I caught my hand, trembling as I tried to refill my pipe. Nervousness, no doubt, but possibly an observer might have thought Old Billy was frightened.

I had just risen to wind the little clock on the shelf, when suddenly, out of the hitherto meaningless ticking of the instrument sharply and distinctly came to my ear these sounds:

which in spoken words meant: "Watch the box!" I started as if a charge of electricity had passed through my frame. I could fairly feel my face grow white. I stood motionless, clutching the back of the chair and with my eyes riveted in a vacant stare at the table in the ticket office. I knew this was no work of an excited imagination. The words, to my practiced ear, were as plain as if shouted in clarion tones. There had come no call for Red Ravine, and the message ended without signature or mark, but abruptly, as it had begun. More than that, it was not the writing of any operator on any section of the line. I would have sworn to that with as much positiveness as you would to the tones of a voice with which you were familiar. In the dot and dash alphabet we learn to distinguish who is handling the keys almost with as much accuracy as others distinguish handwriting. And in all my experience I had never heard the sounder click off a message like that.

While I stood dazed and almost paralyzed—for you must remember that [illegible] in a terrible pitch that night—the rapid and unintelligible click-click was resumed as if a demon again had got hold of the key. It was fully five minutes before I mustered courage to pass into the ticket-office and sit down at the table myself. Not once in that time had I turned back to look at the box. Almost on the instant of my sitting down at the table the clicking stopped short as it had done before, and then those words were repeated: "Watch the box!"

Every dot, every dash, every letter, every word, came with such horrible distinctness that it seemed to send a sharp pain tingling through my ears. It was like the loud whisperings of some ghostly voice. Then again broke out the jargon of sound that turned the clicking into meaningless confusion.

I sprang up from the table, and with the now strengthened conviction that it was no delusion, no fancy, but that the sound had come plainly over the wires, I felt my courage returning and resolved to heed the mysterious warning. The rolling of the thunder and the mad roar of the storm no longer depressed me. I stepped boldly back into my own room, and rested my eyes unflinchingly on the wooden box. What was its mysterious freight? Why had the phantom of the storm sent those startling words over the wires? What unknown hand had reached out from the very lightning itself to warn me of some impending danger? These questions rushed through my mind as I felt the dread fear disappearing, and found myself of a sudden, grow strangly calm.

The clock struck ten. I turned to the shelf, and with a hand that no longer trembled inserted the key, and wound it composedly. Would it be the last time that I should perform the simple task? No matter. Happier than most men because content with my humble lot, it should never be said that Old Billy flinched in the face of duty. For that night it was my duty—my one sacred, all-important duty—to guard the treasure left to my safe-keeping. And guard it I would while life remained.

When I had finished winding the clock, I took down from the shelf an old rusty pistol which had lain for years undisturbed. It was not loaded nor had I either powder or bullet anywhere in the station. But the weapon was ugly-looking, and carried a sort of silent force in case of too aggressive argument. After examining the rusty lock, I put the pistol on the table, made a fresh glass of toddy, drank it, lighted my pipe, and closed the door that opened into the freight room. Now that I was thoroughly myself again, I found it easy to shut out the sight of that ominous oblong box.

It was not until the clock struck again—that is, eleven—that I made up my mind to go bed. All this time the storm held on, although the thunder had begun to rumble more distantly. I threw off my coat and slippers, put out the light in the ticket office, and turned that in the sleeping room down to a low flame. Then I drew the money-package from under the mattress and pinned it securely to my woolen shirt under my vest. This done, and with the table so placed that I could reach both the lamp and the pistol, I opened the door into the freght room some three or four inches, and then threw myself upon the bed. Just as my head touched the pillow the instrument, which had grown quiet now, clicked off for the third time, distinctly, slowly, its words of warning: "Watch the box!"

This time the warning was not needed. I had not gone to bed to sleep, but for the very purpose of watching the box. Standing as it did, with the head close to the door, and therefore close to the box itself, the bed afforded the very best point from which to keep an eye on the suspicious freight. Had my faith in the telegraphic clicking been less, or had my own sense of great responsibility deserted me for a single moment, I should certainly have given up the job of watching as foolish; and, in that case, it is not likely that this narrative would ever have been written. But I believed in the thrice-repeated message, and I did not let drowsiness overcome patience. Twelve, one, two—how very slowly the hours seemed to drag themselves! The low flame of the lamp went out, as the oil had run dry. What a relief it was to hear the clock strike! At last, somewhere about midnight, the storm had broken. I could see the stars as they came out, through the freight-room, which was on a line of vision with the box. How strangely still it seemed after the mighty roar of the storm and the sharp claps of thunder! Not a click from the instrument now. Not a sound save the steady ticking of the clock. Still I lay listening, watching, with faculties all alert, and my eyes always on the oblong box.

A little past two—perhaps ten minutes. The silence most painful in its profoundness. Nothing but the tick tick of the clock, which to my eager ear had taken on this sound, which it kept repeating over and over:

"Watch—the—box! Watch—the—box!"

What was that?

Not the clock; not the telegraphic instrument. No, it was a sound as of the grating of iron. Faint, very faint, yet still audible to my ear. Breathing regularly and deeply, as one breathes in sleep, I lay and listened. Another interval of silence, and then the grating sound came again, this time a trifle louder than before. The light of the stars shining through the window made the objects in the freight-room just visible. Amost simultaneously with the second grating noise I saw the cover of the wooden box rising slowly from the end furthest removed from the bed. I could feel my heart thumping away like a sledge hammer, but I continued to breath heavily and to watch keenly. Gently and noiselessly the cover was pressed upward until it reached an angle which completely shut out from my view the window beyond. A moment later the figure of a man came out from the shadows, while the box cover was let down as noiselessly as it had been raised.

This, then, was the burden of the box! This was the meaning of the mysterious warning which the sounder had spoken.

With cat-like tread the figure moved toward the door of my room. Still I lay as in deep sleep. On the threshold the figure paused, and a moment later a single ray of light like a silver thread pierced the darkness and fell upon the bed. Luckily, it did not strike my face, and in an instant I had closed my eyes. As I had anticipated, the ray of light was directed toward my pillow, and by the sense of feeling I knew it rested a moment on my face. Satisfied that I was in deep slumber, the figure, still with cat-like tread, glided through the bedroom and into the ticket office. My eyes were wide open again by this time. The light from the dark lantern had increased but its rays were now turned toward the safe. Obviously the robber believed the treasure he sought was there. I waited until he had knelt down to examine the lock, and then, with step as noisless as his own, I slipped from the bed and toward the half-open door. So intent was he in examining the safe that it was not until I was within reach of him that he heard me. He sprang to his feet, bringing the glass of the lantern full into my face, and reaching for his revolver, which he had lain upon the top of the safe. But he was too late. With the rusty old pistol, held by its long barrel, I dealt him a cruhing blow on the head, just as his fingers grasped his own weapon. He fell heavily without uttering a groan. The lantern was extinguished as it fell, and with trembling fingers I struck a match and lighted the lamp in the office. As its rays fell upon the upturned face of the robber I saw that blood was flowing from the wound I had inflicted, and I saw, too, that the man's face was delicate in its outlines and intelligent in its expression. I had time to notice no more, for I felt, now that the long, nervous strain was over—now that the danger was past—the need of aid. So after hurriedly binding the unconscious man's feet and arms, and bathing his head in cold water, I pulled on my boots and overcoat and started in hot haste for the hotel.

Half way on the road I met a covered carriage, drawn by one horse. I took it to be the turnout of Matthews, the hotel-proprietor, and wondering where he could be out for at that hour I shouted his name. I got no response. Then I cried out at the top of my voice.

Whoever was in the carriage must have heard me, but the horse only quickened his sharp trot and disappeared in the darkness.

They gave me a great deal more credit, the people of Red Raven, for that night's adventure, than I deserve. And I do not blame them for laughing at how thing came out. For when a party of us got back to the station, my unconscious burglar had disappeared, and the tracks next morning showed that the covered carriage, which I had met on the road, had drawn up at the platform. Who was in it? Well, I couldn't swear, but I had a notion that it contained the gentleman who had come on with the dead body. At all events, neither he nor the body was ever seen in the town again. I had the satisfaction of delivering the money-package safely to Eldridge & Ricketson, but the check they gave me was really not merited. For what would have happened had it not been for the mysterious message which no man sent?

Prof. L. B. Arnold advises skimming milk as soon as sourness is perceptible, and to churn at 60 degrees instead of 70, before the cream gets very old and sour. When the butter comes in granules, enough cold water or brine should be put in to reduce the mass to 55 degrees, when, after a little slow churning, the granules will become hard and distinct and the butter be in condition for washing out all the buttermilk. The salt should then be worked in with as little labor as possible, and after standing awhile it will be ready to pack.

Buy a Home.

Gen. George Barstow gave good advice in a speech on the subject of "Home." He said every man should own his home, if he can. That philosophy which tells a man to drift over the uncertain life without a home is like a ship out in the sea, at the hazard of the storm. A man who owns his home is like a ship that has arrived in port, and is moored in a safe harbor. One man should be no more content to live in a house that is not his own, if he can build one, than one bird should take the risk of hatching in another one's nest; and, for my own part, I would rather be able to own a cottage than hire a palace. I would say to every man, buy a home if you can, and own it. If a windfall has come to you, buy a home. Do not let anybody tempt you to put all your earnings back into the pool. Take out enough to buy a home, and buy it. Put the rest back if you will; gamble on it if you must; but buy the home first. Buy it, and sell it not. Then the roses that bloom there are yours; the clematis and jasamine that climb upon the porch belong to you. You have planted them, and seen them grow. When you are at work upon them, you are working for others. If there are children, there are flowers within the house and without. Buy a home.

An Unpleasant Accident.

A London paper says that a few days since a young lady, who is the belle of a certain suburb not 100 miles from Charing Cross, and is renowned not only for her charming figure and exquisite taste in dress, but also for her grace and skill as a skater, was fascinating a host of admirers and maddening with jealousy a host of rivals by her feats upon the ice, when she suddenly stumbled and fell. A score of chivalrous galkants sped to the rescue, but before one of them could reach her she had gained her feet. She was wearing a Canadian skating costume. It unfortunately happened in this case that in endeavoring to save herself the lady ripped her stockings with the point of her skate. She was not, however, aware of the mishap, and glided away from her rescuers with her usual graceful rapidity. As she sped along in conscious triumph a strange sound reached her ears, ominously like suppressed laughter. She cast a glance back, and I leave you to imagine her feelings when she saw that her course was marked by a long trail of sawdust. The shapely limb to which the wounded stocking belonged was fast losing its symmetry, and the secret of its shapeliness stood revealed.

DON'T GRUMBLE.—Put the best foot forward, is an old and good maxim. Don't run about and tell acquaintances you have been unfortunate. People don't like to have unfortunate men for their acquaintances. Add to a vigorous determination a cheerful spirit; if adverses come, bear them like a philosopher, and get rid of them as soon as you can. Poverty is like a panther; look it steadily in the face, and it will turn from you.

The supreme court decides that the words "medical attendance," as applied to paupers and indigent poor, includes the necessary nursing, watching and washing, and that counties are liable therefor when sick poor are cared for outside of the poor-houses by orders of the township trustees.

Charcoal is said to be a sure cure for burns. By laying a piece of cold charcoal upon the burn the pain subsides immediately. By leaving the charcoal on one hour the wound is healed, as has been demonstrated on several occasions.

A barber refused to color the mustache of an inebriated man because he did not want to dye a drunkard.

Coffee in Typhoid Fever.

Dr. Guillasse, of the French army, in a recent paper on typhoid fever, says: "Coffee has given us unhoped for satisfaction; after having dispensed it, we find, to our great surprise, that its action is as prompt as it is decisive. No sooner have our patients taken a few tablespoonfuls of it than their features become relaxed and they come to their senses. The next day the improvement is such that we are tempted to look upon coffee as a specific against typhoid fever. Under its influence the stupor is dispelled, and the patient rouses from the state of somnolency in which he has been since the invasion of the disease. Soon all the functions take their natural course, and he enters upon convalescence." Dr. Guillasse gives to an adult two or three tablespoonfuls of strong black coffee every two hours alternated with one or two tablespoonfuls of claret or Burgundy wine. A little lemonade or citrate of magnesia should be taken daily, and after a while quinine. From the fact that malaise and cerebral fever appears first, the doctor regards typhoid fever as a nervous disease, and the coffee acting on the nerves is peculiarly indicated in the early stages before local complications arise.

Chicago Ahead.

All the world now looks up to Chicago as the great western metropolis of America, being far ahead of all competing cities; but none the less so, in its line, is Electric Bitters. From their real intrinsic value they have advanced to the front, and are now far ahead of all other remedies, positively curing where everything else fails. To try them is to be convinced. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents per bottle.

THREE CLASSES OF MEN.—"Men," said one of Theodore Winthrop's characters "are divided into three classes—them as grabs their chances, them as chuck away their chances, and them as let their chances slide;" and he might have added that each of the last two classes largely outnumber the first. Boys are throwing away their chances in life every day by shirking and lazing and dawdling and deceiving; and they are "letting them slide," through heedlessness, inattention, and a fatal don't-care-ativeness. "I don't care" is one of the worst mottoes a boy, or a man either, can have. It is the boys and men who do care, and care rightly, who win. In every day, practical, material affairs, as truly as in spiritual things, it is they who are faithful over a few who are made rulers over many.

Better than Quinine. Few constitutions can stand the continuous use of quinine. It is not only a very expensive medicine, but will ultimately cause the patient to succumb to its powerful influence upon the nervous system. But if you want to get rid of Malaria and all Fevers of that nature use the Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters. The whole treatment for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

A correspondent of the Scientific American says: "Let anyone who has an attack of lockjaw take a small quantity of turpentine, warm it and pour it on the wound, no matter where the wound is, and relief will follow in less than a minute. Nothing better can be applied to a severe cut or bruise than cold turpentine; it will give certain relief almost instantly. Turpentine is also a sovereign remedy for croup. Saturate a piece of flannel with it and place the flannel on the throat and chest, and in every severe case three or four drops on a lump of sugar may be taken inwardly. Every family should have a bottle on hand.

WHAT IS MAN?—This little life-boat of earth, with its noisy crew of mankind and all their troubled history, will one day have vanished—faded like a cloud-speck from the azure of the sky. What then is man? He endures but for an hour, and is crushed before the moth. Yet in the beginning and in the working of a faithful man is there already (as all faith from the beginning gives assurance) a something that pertains not unto this death element of time; that triumphs over time, and is, and will be, when time shall be no more.

One of the best tests of autographs is the color of the ink. In genuine ancient writings the fading of the ink is irregular; in forged documents the ink has the same color through, and the most ingenious of forgers have been unable to overcome this difficulty.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so deservedly merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

There is about as much scribbled to the square yard in Virginia now as can be found anywhere. The issue is squarely made between honesty and repudiation, and the result might not to be doubtful.

The majority against prohibitation in North Carolina has reached 9,000 with twenty-three counties yet to be heard from, and these counties are where the moonshiners congregate.—When they are heard from the majority will be lifted up out of sight.

The Kalamazoo Telegraph says:—"Last night was golgwoo—cool, silent, soft shadowy, superb. A splendid moon rode across the bare blue heavens, [illegible] earth with glorious light [illegible] how we wish we had bee[illegible] in our Hannah Ann, with [illegible] man locked in the back parlor, and the front gate off the hinges.

The assassin, Guiteau is again trying to get up a sensation. Yesterday morning when officer McGill, one of the guards in the jail passed through the corridor, he found Guiteau in possession of a knife, which he refused to surrender. A lively tussle ensued and it was not until help was procured that the knife was taken from him. Guiteau pretends to be crazy.

Maud S. is at her old tricks again.—Last Thursday at Rochester, N. Y., in the presence of twenty thousand people, she made a mile, without a break, in 2.10¼. The day was perfect and not the slightest breeze was blowing. The first quarter was reached in 32¾, the half in 1.05¼, the three-quarter pole in 1.37¼. No sign of a break. Down the stretch she flew in splendid form and passed under the wire in 2.10¼.

The thermometer has been pretty well elevated some of these latter days, but we have had no weather so hot as to set houses on fire. Down in Dover, Maine, a good woman washed her milk pans and placed them out in the sunshine, bottom side up, to dry.—Two of them so happened to be placed as to concentrate the rays upon the frame house and burned a large hole in the wall. This should be a warning to housekeepers to be more careful about handling their pans in hot weather.

Mayor King, of Philadelphia, has stirred up a hornet's nest by appointing a few colored men on the police force. The Evening Bulletin says.—"The colored people were quietly earning their daily bread by following their ordinary occupation, but now that public places have been opened to them the rabe of office-seekers will be swelled, while the number of places is not increased. The notion that the black race has gained anything worth having because Mayor King has put a few negroes on his police is simply silly." This from a strong Republican paper in Philadelphia.—Suppose the same language had appeared in a New Orleans newspaper. It would have been heralded as positive proof that the Ku-Klux still ruled the South.

Another crisis has arrived in President Garfield's case: On Sunday a decided change for the worse took place. The new trouble was with the stomach. The President has for many years been subject to dyspepsia, and on that day the old malady appeared, and his stomach utterly refused to perform its functions. He slept but little, if any, on Sunday night, and the fitful sleep he got was broken by intervals of vomiting and high pulse and fever. All day Monday his condition was extremely critical, his stomach still refusing to assimilate any food. Although his symptoms were slightly better on Tuesday, still there was no decided change. Tuesday night the patient rested well and yesterday there seemed to be a very perceptible improvement in his condition. Hope is again revived, and it is barely possible that he will yet recover. It will be seven weeks next Saturday since the fatal bullet sped to its lodging place, but the President seems no nearer recovery than he did ten days after the shooting. It is evident that his condition is again extremely critical and people may as well prepare their minds for the worst news at any moment.

Another man has come to the front in Ohio. One Capt. Cook slapped another man's chops for saying that he hoped Garfield would die. That was a very silly remark, to be sure, but still it did not justify Capt. Cook in committing an assault and battery.—Thereupon Capt. Cook was arrested and fined thirty-two dollars for the assault. But Capt. Cook's friends, who viewed the matter from a high moral standpoint, thought he served the fellow just right, and so they started a one cent subscription paper to raise money to pay the fine. The subscription paper got into some trouble in a very short time, the fine was paid and a large surplus has accumulated, which the committee in charge are at a loss to know how to dispose of. As the subscribers are of different politics it is impossible to donate the amount to either campaign fund, and the cost of returning the money would be quite a serious one. They may therefore a year hence, irrespective on the Muskingum who holds no office whatever either local, state or national. Why not give the surplus fund to him?

A CHINESE artist named Tong Tong and his wife Oh Gee, are at present attracting a great deal of attention in Chicago. They were brought from Hong Kong by a Mrs. H. E. Falconer, a spirituous woman of Chicago, who ran a large photograph gallery and portrait studio at 85 N. Clark street. She is the same person that L. P. Wheeler engaged to for a year, but after working for her a couple of weeks he discovered her character and method of doing business, and after having a good deal of trouble succeeded in putting a stop to her transactions, and closing her establishment by the aid of the sheriff. Mrs. Falconer had Tong Tong in her employ for nearly a year, and kept him locked up in the third story of her house where she starved and beat him and his wife to her heart's content. The humane society was informed of the fact by a friend of Tong's, and they were rescued from the she devil's toils. Tong Tong is a fine portrait painter and bids fair to prosper in Chicago, where the papers are creating an interest in him. The Chicago Morning News of August 10, devotes a column to them and gives L. P. Wheeler the credit of breaking up the Falconer establishment.

INTERNATIONAL COTTON EXPOSITION.

An exhibition of the industries of all civilized people will open at Oglethorpe Park, Atlanta, Ga., on the 5th of next October, and continue through the remainder of the year, closing December 31st. This exhibition was named the International Cotton Exposition, because nothing more was contemplated than a Fair for illustrating every detail of the cotton industry. Soon after the Exposition company organized the executive managers decided to admit other textiles, and later, yielding to an almost universal demand they concluded to open their doors to all industries. Hence the Exposition is no longer confined to that one staple, nor to the several textile interests, but it comprises every industry in which civilized men engage.

Its scope having been made universal the classification employed at the Centennial will be closely followed in the six departments of the Exposition. These departments embrace every industry, and there is a suitable place in some one of the groups for every product of human skill.

Among the questions daily asked by merchants and manufacturers, one of the most frequent is, "What are the prospects as to the number of visitors to the Exposition?"

Our reply is that the railroad companies of the country have adopted excursion rates lower than were ever offered before. For instance, round trip tickets from both Chicago and St. Louis will cost but $15, while similar tickets from either Cincinnati or Louisville will be $9. The rates by other lines will be equally low.

Not less than half a million Southern citizens and at least two hundred thousand people from the North will avail themselves of these low fares, while the number of visitors from Canada, Great Britain and the European continent will be very large.

Atlanta has splendid hotel accommodations already, and the Exposition company is erecting another new and magnificent one near the Park that will accommodate a thousand guests. In addition, a Department of Public Comfort has been organized, which is assured of the general co-operation of the citizens of Atlanta in providing comfortable entertainment for this multitude, so that from twenty to thirty thousand visitors can be cared for daily. It is perfectly safe to say that no such favorable opportunity has been offered to the manufacturers and merchants of this country since 1876 to advertise their wares, and that never before has there been such a chance to show them to the Southern people.

On the back of the blank application for space will be found the rules and regulations governing the exhibits. The entry fee of $25 is the only charge made; and for it exhibitors have all the space they need for a suitable display of their goods, and in addition they are supplied with free admissions to the Exposition for themselves and their necessary assistants.

Nearly every kind of business is already represented among the entries registered; clothing, boots and shoes, carriages, clocks, watches, optical instruments, sewing machines, agricultural implements and machinery, jewelry, laces, confectionery, chemicals and druggists' sundries, food products and canned goods, flour, pianos and organs, machines for all purposes, steam engines, and a multitude of other things are comprised in these entries.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

No Wonder.

Detroit Free Press: "That relieves my mind," said Garfield after signing his name to the extradition document last week. "Now I can take my vacation free from official cares." After which he went off with Rhee, Swain, and Mrs. Garfield on a grand carousal of roast and beefsteak juice. No wonder, after such wild dissipation, he does not recover more rapidly.

The Chautauqua Curriculum.

New York Sun: Chautauqua is a wonderful place. People who pass their vacation there get the most altruistic metaphysics and the most recondite science along with their bathing, rolling, quilting and blackberrying. A person can cool off from a week's bathing in a lecture on ecclesiastical polity, and a fortnight's residence in the place might make even Sally learned. "The classes in Greek and Hebrew are in full operation." It is announced, one can only admire the machinery which tosses off these trifles as August recreations. French without a master and German completely taught in three lessons are trifles to the curriculum of Chautauqua.

Rowing as a Science.

Philadelphia Times: Rowing is a comparatively unknown science on the continent of Europe and the Cornell men were perfectly justified in supposing that they could get away with the Vienna scrub crew, which had but ten days' practice. It turns out, however, that the Cornell fellows were worse beaten on the Danube than they were on the Thames.—There are not to our knowledge, any regularly organized boat clubs in Turkey or Northern Africa, but if the Cornell men keep right on in the direction last taken they may possibly find Colonel Bob Ingersoll's man in the dug-out and give him a whirl for the honor of New York's great University.

Worthy of Gen. Hancock.

New York Freeman's Journal: We met last week a lady of a family resident of Governor's Island. She told us that since July 2, when Gen. Garfield was shot, Gen. Hancock has refused to go to public dinners, or on those excursions of a quiet kind he is very fond of. We could imagine gallant old Gen. Pike Graham, of the Grahams of Virginia, making the point; but here we have it from Gen. Hancock of Pennsylvania. "It is not proper that I accept festive entertainments while the President, ex-officio my commander-in-chief, is hovering between life and death." Who will say the age of chivalry is passed, when a Major-General of the army, defeated by the lavish use of money in New York, thus holds himself toward the man that is President in place of himself?

The Virginia Suicide.

Philadelphia Times: There's room in Virginia for one honest Republican party and room for it to grow and win substantial fruits, but there isn't room for two Republican parties in that State nor is there room for a dishonest Republican party. Had the honest Republicans of Virginia been sustained by the national administration as they and their cause deserved, there are not a thousand members of that party, white or black, who would have followed Mahone to Repudiation and dishonor; but in an evil hour Mahone gave the balance of power in the Senate to the Republicans by contract, and that disreputable coalition of the Senate Republicans with Mahone, Riddleberger and Repudiation ended Republicanism as a great power in Virginia. It is now a pitiable wreck, rent in fragments by Repudiation and the promise of spoils, and the epitaph of Virginia Republicanism will be: "Died of Mahone, Repudiation and Dishonor."

It Is Cheaper to Work.

New York Herald: The tramp who put a hollow tube through the fence rails and into a pitcher of milk just filled by the carrier and thence drew his lacteal repast was ingenious, and ought to be at more honest work. The man who has sufficient head to think out such a scheme should be able to earn enough money to enable him to give his stomach a heartier filling. The world is packed with people who want something for nothing. That is the great scheme of thousands. That is the trick deemed worth two of any other kind. The man who can live on the labor of his neighbor is the smart fellow and the other is the fool. Is he? It is not likely that the milk thus appropriated caused any unpleasant commotion in the stomach of the appropriator, but when he attempts the trick again he will find the pitcher is not there. He has exhausted himself in that line, and must put his wits to work to devise another scheme. If he really prefers a milk diet after this he will have to pay for it or improve on his tube. After all, then, won't this tramp find in the end it would have been cheaper and even easier if he had earned a dime and bought his own milk?

LAKE water had a bad effect on a few of the Brownvillerites who went to Sand lake last Saturday. It made business lively for them.

Adrian Record: Watermelons raised here are arriving in this market.—We know where there is a large patch but we propose to keep close-mouthed until we get them. We have heard men, who are now deacons, tell how much sweeter melons were when they were "cooned," and eaten away from home, somewhere near the midnight hour, and we intend to try it just as soon as some of our friends, who are rusticating at the summer resorts return home.

Hudson Post: Last Monday night a plucky young lady on the West Side was putting out her father's horse, and just as she was entering the stall a man rose up in the manger, and what probably more surprised the fellow was that she didn't do what most any woman would—that is to scream, but she simply pulled out her watch and gave the fellow three minutes to get out, and the man probably thinking that the watch was a pistol, made tracks as fast as Rarus.

WE learn that P. W. Adams is about to leave his old home and take up his residence in Delaware. He leaves this afternoon for Middletown, Del., and intends to purchase a farm in that vicinity. His family will follow him within a few weeks. Mr. Adams may be called one of the pioneers, having always lived among us, and we note his departure with extreme regret. The place which gains him as a citizen will find him a valuable acquisition to the community. Our loss is "Little Deleware's" gain.

JAMES HAYNES ESQ., of Cadillac, the owner of a large planing mill in that city, purchased the entire lot of the lumber and machinery at the Merritt & Stretch sale last Saturday. The lumber has since been sold, most of it, to dealers in this section. The machinery has since been shipped to Cadillac and will be used in a second planing mill which Mr. Haynes will soon erect there. During his stay in Tecumseh Mr. Haynes impressed our people as an enterprising and successful business man.

FROM the Saturday Evening Star, of Jackson, we clip the following, which will be heartily seconded by Mr. Richard's old friends in Tecumseh:

Archie Richard has at last joined the noble army of benedicts. Last Sunday he was married in Cincinnati to Miss Clara Everson, late superintendent of M. W. Robinson's dress making department. The bride is an accomplished and remarkably intelligent and amiable young lady, and everybody knows that Archie is one of the most square-toed, straight-haired, and efficient young business men that this city boasts of. The happy couple are now doing Newport and Saratoga. May they never see a dark cloud in the matrimonial sky is the wish of the Star.

WE clip the following complimentary article from the Marshall Statesman in relation to the resignation of Rev. C. C. Sink, who has accepted a call to the Ridgeway Christian church of this county:

"The resignation of the Rev. C. C. Sink, pastor of the Christian church was an unexpected event and generally regretted. Mr. Sink has been pastor of that church for 15 months, and has shown himself to be an efficient minister of the gospel, and leaves Marshall carrying with him, as well as his excellent family, the best wishes of their friends and the respectful regards of society. His last discourse was delivered at the M. E. church by special invitation, to a large and appreciative audience, and was listened to with marked attention. Marshall losses an excellent educator of christian morals and christian principles, as well as a high toned christian gentleman."

FARMERS' CLUB.

A special meeting of the Farmers' Club was held at R. B. Gillispies, Aug. 12. Owing to the busy season there was not as full an attendance as was desired, but it was noticed that those present were among the successful farmers. The subject of raising wheat being introduced by John Fisher, the discussion became very animated. There was so much said that was of interest by every gentleman, that I would gladly report it all, but the weather is too warm and I will only give the general conclusions.

1st. Do not be discouraged because this harvest has been a partial failure.

2d. Take more pains in preparing the ground. Turn under all the clover and manure possible. Use the roller and harrow until there is a good bed to receive the seed.

3d. For general sowing would use Clawson, as giving best satisfaction. Mr. Fisher had succeeded well with Egyptian, but would recommend Clawson for the bulk of ground. Mr. Gillespie had mixed Clawson with Morgan and was well satisfied with results, and should continue the mixing.

4th. Early sowing was preferable taking one season with another. Considered from the 5th to the 15th of September the proper time to sow. Mr. Griswold thought the tendency was to sow to early; would not advise late sowing, neither too early.

5th. Would not drill the seed too deep. Thought an inch deep enough. A number favored the roller drill as giving good depth to the seed.

Mr. F. Rector read a number of extracts from reports from various states, also reports from B. J. Bidwell, E. L. Russell and others.

Mrs. Gillespie here announced that tea was ready. All repaired to the tables which were bountifully laden with substantials and delicacies.

After tea a vote of thanks was given to Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie for their kind entertainment of the club, and the meeting adjourned to meet the 1st Friday evening in November at John Fisher's.

A LUCKY STRIKE.

The Royal Templars of Temperance have a clause in the policy of insurance issued by them, binding the association to pay one half the death loss in case of total disability. At a meeting of the Supreme Council recently held at Buffalo, the following rules were adopted governing total disability:

1st. The loss of both arms or legs, one arm or one leg, or any injury which shall produce complete disability from performing manual labor.

2d. Paralysis so extensive as to produce a like disability.

3d. Rheumatic or gouty anthritis followed by permanent anchyloses so extensive as to produce like disability.

Dr. Hause, who is a member of the Royal Templars, consulted with Dr. Jenkins, the medical examiner here, and he gave it as his opinion that Dr. Hause was entitled to the benefit awarded in cases of total disability.

Two physicians were selected by the grand medical examiner, Drs. Vanorman, of Detroit, and Baird, of Jackson, who came here about three weeks ago and examined Dr. Hause. They at once reported upon his case, and the other day he received from headquarters a draft on N. Y. for $1,000. This is one half of his policy. At his death the other half will be paid to his heirs the same as a death loss in an ordinary case. This total disability feature in the policies issued by the Royal Templars is a new and very desirable feature. Dr. Hause has had his full share of bad luck, and we congratulate him upon this windfall, which will in a small degree compensate him for his previous misfortune.

RAISIN VALLEY REUNION.

The fifteenth annual meeting of the Raisin Valley Reunion Association was held on the Seminary ground last Friday afternoon. The literary part of the exercises was held in the Seminary chapel which was crowded with spectators. The program was opened with a trio by Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Rice and Mrs. Sheldon. Rev. R. S. Pardington, of Tecumseh, followed in prayer. The President of the Association then introduced Prof Daniel Satterthwaite, who delivered the address. At its conclusion Mrs. Sheldon favored the audience with a fine solo, and then Prof. White recited a poem by Oliver Wendell Holmes which took the place of the regular poem by Miss Myra Jones. At the conclusion of these exercises the company adjourned to the grove where a sumptuous collation was spread. A business meeting of the alumni was held after the supper, and the officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President—James Sinclair.
Rec. Sec.—Celia Jones.
Vice Pres.—William Comfort.
Cor. Sec.—Saddie Stanley.
Treasurer—T. I. Sutton.
Marshal—William Stuart.

SOMEWHAT cooler for the last few days. We appreciate the change.

THE FATHER OF MICHIGAN HOMŒOPATHY.

It was news to us, and probably will be to most of our readers, that Dr. G. D. Perry, for many years a citizen of Franklin but now a resident of Tecumseh, was the first physician to introduce Homœopathy into the state of Michigan. We gather the particulars from the advance sheets of the proceedings of the Homœopathic Medical Society of Michigan, edited by Dr. R. B. House.

Thirty-eight years ago last October, Homœopathy was introduced into the state of Michigan by G. D. Perry, who having received beneficent effects from its use in his own case in the state of New York, procured 107 Homœopathic remedies, which were originally from Dr. Beards case of New York City, and with a few books—for Homœopathic literature was very meagre in its pioneer days—he came to our state to seek a home. He was thus undesignedly the agent of introducing the law of similia into the state. Several years previous to his coming to Michigan, a brother-in-law, Dr. Thomas Blackwood, an old practitioner of Allopathy had located at Superior, Washtenaw county. During a visit made Dr. Blackwood by Mr. Perry, a discussion took place upon the subject of Homœopathy in which the doctor sought to argue that it was a great humbug, but he found in Mr. Perry an opponent who could not be easily argued or ridiculed out of his settled convictions of the efficacy of the Homœopathic law of cure. Finally Dr. B. was led to request Mr. Perry to prescribe for a very difficult case which he had treated unsuccessfully for a long time. With considerable reluctance Mr. Perry consented, for he was very unassuming in manner and shrank from entering into competition with practicing physicians. In about two weeks Mr. Perry received a visit from Dr. Blackwood, who exclaimed upon meeting him, "Well, I give it up. Your medicine has done for that case what mine has never been able to do, and now I want to know all about Homœopathy and give it a fair test." Mr. Perry directed him to consult with some eastern physician and to procure Hull's Jahr and Companion Works of that day. He also furnished the doctor with a stock of Homœopathic medicines from his own case. Dr. Blackwood was thorough and earnest in his researches and the result was the same as has always followed a careful investigation into the merits and truth of the Homœopathic law of cure, a complete conversion. In October, 1843, Mr. Perry was at the Auditor General's office, in Detroit, perfecting some titles to lands, when he met Dr. S. S. Hall, of that city, who had formed quite a favorable opinion of Homœopathy from the fact through its administration by a Homœopathic physician in New York city, his son had been cured of an obstinate bronchial trouble which had baffled the combined skill of the leading physicians of Detroit as well as his own. Mr. Perry strongly advocated the virtues of similia and urged the doctor to send and get a supply of Homœopathic remedies and books and use them in his practice. Dr. Hall followed his advice and called the attention of one of his colleagues, Dr. C. A. Lamb, to the Homœopathic theory, and requested that he would investigate its claims with him.

In the following year Dr. Lamb was called to treat his brother-in-law, who became very sick, and he was finally given up to die, when it was decided to call in Dr. Blackwood, and try Homœopathy as a last resort. The result was a victory for the new cause. The patient recovered and Dr. Lamb became a thorough convert. Were it in the province of a paper like this we might give a more detailed account of the earnest work done by this noble man for the cause of Homœopathy, from the time of his coming into this state in 1842 down to the present time; but enough has been written to clearly establish the fact, that to Rev. G. D. Perry belongs the honor of introducing Homœopathy into the state, and of securing for its ranks its first converts from the medical profession.

Adrian Record: Mr. John F. Schreder, of Ridgeway, was in the city today, calling on several friends with most of whom he has been acquainted for nearly half a century. Mr. Schreder is 93 years of age, and retains his faculties to a surprising degree.—He has used tobacco for seventy-eight years, and his friends tell him that he will not live half of his days unless he stops that habit. He has never missed voting the Democratic ticket at every election for seventy years. He has a marvelous memory, is a splendid conversationalist, and has a great love for the humorous. He doubtless is the oldest man in this county, where he has resided over fifty years.

REV. H. SHEPARD is taking his vacation this month, and hence there will be no services at the Universalist church the last two Sundays in August. Sunday school will be held as usual at 12 M. Regular services will be resumed on Sunday, Sept. 4th.

Peterson's Magazine for September is at hand, as usual, ahead of all others. The leading feature, for this month, is an elegant steel-engraving, "Blind Milton dictating Paradise Lost to his daughters." It is accompanied by an illustrated article on Milton's life and poetry. The usual double-size colored fashion plate; the colored pattern, which, this month, is the head of Lady Washington, to be worked on Jaua canvas; the array of engravings of the fashions, patterns for the work-table, etc. Among the stories, there is "The Crimson Phial," by Lucy Hooper, and two novelets, "The Siege of Yorktown," by Mary V. Spencer, and the "American Countess," by Ann S. Stephens.—Every lady ought to be a subscriber to "Peterson." The price is but two dollars a year.

Battle Creek Journal: Adjutant Willis Merritt, of Adrian, arrived this morning and is domiciled at Surby's at Goguac, where he expects to spend some ten days. He is a partner in the law firm of Merritt & Navin, of Adrian. Mr. Navin is the famous "Kid Mayor," of the "city of Maples," being 26 years of age. Mr. Merritt is Adjutant of the First Regiment of Michigan State Troops, and has many friends in this vicinity who will be glad of this opportunity to renew their acquaintance.

Here is a chain-lightning story from the Portland Advertiser: "During the storm Saturday morning, a bolt struck some nineteen cans of milk that a Falmouth farmer had placed in front of the barn all ready to be sent by train to Portland, scattering the milk and cans in all directions, and also took a slant across the family cat, who was trying to steal some milk, singeing every bit of fur from her body, but not killing her, and the next day she was lively though hairless."

Hillsdale Regatta, Aug. 24 and 25.

The following railroads will make half-fare rates and carry boats and crews free: L. S. & M. S. R.R. (main line and all branches), Ft. W. & Jackson R. R., D., H. & S. W. R. R. Don't fail to improve this opportunity for a pleasant and cheap excursion. The Hillsdales will row against some of the strongest crews in the Northwest.

A FREIGHT train was ditched at the Lake Shore depot in Adrian last Tuesday evening. Twelve cars and a locomotive were thrown from the track, and piled up in the ditch promiscuously. The accident was caused by a misplaced switch.

JAS. COOK was in town yesterday to inspect 125 barrels of oil. He missed the farmers' picnic at Devil's Lake, much to his regret, but as his motto is "Business before pleasure," he took in the oil instead of the cake and lemonade.

T. T. LACEY has accepted the agency for this section of Fuller & Fuller's alcohol flatiron, which is one of the neatest devices of the age. He has a stock on hand and can supply persons in want of them immediately.

Although in some localities throughout the county a partial crop of apples may be anticipated, the majority of orchards may be reported as almost a total failure this season.

HERALD OFFICE.

Gloomy Weather Thoughts.

The physical and mental structure of man makes him peculiarly susceptible to all changes in the weather. On a fine clear morning with a bracing atmosphere you will see him walk out with an elastic step, a beaming countenance, and, if he is in business, he attends to it with a readier will than he otherwise were wont. He greets his neighbor with a cordial "Good morning, my friend; fine morning this." If he is asked about business, he quickly replies, "Good, very good; prospects for a large trade never better." No matter what his employment is, on such a morning a man will look on the bright side of everything. Labor is easier, health is better, social qualities more obvious, and everything about him bears the impress of his good spirits.

On the other hand, darken the picture with clouds. Draw from them their appropriate substance. Deluge the earth with gloom and rain, and as soon as that can be done a complete metamorphosis takes place. The bright, happy and hopeful man of the bright and happy day is the dull and gloomy person of the dull, gloomy day. He condescends a gruff salute, if he greets you at all, and his business, if he has any, is in a deplorable condition. He mopes along like a snail case of snail, and if you weren't intimately acquainted with him, you would be impressed that he had just returned from a second class funeral, where he constituted the chief mourner. Such is the effect produced upon many by gloomy weather.

We are, as a people, too hopeful when sailing on a full tide, and too hopeless when we reach the shallows of life. We need to have invented a machine by which cheerfulness, sunshine and hopefulness can be bottled up and carried over when occasion needs, and another one to cork up a little gloom and a little incredulity for those who in fine weather are inclined to "fly too high." This ennui and high-spirited business ought to be more evenly balanced. We need a safety valve put on our natures, regulated for fair and gloomy weather, or a guage that would pop off when its owner carried more than a hundred pounds of sanguineness or more than the same amount of "blues."

Gathering Sponges on the Florida Coast.

"Having a curiosity to see actual sponge gathering last Monday morning found me aboard the schooner "Samflier" spinning along toward the bars, but owing to light winds during the day, we did not arrive until nightfall. Tuesday morning, however, sponging commenced in earnest. Shortly after sunrise the "dingys," manned by two men each, with water-glass, sponge-hooks, etc., set off in quest of sponges. One of the men in the "dingy" sculls the boat about here and there, while the other, lying across the boat's thwart with his head in the water-glass, scans the bottom for sponges. The water-glass used by the spongers is nothing but a common deep wooden pail with a circular pane of glass for a bottom. Placing this upright in the water, and putting the head in far enough to exclude most of the light, one can easily see an object on bottom in six or seven fathoms of water. The sponger, when he sees a sponge, by the waving of his hand directs the sculler how to go, and when in a desirable position he thrusts his long pole down and hooks his sponge. The vessels usually remain out upon the bars from Monday until Friday evening of each week; coming into the Keys Friday night, in order to clean the sponges which they gather the week previous, put those gathered the present week into the crawls, put their wood and water on board and prepare for next week. The sponges which they gather one week are put in crawls or pens, made by driving posts in the sand whereat low water, they will be quite or almost dry. Here they are left until next Saturday, to be washed by the tides. On the following Saturday they are cleansed by striking them one or two light blows with a paddle. When the sponges are cleaned, they are taken aboard the schooner and there strung on strings usually about five and half feet long, when they are thrown upon the beach to bleach and dry. The number of vessels engaged in sponging from Key West probably reaches one hundred and twenty-five, gathering sponges to the value of about $1,000,000 annually. Besides the Key West schooners, we have forty or fifty fitted out from Cedar Keys and Oglockney.

How to Tell Eggs that are Eggs.

A good egg will sink in water.

A boiled egg which is done will dry quickly on the shell when taken from the kettle.

The boiled eggs which adhere to the shells are fresh laid.

After an egg is laid a day or more, the shell comes off easily when boiled.

A fresh egg has a lime-like surface to its shell.

Eggs which have been packed in lime look stained and show the action of the lime on the surface.

With the aid of the hands, or a piece of paper rolled in funnel-shape and held toward the light, the human eye can look through an egg, shell and all.

If the egg is clear and golden in appearance when held to the ligth, it is good; if dark or spotted, it is bad.

The badness of an egg can sometimes be told by shaking it near the holder' ear.

Given Up by the Doctors.

Where doctors have failed to cure, and have given their patients up to die, Electric Bitters have often been used, and a cure effected, greatly to the astonishment of all. Diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs are positively cured by Electric Bitters. They invariably cure Constipation, Headache and all Bilious Attacks. Try them and be convinced that they are the best medicine ever used. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents a bottle.

Why an object of loathing and disgust to yourself and society from catarrh, when Sanford's Radical Cure externally and internally administered, will cure every symptom of the disease. Every package is a complete treatment. Only $1.

Old Love Letters.

Only a bundle of old yellowed papers tied together with a faded ribbon, these are all that may be left to remind the gray-haired creature that tearfully bends over them of one on whom the grassy sod may have moulded for years, or whose affections trifled with by her, have found a peaceful dwelling place in a more constant heart. This tear-stained packet is all that connects her present with the past, and as she pores over its contents, the frosty clasp of years is relaxed before the burning word of love, only to be clenched tighter as stern realities now draw the curtain of regret before all the adoring promises of the long ago. From these faded lines, the chord of memory runs back to the time when they grew fresh and glossy beneath the writer's hand, mute messengers from the burning heart that breathed its love upon the page. But why touch the chord when every note awakens a longing that can never be gratified, for who can recall an echo from the past? Fold them up carefully, they are the tomb of your own dead hopes, mouldering slowly into nothingness. Peace, peace to the ashes!

Whipping Children.

A parent who don't know how to govern a child without whipping it, ought to surrender the care of that child to some wiser person. Sportsmen once thought it was necessary to lash their dogs in training them for the field. They know now that the whip should never be used. Horsemen once thought it was necessary to whip colts to teach them to start on the spot at the word, and pull steadily. They know now that an apple is better than the lash, and a caress better than a blow. If dogs and horses can be thus educated without punishment, what is there in our children which makes it necessary to slap and pound them? Have they less intelligence? Have they colder hearts? Are they lower in the scale of being?

We have heard many old people say: "If we were to bring up another child we should never whip it." They are wise, but a little too late. Instead of God doing so little for children that they must be whipped into goodness, He has done so much for them that even a whipping can't ruin them—that is, as a rule. But, alas, there are many exceptions to this rule. Many children are of such quality that a blow makes them cowardly, or reckless, or deceitful, or permanently ugly. Whipping makes children lie. Whipping makes children hate their parents. Whipping makes home distasteful—makes the boys run away, makes the girls seek happiness anywhere and anyhow. Whipping is barbarous. Don't whip.

"Pshaw," said Grandline, as he seated himself in the Times sanctum, "the snake stories that are going around are all too thin. Why just look here. Last spring I went out into the woods. I took an umbreller which I laid down onto some rocks. Well, sir, about an hour afterward I went to get my umbreller, as it had begun to rain a little. I took hold of the handle, and, as I gave it a shove, something began to tear, and as the umbreller flew open a live black snake fell to the ground, split in two from its head to its tail. The confounded critter had actually swallowed my umbreller, and I never noticed it until I shoved up the dumb thing and split the animal open from stem to stern.

NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.—A very simple relief for neuralgia is to boil a small handful of lobelia in half a pint of water till the strength is out of the herb, then strain it off and add a teaspoonful of fine salt. Wring cloths out of the liquid as hot as possible, and spread over the part affected. It acts like a charm. Change the cloths as soon as cold till the pain is all gone; then cover the place with a soft, dry covering till all perspiration is over, so as to prevent taking cold. Rheumatism can often be relieved by application to the painful parts, of cloths wet in a weak solution of sal-soda in water. If there is inflammation in the joints, the cure is very quick; the wash needs to be lukewarm.

Greatest Remedy Known.

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumptive is certainly the greatest medical remedy ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity.—Thousands of once hopeless sufferers now loudly proclaim their praise for this Discovery to which they owe their lives. Not only does it positively cure Consumption, but Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Hoarseness and all affections of the Throat, Chest and Lungs yield at once to its wonderful curative powers as if by magic. We do not ask you to buy a large bottle until you know what you are getting. We therefore earnestly request you to call on your druggists, M. Wright & Son, and get a trial bottle free of cost which will convince the most skeptical of its wonderful merits, and show you what a regular one dollar size bottle will do. For sale by M. Wright & Son, Tecumseh.

There is no vice which mankind carries to such wild extremes as that of avarice.—Swift.

The Cyclopaedia War.

The month of July, 1881, witnesses the completion of the largest and most important literary work this country and the century have seen. It is the Library of Universal Knowledge, large type edition, in 15 large octavo volumes, containing 10 per cent more matter than Appleton's Cyclopædia, at less than one-fifth its cost, and 20 per cent more than Johnson's Cyclopædia, at a little more than one-fourth its cost.

Chambers's Encyclopædia, which forms the basis of the Library of Universal Knowledge (the last London edition of 1880 being reprinted verbatim as a portion of its contents), is the laborious product of the ripest British and European scholarship. It has developed through a century of Cyclopædia making; its various editions having been many times revised, in successive years, till it has come to be universally recognized, by those competent to judge, as standing at the very front of great aggregations of knowledge, and better adapted than any other Cyclopædia for popular use. It contains such full and important information as the ordinary reader, or the careful student, is likely to seek upon about 25,000 subjects in every department of human knowledge. Chambers's Encyclopædia, however, is a foreign production, edited and published for a foreign market, and could not be expected to give as much prominence to American topics as American readers might desire. To supply these and other deficiencies a large corps of American editors and writers have added important articles upon about 15,000 topics, covering the entire field of human knowledge, bringing the whole number of titles under one alphabetical arrangement to about 40,000. Thus the work is thoroughly American, and the Library of Universal Knowledge becomes at once the latest and most complete Encyclopædia in the field, at a mere fraction of the cost of any similar work which has preceded it.

Price of the 15 volumes, complete, in extra cloth binding, $15.00. In half Russia, sprinkled edges, $20.00. In half Russia, gilt top, $22.50. In full library sheep, marbled edges, $25.00.

The superlative value and importance of this great Encyclopædia lies especially in the fact that it is brought within the reach of every one who aspires after knowledge and culture. It is really a library of universal knowledge. It brings a liberal education easily within the reach even of every plowboy of the country and apprentice boy of the city. Every farmer and every mechanic in the land owes it to himself and to his children that such a Cyclopædia shall henceforward form a part of the outfit of his home. To the professional man, and every person of intelligence in every walk of life, a Cyclopædia is a necessity.

Of course the old and wealthy publishers who have grown rich (it is said that the Appletons have made a profit of nearly two million dollars on their Cyclopædia) from the sale of their high-priced publications are not pleased that their monopolies are broken and their power overthrown. Of course the book agents and booksellers who have been used to getting from 40 to 60 per cent commission for selling these high-priced books are not so well pleased to sell the Library of Universal Knowledge on 15 per cent commission, though those who are not short-sighted discover that their own interests, after all, are identical with the interests of the people, and their real profits, in the end, are increased by the immense sales which result from meeting the people's wants. The majority of booksellers, however, are better pleased to slander than to sell this and our numerous other standard and incomparably low-priced publications. But the Literary Revolution has always looked to the people, in whose interests it is, for its patronage, and it has never looked in vain, as our more than one million volumes printed last year (this year being increased to probably more than two millions) abundantly prove. You can order the Cyclopædia directly from us, and by uniting with your neighbors and friends you can secure club rates as follows:

A discount of 10 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering at one time [illegible] more sets of the Cyclopædia; and a discount of 15 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering two or more sets at one time.

As a special inducement to our friends and patrons to go to work promptly and vigorously, each doing what he can for the dissemination of universal knowledge, we propose to distribute $10,000 in special premiums as follows, in addition to the regular discounts to clubs:

$5,000 Reward to be distributed equally among the first 500 club agents who send us clubs of not less than five subscribers, after June 15th and before September 1st.

$5,000 Reward in addition to the first $5,000 to be distributed among the 100 club agents who, during the same time, send us the largest number of subscribers, not less than twenty in number, the amount to be distributed proportionately to the whole number of subscribers which each of the 100 club agents may send us.

The names of the subscribers must in every case be forwarded to us. The first $5,000 earned will be distributed as specified as rapidly as the orders are received, and the remaining $5,000 will be distributed promptly on Sept. 1st. The names of the persons receiving these rewards will be printed, with the amount received by each, and the list sent to all the club agents entering into competition for them. Subscribers must be actual purchasers for individual use, to entitle the club agent to the rewards under this offer, and not booksellers or agents who buy to sell again.

Persons desiring to raise clubs may send to us at once for sample volumes, if they desire, in the various styles of binding, paying us 75 cents for the volume in cloth, $1.00 for the volume in half Russia, sprinkled edges, and $1.25 for the volume in library sheep. Orders for the full sets will be filled by us with the utmost promptness, within our ability to manufacture, beginning not later than July 10th, orders being filled in the order of their receipt by us.

Specimen pages of the "Library of Universal Knowledge" will be sent free upon request. Descriptive catalogue of our large list of standard publications, with terms to clubs, and illustrated pamphlet describing book-making and type-setting by steam, will be sent upon application. Remit by bank draft, money order, registered letter, or by express. Fractions of $1.00 may be sent in postage-stamps.

Victory For The Revolution $10,000 Reward To Club Agents.

Justice Clifford will probably be succeeded by Judge John J. Lowell of Massachusetts.

A SET-OFF AGAINST KANSAS.

The last congress made an appropriation of $100,268.27 to pay the state of Kansas for the amount due of the 5 per cent., on the sales of Indian reservations in that state. Judge Lawrence has had the question under consideration and has decided that there shall be deducted from the amount appropriated at the last session $95,718, which is found to be the amount of the unpaid indebtedness of Kansas to the government.

THE CENSUS BUREAU.

A statement that Gen. Walker, Superintendent of the Census, would vacate his office in October, to assume the duties of his new office as president of the Massachusetts State School of Technology, and that he would be succeeded by Mr. Robert R. Porter, who has been in charge of the division of State debt and taxation, has no foundation, other than General Walker will assume his duties in Massachusetts at that time. He will, nevertheless, continue as the head of the Census Bureau, and superintend the completion of the work.

PROPOSED NEW PENSION ACT.

Commissioner of Pensions Dudley is considering the advisability of recommending to Congress the passage of a new pension act, which will undoubtedly be a popular one should he finally deem best to urge it. The law contemplated will be a sweeping one, giving all Union soldiers who were in rebel prisons for any length of time and suffered the horrors of Andersonville, Belle Isle, and Salisbury. The commissioner holds that the constitution of many men were wrecked and that more injury to their usefulness was inflicted in thousands of cases by the starvation of the prisons than by service in the field or wounds in battle. He is now making investigations to determine approximately how many names such an act would add to the pension rolls and what it would cost the government annually should it go into effect. Upon the results of this inquiry will depend somewhat the nature of his recommendation.

REGISTERED FIVES.

Large numbers of letters have been received at the office of the United States treasurer, containing applications for August quarterly interest on 5 per cent. registered bonds which have not been continued. Under the terms of the loan call, which was issued on July 1, notice was given that 5 per cent. registered bonds issued under the acts of July 14 and Jan. 20, 1871, outstanding and unpaid, would be paid at the United States treasury on Oct. 1, with the interest accrued thereon from May 1, 1881, and that interest on said bonds would cease on Oct. 1. The circular also provided that holders of such bonds might present them for redemption at any time prior to Oct. 1, receiving accrued interest from May 1 to date of presentation. In consequence of this call August interest is waived by the department, and the bonds, with accrued interest, will be paid at any time they are presented for redemption.

The Indian bureau has information that the Utes are peacefully and quietly preparing for the change of reservation.

RUSSIAN CROPS.

Minister Foster, at St. Petersburg, writes to the department of state, under date of July 16, that the Russian wheat crop is likely to be one of the largest ever raised in the country, and that the export promises to be much greater than usual. It is stated that in the districts tributary to the port of Odessa the yield is likely to be so large that farmers think they could dispense with harvests for four years to come.

Advices from Taganrog and the Caucasus place the product of the crop to be equal to that of 1874, one of the largest ever known in Russia, and advices from Moscow affirm that it is thought the harvest in southern Russia will be the largest they have had for twenty years. The harvest in central Russia, while not so enormous, will yield a splendid crop of excellent quality. In the southern provinces grain is already cut. Further north it is still subject to damage in event of bad weather and insects.

From Moscow, which is the great commercial centre of Russia, it is reported that all branches of business are beginning to revive and flourish after a long season of depression solely on account of the prospects of an abundant harvest. It will not be without practical political influence, also, for much discontent in the interior has resulted from hard times and short crops.

KILLING OF SPOTTED TAIL.

The Indian Bureau has received official information of the killing of Spotted Tail at Rose Bud Agency, last Friday, by Crow Dog, another Sioux chief. There has been bad feeling between these two chiefs for a long time, and recently the secretary of the interior ordered Spotted Tail to come to Washington to consult with the department about the Sioux. The department thinks Crow Dog was jealous of Spotted Tail's prominence and influence, as the latter was killed the very day he was to start for Washington. Crow Dog was captain of the police at the Rose Bud agency. When Spotted Tail and Crow Dog were in Washington together the last time there was bad blood between them, and they carried pistols for each other. Spotted Tail was ambitious to become the chief of all the Sioux, and Crow Dog was as aspirant for great honors in the nation, and the department is satisfied that this rivalry led to the killing.

It is said upon the authority of persons in the Indian bureau, that the Indian troubles in New Mexico grew out of the bad management at the Navajo agency. Eastman, the agent, was once removed because of his unpopularity with the Indians, but a few months ago was restored. The Indians hate him, and have protested against his being placed over them. The Indians are so much dissatisfied that it is said they will not stay at the agency while Eastman is in charge.

DECISION BY JUDGE LAWRENCE.

Judge Lawrence, first comptroller of the treasury, rendered his decision in the case of the appeal of George Allman, the star route contractor, on which many other cases are reported to be depending. The decision sustains the finding of the sixth auditor that compensation for "expedited" mail services cannot exceed 50 per cent of the original. A mail contractor is to carry the mails on route 56,236 in California, sixty-three miles, one trip in six days of each week, for $4,490 per annum, and on route 46,211 once a week, for $6,9 per annum, for four years from June 30, 1878. On Feb. 2 the postmaster general "expedited" the service so that one trip had to be made each day, allowing the contractor pro rata additional pay, amounting to about $3,500, and at the same time allowing 50 per cent increase for each additional trip for reduced running time. The expedited service was performed as above. The sixth auditor in setting this contractor's accounts allowed a 50 per cent increase on the original contract price and no more. Allman appealed to the first comptroller, Judge Lawrence reviewed Allman's brief, calling attention to the extra expense of the contractor and the promise from the post office department of a pro rata allowance. Nevertheless he upheld the auditor, and gives an opinion precisely the same as the attorney general several weeks ago. In his decision Judge Lawrence says that the 50 per cent limit is the only safe one to adhere to. There was no legal limit to "expediting" and a pro rata compensation for every increase of service would not only be a misconstruction of law, but would open the door to favoritism and fraud, which is contrary to the safe rule of guarding against temptation."

CLAIMS FOR PENSIONS.

The following order, has been issued by General William W. Dudley, Commissioner of pensions:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR. PENSION BUREAU, Washington, Aug. 10.—Ordered: That in all pension claims wherein more than one disability is alleged, the claimant shall be advised upon the completion of the proof of any one of the alleged disabilities of the existence still necessary to the establishment of the others; and that the office, on request therefor, will issue a certificate for the disability thus established without prejudice to any rights he may have on account of the disabilities then not proven.

W. W. DUDLEY, Commissioner.

In their declaration for pensions claimants very often allege two or more disabilities; in some cases say, for example, a gunshot wound and a chronic rheumatism. The records of the War Department may establish the fact as to the gunshot wound, and may be silent as to rheumatism. The application may allege hernia, heart disease, and disease of the lungs. The records and testimony furnished in the case may fully establish hernia and heart disease, but the proof may be lacking to establish disease of the lungs.

The practice prevailing heretofore has been [illegible] a pension will be allowed for any, and under this ruling much hardship has often been the result. In many cases the evidence is very difficult for the soldier to produce, and especially if it is true in certain classes of diseases. The soldier knows of his disability, and also can with a certainty allege just where it originated, but when he seeks for testimony to prove his case he becomes aware of the difficulty which he has to surmount. His witnesses may be hundreds of miles from him, and, worse still, he may be in ignorance of their whereabouts, and for the government to reject his case for the reason that he cannot prove every allegation is making but a mockery of justice. To avoid this injustice is the object of the Commissioner in issuing the above order.

LEO HARTMANN.

A Mr. Henry Wehle, of New York, who assumes to act as counsel for Leo Hartmann, the Russian Nihilist, who recently arrived at New York, has addressed a letter to Secretary Blaine asking, among other things, that "the department should take action which will assure Mr. Hartmann that his apprehensions of arrest and surrender to Russia are unfounded; that there being no treaty under which the Russian Government can demand extradition, and that, the national Government having no authority to arrest persons for alleged crimes not committed within its jurisdiction, the State Department cannot inquire, and has no authority to determine whether acts committed by Hartmann are crimes recognized and punished as such throughout the civilized world, or only political acts, which are not considered crimes anywhere against which they are directed."

To this impudent and "cheeky" request Secretary Blaine returned the following reply:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Henry Wehle, Esq., Attorney-at-Law, New York City—SIR: Your letter dated the 5th instant, postmarked New York, the 8th, was received to-day. You ask me, as Secretary of State, to declare, in effect, that your client, Mr. Leo Hartmann, shall have the protection of the Government of the United States in case his extradition should be requested by Russia. I received by the same mail a letter from an eminent citizen of Pennsylvania, urging that this Government should make known its willingness to surrender Mr. Hartmann in the event of his being demanded by Russia. In both these communications I am asked to violate official propriety and disregard the traditions of the Department of State by declaring in advance what would be the action of the Government in a hypothetical case, involving a thousand grave legal principles and important personal rights. You might with equal propriety address a communication to the Chief Justice of the United states, interrogating him as to the decision he would render if the case of Hartmann should come before them on a writ of habeas corpus. You suggest that it is the duty of the Department of State to deliver its conclusion on this case because one of its assistants is reported, without authority, to have expressed his own personal views in a casual conversation on the subject. Would you regard it as good ground for demanding that the Supreme Court should make an important ruling on a hypothetical case because the reporter of decisions or a United States Marshal was said to have declared certain views on the principle involved? There is no citizen in the United States to-day, native-born or naturalized, who has the right to demand from any national tribunal—its opinion in a hypothetical case on the plea that it involves a principle which might affect his personal rights. Can you assign any reason why Mr. Leo Hartmann, who is not a citizen of the United States, should, the moment he set foot on American soil, have the right to demand a ruling from one of the executive departments of the Government upon a question of international jurisprudence that may affect his personal liberty, when there is no case pending before the department involving the issue? A half million of immigrants from Europe will probably arrive in the United States during the current year. Can you assign to one any reasonable ground on which Mr. Hartmann should be excepted out of the vast number, and the special protection of the Government vouchsafed and voluntarily guaranteed him in advance of any case arising in which his name was even mentioned. It may, perhaps, be unnecessary to advise you that the conclusions and decisions of the Department of State, on important legal and diplomatic questions, are not made prematurely public through the medium of newspaper interviews, nor in response to attorneys of interested parties.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

THE AMERICAN BANKER'S ASSOCIATION.

At Thursday's session of the American Banker's Association, at Niagara Falls, a letter was read from Secretary Windom on government finances. After detailing the method of procedure in the refunding operations the Secretary says:

"Having succeeded in disposing of the 6 per cents, on May 12 the department gave notice that the coupon bonds of the loan of July 14, 1870, and January 20, 1871, would be paid on July 1, 1881, with a like privilege of continuing the bonds at 3½ per cent to such of the holders as might so request, and at the same time the treasury offered to receive for continuance in like manner any of the uncalled registered bonds of that loan to an amount not exceeding $250,000,000, the remainder of the loan being reserved with a view of its payment from the surplus revenues. The continued 3½ per cent bonds having a market price slightly above par, the 5 percents in question were rapidly presented, and it became necessary to extend somewhat the limit fixed for the amount of registered bonds to be accepted for continuance. On July 1 a notice for the payment, on Oct. 1, 1881, of the registered 5s not continued was given, and the resources of the treasury will be ample to meet their payment.

"The transactions concerning the 5 per cents are, as before stated, not quite complete. Probably there will be continued in all about $400,000,000 of this loan, leaving to be paid $39,703,950, the remainder of the loan having been paid from the surplus revenues under calls previously made. By this plan the department has been not only relieved from the embarrassment of providing for the payment of the coupon interest, but has reduced all the 6 and 5 per cent loans of the government to a loan payable at the option of the government, and bearing interest at only 3½ per cent per annum, and this, with the trifling expense to the government of preparing the new registered bonds and of paying the actual expenses of the London agency, at which only three persons have been employed for a few weeks, issuing about $44,50 00 of the continued bonds.

"The saving to the government through the continuance of these bonds is very gratifying. On the 6 per cents continued the annual saving hereafter in interest will be $4,451,575.75; on the 5 per cents, assuming $400,000,000 to be continued, the annual saving will be about $6,000,000, making a total annual saving hereafter in the interest of the public debt of $10,451,575.75.

"Meanwhile, from March 1 to Oct. 1, 1881, when these operations will have been completed, there will be paid of 6 per cents, $24,211,400, and of 5 per cents, $69,323,650, making an additional annual saving in interest of $4,913,716.50, a total reduction of the interest charge in seven months of $15,370,095.25. In other words, the annual interest charge, which was, March 1, 1881, $76,845,937.50, will be, on Oct. 1, 1881, as nearly as can be now stated, $61,475,842.25. This saving in interest can hereafter be applied to the reduction of the debt, thus reducing it and the burden arising therefrom more rapidly than heretofore.

George S. Cook, president of the executive council, read an address on "Whall Shall Be the Currency of the Future?" The paper was a careful review of the financial outlook, and was well received.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Viscount Nogueiras, the Portugese minister to the United States, has again been turned out of the hotels at Williamstown, Mass., for insulting female employes, although he paid $100 per week for himself and two sons.

The Alliance Insurance company, of Boston, has caused the arrest of President Long and Treasurer Howard for the embezzlement of $11,000, for which they had been indicted by the grand jury. They gave bail in $5,000 each.

Hon. O. H. Browning, who died Wednesday evening at Quincy, Ill., filled the unexpired term of Stephen A. Douglas in the senate, and was secretary of the interior in President Johnson's cabinet. He was born in Kentucky in 1806.

A flood at Central City, Col., caused by the bursting of a rain cloud, did damage of $50,000. One man was killed. A volume of water five feet high ran through the streets, and at some points the debris was piled up twenty five feet.

Henry Wehle, of New York, counsel for Leo Hartmann, asked of Secretary Blaine assurance that his client would not be arrested. The secretary replied with a tribute to the impudence of the attorney, and declined to give his opinions on the issue.

A widower of 70 and a widow of 50, residing at Ottawa, Ill., chose to marry. A mob kept up a charivari for three hours, and then dared in the door and demanded money. The old man followed them to the roadway, and was left with his head crushed in.

A band of cowboys recently attacked a caravan from Sonora on the way to Arizona, killed four of the party, and carried off $5,000 and the pack animals. The civil authorities in Arizona seem powerless, and the Mexicans hold the Americans responsible for the outrages.

The Denver papers announce that the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy and Denver and Rio Grande roads have formed a permanent alliance, and will extend the Missouri road two hundred miles into Denver and make a joint extension into Utah to connect with the Central Pacific.

A band of Apaches made a raid on a small village in New Mexico near the line of the Atlantic and Pacific railroad, and killed twenty-seven citizens. Charles G. Gough reports having been attacked by seven Apaches at a point only sixteen miles from Santa Fe, and that he killed one and wounded three.

William Campbell has served nearly five years in the Wisconsin penitentiary for the assassination of Dan O'Mara at Chippewa Falls. C. W. Chase, a life prisoner in that institution, now confesses that he perpetrated the crime for which Campbell was incarcerated.

It is believed in New York that Vanderbilt's plan for the settlement of the trunk-line war is a money pool for a period of five years. Some journals credit the Central magnate with a patriotic purpose to abolish differential rates, and thus extend his protection to the commerce of New York against the inroads of Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Commissioner Fink' reports that the joint executive committee of the trunk lines resolved to restore on August 22 the grain rate of 25 cents from Chicago to New York. The meeting was a secret one, and lasted for three hours. No representative of the Vanderbilt reads was in attendance.

About forty armed and masked men visited the jail at Fredonia, Kan., to secure two murderers named Hardin. The outer door was battered down and the guards overpowered, but one of the latter threw his pistol to a prisoner, who mortally wounded the leader of the lynchers, and stopped proceedings.

For several months past a Canadian commission has been taking testimony as to the needs of the civil service. It now reports that the mode of nomination through political influence is defective in the highest degree, and earnestly urges the adoption of the English system of competitive examinations.

P. H. Bernays, a merchant of Little Rock, undertook by a trick to get his partner released from military duty at Perryville. Governor Churchill, on learning of the scheme, put the merchant under arrest, with orders to report daily at the executive office. The storekeeper put up a cartoon in his place of business, and the governor compelled him to take it down.

The straight-out republican convention of Virginia selected for governor William C. Wickham, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, and for lieutenant governor S. M. Yost, the editor of the Valley Virginian. But these gentlemen absolutely declined to permit the use of their names, and the result will be a coalition of the Mahone men and a majority of the white and colored republicans against the democracy.

The mystery of the robbery of the Citizens' bank of Paris, Ky., by which $20,000 was obtained, is in process of solution. The wife of a tailor named Cooper, who was one of those suspected of the crime, was on Thursday at daylight seen to dig up a large tin box in her back yard, and she soon after left for Covington to join her husband. The telegraph intercepted them, and the missing bonds were secured.

Charles Crocker, president of the Southern Pacific road, reports the laying of a mile of track per day beyond El Paso, and predicts that the line will, by July next, be finished to Galveston. He says engineers are now running a survey from Corinne to Yankton, and a road can be built for one-third the cost of the Union Pacific, which will be done if Gould consolidates the Atchison, Texas Pacific, and Union Pacific lines.

Dr. Bliss had a finger poisoned by pus from the president's wound. The steamer Tallapoosa has been prepared for a trip, and a suit of four large rooms has been arranged for the president, the notable feature being a swinging bed. Dr. Blackburn, the governor of Kentucky, expresses the opinion that Guiteau's bullet was deflected to the spinal column, and that the president will undoubtedly die from his wound.

There is great alarm in New Mexico over atrocities perpetrated by renegade Indians. A party of sixty or more, after killing seven persons near Elrita, crossed the track of the Atlantic and Pacific railway, near Beacon Springs, on Wednesday. Another band of twelve fired into a camp of Atchison railway men near Rincon. The Atlantic road has sent two special train-loads of armed men to the scene of hostilities. Rumon Chiquito, chief of the Mescalero Apaches, has returned to the agency with twenty bucks, evidently satisfied with his achievements.

THE PRESIDENT'S WOUND!

A PARALLEL CASE IN ARMY LIFE.

In the issue of the Philadelphia Record on the 27th of July was published an article relating to the case of Capt. William Palmer, now Quartermaster Second Brigade New Jersey State National Guard, who was wounded at the battle of Mossy Creek, East Tennessee, in the winter of 1863. In that article the striking resemblance of the case to that of President Garfield, in many particulars, was pointed out, the authority for this statement being the brave sufferer himself. A still better authority is Dr David Kennedy, then surgeon U. S. General Hospital, West Philadelphia, who had charge of the case, and performed the operation of removing the detached bone and finally extricated the bullet. The entire treatment being perfectly successful—Capt. Palmer living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr Kennedy does not hesitate to say that many of his patients both in military and civil practice owe their lives to the wonderful healing and strengthening powers of his medicine called "Favorite Remedy." The Doctor is in possession of an autograph letter from Capt. Palmer, attesting his indebtedness for his present good health to this medicine—"Favorite Remedy" which he says has doubled the obligation which he felt to the Doctor for the treatment of the Captain's terrible wound.

While Dr. Kennedy is engaged in the introduction of "Favorite," he still continues the practice of his profession at Roundout, N. Y., performs all the minor as well as capital operations of surgery. Address as above. 4w

BROOKLYN.

The craze for sylvan scenery continues and my criticisms on the crickety ways of my friends will be attributed to envy, when you hear that at the first chirup of invitations typed by Minnie Reynolds, I picked up my sun hat and started for the annual farmers' powwow at Devil's lake, determined to find out what sort of witchery drew people so far to eat their dinner in a fashion which if introduced at home on washing days would procure a divorce for any granger in christendom.

We escaped the choking sensation that lurks in the rear of carriages by choosing the roughest road. The ride of fourteen miles was dreamily pleasant, the outlook over hilly fields, unobstructed by aught save sunshine; so it was a charm very much realized when we turned into a streak between horses, wagons and policemen that blockaded a plowed field. We had ridden five miles near the lake shore where nothing but the scent of buckwheat and clover blent with a breeze grown to lazy to flap a sail, but at the gate of the rural stamping ground, dust from above, below, around and throughout, sifted over, surged among, and stuccoed everything and everybody.

I had not read the program but expected when woods were gained that everything would be lovely, and so it was. By that time my eyes were so muddled the world wore guess-work colors, so if they were not rosy the fault was mine. The novelty of keeping my mouth closed became a luxury in five minutes, and the probabilities that my dress would look no worse than all the rest mixed content with smotheration.

We lunched, then each one of my party selected a point of compass and started to see the show, which if named truthfully would be called the great wriggle and squeeze. Thousands of people crowded so closely together as if they had come to hear Beecher, and all the time each one and his neighbor was making for the front seat.—The squabble was good humored enough. I heard no disputing and only a few mild swears. A big boy stepped off a bench, and on to the north end of my shoe. I heard him say 'thunderation' pretty loud as he brought up against a tree; but my sentiment accorded so nicely with his I could not find fault with his grammar.

I did not see what was going on inside the hotel, but outside folks were swarming and no place of settlement selected. A gate and keeper barred the landing, and I joined a few children on the shore. To get there I crossed three open drains leading from the grounds above into the lake.

I thought it near oration time when the HERALD boys got planted and found a seat close to the sanctuary.—The president called order, but no one heeded until a prayer, which was so different from all else, attracted attention and produced audible silence. Then a man four acres square raised up and plunged heaven and earth in obscurity as far as I was concerned. You will never know how I got squeezed getting out of there. No doubt those senators were eloquent but I never heard a word. I did the next best thing, found some Sand lake friends and we did our own talking.

At five o'clock we gathered by the wagon and took a different road home, Hundreds did the same, but as many came to take their places and continue the aimless wanderings up and down, amid noise, dust and confusion that no one would endure one hour at home without noting it a life grievance. Such a day is reckoned one of hardship in the early life of those bouncing pioneers. None but the boys and girls seemed to care much for the lake. They fancied the boats, which certainly looked nice.

The only inquiry for historical light that I heard was from a little girl.—She asked her father what made folks call that Devil's lake. He was looking at wheat drills on one side of the hubbub, and snapped out the answer: "Because the devil always gets folks into just such a muss as this. I wasted a little pity on the man, because he had been there all day and had not found out that manufactured discomforts are nicer than an ordinary inconvenience and I had. It is a pity children should not learn something from such an excursion, so this is for them. The Indians called it Manitou or lake of the evil spirit, which means Devil, because Maouna, a Chippewa girl, killed Marfa, the chief of the Hurons, and then drowned herself there.

COLORADO LETTER.

GEORGETOWN, COLO., Aug. 13.

EDITOR HERALD:

Last Monday, Aug. 8th, was the day I had fixed upon for leaving this city on my return home. There are two trains daily on this road, one leaving at 7 o'clock in the morning, the other at 4 in the afternoon I might have taken the morning train, but had I done so this particular letter would never have been written.—I decided to take the afternoon train, and "thereby hangs a tale."

There was a fearful shower that afternoon here in Georgetown, beginning about two o'clock and continuing until after four. But further down the road towards Idaho Springs and beyond it amounted to a regular Colorado "cloud burst," a style of rain storm to which this high altitude seems to be specially liable, in which the water comes down in a body instead of single drops, and sometimes produces very serious consequences. In this case it washed away several miles of railroad track between here and Idaho Springs, and also between the latter place and Forks Creek, a point where the north and south branches of Clear Creek unite. Nearly all the bridges were swept away, and the road was rendered impassible.

The passengers stopping at the different hotels who intended going on this train, knew nothing of this disaster to the road until they reached the depot a few minutes before 4 o'clock. A telegram was received just before the time for the train to start announcing a bad washout and ordering the train to be held. But before the operator here could learn the extent of the damage the wire was down and no further information could be obtained. Had this occurred a few moments sooner the train would have started, and in all probability been wrecked.

Knowing that I could not leave the city under one or two days unless I footed it, I concluded to utilize a portion at least of my enforced stay, by visiting the celebrated Argentine Pass, the distance being about eleven miles, and the altitude 13,100 feet above the sea level. At some future time, perhaps, I may conclude to send the HERALD an account of this trip, which far exceeded any other I have ever taken in Colorado, so far as the wild grandeur of its scenery is concerned.

I returned from this visit to the "backbone of the continent" Tuesday evening, but no news had yet been received as to when trains could pass over the road, the wires not having been put in operation. All day Wednesday matters still remained in suspense, and I began to wonder if I was destined to be held a prisoner in Georgetown during the remainder of my natural life. The engineer of the train boarded at the hotel where I was stopping, and at the supper table on Wednesday evening, informed me that he had just received orders to start his train the next morning at 7 o'clock. But at breakfast, the next morning, he informed me that the order had been countermanded, and the train would not start until 10:30. This was not bad. I could wait until 10:30 without serious inconvenience, and so did not grumble at this brief delay.—But on repairing to the depot I was met with the announcement, "No train will leave to-day." That settled it. The repairs on the road, had not yet reached the point of safety for trains to pass over, and so I settled myself for another day, and for anything I knew to the contrary, another week of enforced stay in this city of the mountains.

In the meantime another severe rain had set in, which continued all the afternoon and all the evening, and I confidentally expected to hear of another washout the first thing on Friday morning. But such was not the case, and at 10:30 o'clock A. M., Friday, a train was made up and started out, with the expectation of meeting the up train from Golden at a place where a transfer of passengers would be made. This train carried the first mail which had left Georgetown since last Monday morning.—But I felt so confident that the powerful rain of the previous day would render the newly repaired portions of this road unsafe that I concluded not to embark, but wait until the return of the train would enable me to learn whether the road was really safe.—The train did not reach this city on its return until 8:30 last evening, having consumed more than six hours in making the transfer from one train to the other.

On the way back the coal gave out before reaching Empire, the next coaling station, and there was not steam enough to pull up the heavy grade. In this emergency they ran back a mile or two until they came to a section of "snow fence," when all hands pitched in, breaking up the boards and piling the "tender" full of dry fuel. This first trip over the road since the washout was made without any accident, although it will be several days yet before the damage to the road will be fully repaired, so that trains can pass through without a transfer of passengers.

In order to explain to the readers of the HERALD the philosophy of these "washouts", which so frequently occur on our mountain roads, I would remind them of the peculiar topography of the country through which many of them are built. Take as an example this branch of the Colorado Central running from Golden to Georgetown. It passes up a narrow gorge formed by almost perpendicular mountains rising from one to two thousand feet on each side, and barely wide enough at the bottom to afford a passage for Clear Creek. In some places there is just room enough between the creek and the base of the mountain to lay a three foot guage railroad track; while in others the space required for the track has been blasted out of the solid rock which forms the face of the mountain.

Take the letter V, with the two sides from one to two thousand feet high, Clear Creek running at the bottom, with the railroad track zigzagging along first on one side then on the other, and the reader will have some idea of the exact position of Clear Creek and the surroundings.—Then consider further, that the nearly perpendicular face of the mountains is all seamed with deep gorges extending from top to bottom, which are usually dry; but in case of a sudden shower, such as frequently occur in this region are filled with a wildly rushing torrent, which reaches the bottom with such tremendous force as to destroy everything in its way. If it strikes the railroad track it sweeps both track and embankment into the streams. Now, suppose a dozen of these swollen torrents to come down from either face of the mountain at the same time, and pour their contents into Clear Creek. That stream would be raised from eight to twenty feet in less time than it requires to tell of it, and sweep from their fastenings every bridge that stood in its way. This is precisely what occurred during the recent storm, damaging the road to such an extent as to stop all the trains for four successive days, and subjecting the railroad company to pecuniary loss amounting to thousands of dollars. When the first train passed over the road Friday, it brought the Denver daily papers of Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.—The news concerning President Garfield brought us in the last papers received previous to the washout, was decidedly unfavorable. Four days then passed before we heard anything further. We did not know that another operation had been performed until Friday evening. For aught any of us knew to the contrary, the President of the United States might be dead.

During my prolonged and enforced stay in Georgetown, I have been placed under lasting obligation to Mr. A. Blackman, and his estimable wife, for numerous personal kindnesses, which greatly relieved the tedium of my disappointment. My own brother and sister could not have met me with more cordiality or made me feel more at home during my stay. God bless them.

"The Domestic Tyrant."

"The average man," quoth Mrs. Pardington, "is a weak and irritable domestic tyrant," and Mrs. P. is correct. Tyrannical to a fault the average man will enter the blissful paradise of a happy home, scratch himself in fiendish glee, send the baby into convulsions, and for what? Why, because he has the Itching Piles, and is too mean to buy Swayne's Ointment, which is an infallible cure for the worst cases of that annoying complaint.

Saline Observer: The employees of the Tecumseh HERALD office—the boss included—all went fishing last week, and the editor gives a graphic account of it in last week's HERALD. After reading it, we came to the conclusion that there must have been a lemonade(?) stand near their fishing grounds, or else there's one mighty near the editor's sanctum.

SEPTEMBER.

The golden-rod is yellow;
The corn is turning brown;
The trees in apple orchards
With fruit are bending down.

The gentian's fringed fingers
Are curling in the sun;
In dusty pods the milkweed
Its hidden silk has spun.

The sedges flaunt their harvest
In every meadow nook;
And asters by the brook-side
Make asters in the brook.

From dewy vines at morning
The grapes' sweet odors rise;
At noon the roads all flutter
With yellow butterflies.

By all these lovely tokens
September days are here,
With summer's best of weather
And autumn's best of cheer.

But none of all this beauty
Which floods the earth and air
Is half so fair as memory
Which makes September fair.

'Tis a thing which I remember;
To name it thrills me yet;
One day of one September
I never can forget.

IRISH LOVE SONG.

Ah, swan of slenderness, dove of tenderness,
Jewel of joys, arise!
The little red lark, like a rosy spark
Of flame to his sun-burst flies;
But till you are risen earth is a prison
Full of my captive sighs.
Then wake, and discover to your fond lover
The morn of your shadowless eyes.

The dawn is dark to me; hark, oh hark to me,
Pulse of my heart, I pray.
And gently gliding out of my hiding,
Dazzle me with thy day!
And oh! I'll fly to thee, singing, and sigh to thee
Passion so sweet and gay;
The lark shall listen, and dew-drops glisten,
Laughing on every spray.

JENISON'S BET.

When the widow Coe married Janson Carter she brought him no money at all; only a small, stony farm in Noppit, that had been her father's, and two wild boys of 10 and 12 years' growth.

Jack and Dan were hard subjects for a stepfather to rule, and Jason Carter found his hands full. Naturally he was a quiet, gentle, persistent man; in his youth he ran away to sea, and for fifteen years he had been a common sailor, which had pretty well knocked the quiet out of and the persistence into him. In this time he had learned to swear, as a matter of course, though he had been strictly brought up, and went to church and Sunday-school always.

His father would have used the rod, but he also was spared the trouble, for both father and mother had died before Jason came back, and when he found they had gone he never went back to Tolland, but, after he got tired of seagoing, took to peddling notions about the country, and at last married the widow Coe, and settled down in Noppit.

He had stopped swearing long ago, for under dear old Father Taylor's teachings he had been converted between his last two voyages, and though profanity had become a habit with him, he had conquered it at last after years of patient endeavor, and now was so gentle and pleasant and pious that Phebe Coe thought her last days would be her best days.

He had come to know the widow Coe from being an old shipmate with her brother, John Wires, who had also left seafaring, because he had injured a knee, and became too lame to climb rigging; so he set up a small shop in Boston, where he sold tobacco, twine and other odds and ends, but he had been married and had one son, called Jenison.

The boy was about the age of widow Coe's youngest son, for her brother had married soon after she did, and when Jason Carter began the peddling business John Wires had told him to stop when he went through to Scranton and see his sister. The children were small and their father living when Jason first saw them, and they learned to look for "Uncle Jas" every spring and fall with delight, for he always brought them marbles, tops, candy, strings, and made them bows and kites, sure passports to a boy's heart.

So, when their poor, drunken father died, and the widow found herself without a penny, she moved over to Noppit, to live with her father; and when he died, too, leaving her all he had—the farm from which he scratched a scanty living—and she found herself alone and helpless, she listened favorably to Jason Carter's proposal, for he was as tired of his wandering life as she was of her loneliness, and married him.

The boys were glad, for they loved him as they never loved their own father, and Jason was as good to them as if they were his own, though a certain thrill of emotion shook him when his baby daughter came that had never troubled that worn old heart in any emergency of Jack and Dan. But then Celia was a girl; of course that made it different.

Jason, when compared with his predecessor, was as mild and pleasant round the house as a spring day after a stormy winter. He became a useful and prominent member in the Noppit church, and never was heard to utter a profane or impatient word. Jack and Dan loved him as healthy boys love anything but mischief and meals, and Phebe was entirely happy.

True, they were poor; Jason had a few hundred dollars laid by, but the Noppit farm was too sterile to produce crops enough to support the family, so he laid out his little capital, or part of it, in a good breed of sheep, which found abundant living among mullein, hardhack, and huckleberry bushes, and proved in due time a profitable investment.

For in those days dogs, the curse of New England, were by no means common in the country; there was no reason for keeping them, and farmers had money and mutton instead of hydrophobia and horrors.

The wool sold well always, and kept the family in socks, for Jason's wife could spin and knit with wonderful rapidity; the lambs he had not room to raise were sent to Hartford and sold to the butchers, and now and then a fat old wether went to the meat-man's cart in the shape of juicy quarters.

But the glory of the flock was a big faced ram, who terrified maurauding boys and intruding vagabonds, and asked no better fun than to send somebody heels over head whenever he had a chance.

Jack and Dan had brought him up from lambhood, but he was no longer a lamb, and of his painstaking education only one trait staid by him, a distinct and angry recollection of the rod that had not been spared in his early and somewhat stupid youth. To the day of Billy's death, a little stick shaken before anything, would send him "head on" at that luckless object, and the boys often amused themselves by climbing the pine rail fence and dangling a small switch full in Billy's sight against a big post; the result was sudden and severe to Billy, and he might have seriously injured himself if Daddy (as the boys called Jason) had not found them at this sport one day and strictly forbidden it. Cruelty to animals was one of the few things that roused his choler and made him imperative.

One summer Mrs. Carter received a letter from her brother asking her to take his boy a few months; his wife was so feeble that she was going home to her father's with the baby and a young child, and Jenison could not go with her for want of room. Mr. Wires did not want him in the city with him at a boarding-house, but was willing to pay his board in Noppit; so he came.

Jenison Wires was a sharp, city-bred boy, with very little faith in anybody's goodness. His father was a pushing, money-making, profane man, and his mother a meek cipher; he himself, at the age of fourteen, could smoke and swear and talk sailor slang glibly, for he had run anywhere.

Mrs. Carter was troubled and disgusted to find such a boy on her hands. Jason considered that God in His wisdom had sent the boy there for his good, and resolved to pray for him as for his own boys, and set him as good an example as he tried to set Jack and Dan, and to "deal with him," as he expressed it, "with a view to his eternal salvation."

The boys thought Jenison was wonderful. He knew so much, he had seen so much, he had so many things; he had such a pocket knife and such a swagger! But when his first oath came out Jack and Dan were startled.

"Look-a-here," said Jack, "don't you let daddy hear no such talk as that! He'll tune you if he does, and no mistake!"

"Whe-e-ew!" responded Jenison; "I ain't a boy; I guess I'll swear if I want to, for all of him; he ain't so pious himself, I bet, but what he rips out sometimes."

"He don't! he don't never?" the boys exclaimed in unison.

"H'm! I guess you don't know him!" the old fellow keeps shady before folks, but he used to swear like a Botany bay pirate; I've heard pa say so!"

The boys were shocked into momentary silence, but recovered themselves soon.

"And if he ever did he don't now," added reasonable Jack. "He's awful good; he's a professor; he prays in meetin' and he don't ever scold nor swear, nor nothin'. Scarce ever he licks a fellow; he did give Dan and me one whalin', but he oughter have, that's a fact. Dan he told a thunderin' lie and I backed him up. I tell ye! we was sore for one spell, after he found it out."

"Well, I know he used to swear on board ship. I've heard pa tell stories about him. They called him 'Still Jase,' to be sure, but when he got riled the fur flew. I'll bet my jack-knife I can make him swear inside of next week."

"I'll bet my head you can't!" retorted Dan.

"I don't know as I want your head for anything, but I'll bet you my knife against that cake of maple sugar you have got in the closet that I'll set Uncle Jase a swearing before next week's over."

The boys were so sure that nothing could make daddy swear, and so pleased with their first bet of any importance, that they accepted the terms at once, and Jenison began to cudgel his brains for means of tripping up Jason Carter's tongue.

One day he slyly let down the bars into a field of clover, getting up before light to do it; the two cows, turned out of the barnyard to nip at the roadside until Dan and Jack could drive them to pasture, accepted the bait, entered the clover and rioted in its fragrant spheres, half killing themselves with greedy feeding. Jack found them half an hour after his chores were done in the condition that results to cows from eating green clover, and Uncle Jason worked over the poor creatures all day, without a word of impatience, though he said more than once:

"I wish I knew who let them bars down, I'd kinder like to say a word in season to him."

The pins were taken out of the ox-yoke and never found, egg shells strewed the hay mow, while the family never could have any for their own use, the nests being always empty. The grey cat's tail was singed to barcness, and her ears snipped, but Uncle Jason never swore or lost his temper. His scythe snath disappeared, but he borrowed another; his grindstone was soaped, the hay cutter broken, hoes and rakes disappeared when wanted, and reappeared when useless; his razor was lost and hopelessly dulled when he found it, and a thousand petty annoyances heaped on him in vain. He only said to his wife:

"It does beat all what's got inter things this week; seems as if I never was so pestered. It ain't in human nature for things to happen so. Somebody's a-doin on't, I sartin feel to believe, but I declare for it I can't see into it a mite."

Jack and Dan began to triumph; only one day more of the week was available and Jenison was put on his mettle, and plots laid accordingly.

They had prayers always before breakfast, the weather was warm and the outer door open wide this morning, and setting out just as his uncle laid down the Bible under pretext of scaring an old hen away, the boy opened a little side gate into the lot where he had previously driven the old ram, and laying a train of salt to a big lump on the doorstep, retreated speedily to the kitchen and knelt down next to Mr. Carter, where he had left his chair.

Billy had seen the tin pail in Jenison's hand, and knew it meant salt; he followed the train surely to the door, and having begun to nibble the lump, heard an earnest and accustomed voice near by, and looked up into the kitchen door.

Jason was praying earnestly, and the rest had their eyes closed and heads bent—all but Jenison, who was watching Billy from under his arm. As he saw the ram look in he picked up a short switch from under his chair, and held it threateningly over his uncle's back. Billy gave one leap across the door, charged Uncle Jason in the rear, and sent him sprawling.

"D—n that ram!" he roared in a voice of thunder.

Jack and Dan sprang up at once, drove Billy out and shut the door, but before they could speak their father was on his knees again, pouring out such earnest, humble confession of the sin he had committed, such tearful petition for pardon, such heartfelt contrition for a lapse that seemed to him dreadful, after many long years of prayer and struggle, that hard and bad as Jenison Wires was he could not bear it; it was the turning point in the boy's life; he got up from his knees and confessed the whole thing to his uncle and asked his forgiveness; and the other boys cried heartily.

Jason Carter never forgot that day; it was remembered with humility and thankfulness both; for Jenison told him years after, that he learned to respect religion, then and there, and that is the first step toward desiring and obtaining it.

Jenison never claimed his bet, but when he went home gave Dan his knife for a remembrance; and years after, when Deacon Jason Carter was dead and gone, his step-sons recalled with affection, reverence and amusement mingled, the only oath they ever heard him speak, and how it was brought about by Jenison's bet.

Fern Leaves.

HOW TO BLEACH AND PRESS THEM.

The first thing requisite of ferns is to procure proper materials. Many persons prefer Labarraque's solution of chloride of soda. I formerly used a preparation called Jouvelle water, which I was always able to obtain at one particular druggist's in my native city. I liked it because it was ready for use.

Since then I have been successful with chloride of lime, which may be prepared for use in the following manner: Take a half pound of strong chloride of lime and place it in an earthen pitcher, add three pints of soft, cold water, and stir carefully with an iron spoon, pressing so as to mash the lumps well against the side of the vessel; keep it covered and allow it to stand in a cool place until the lime has precipitated on the bottom of the pitcher, which will be done in about an hour, except a small portion that may remain floating upon the surface. This should be removed with a spoon or skimmer, after which the clear liquid should be poured off into a bottle, then corked up tightly, and kept in a cool place.

When ready to commence bleaching your ferns, take a glass jar, such as is used for preserves, etc., having a mouth wide enough to receive the largest fern you have. Remember that the ferns should be pressed between the leaves of a book until required for bleaching. Place them carefully in the jar, allowing them to curl around its sides, rather than with the stem downward, in order to avoid breaking the leaves which have become dry and brittle from the pressing. The small ferns and leaflets may occupy the space in the middle of the jar. Then, with clear warm water, cover the ferns in the jar, adding the bleaching solution in the proportion of two table-spoonfuls to a pint of water, cover tightly and set in a warm place. After twenty-four hours gently pour off the liquid, and replace with fresh, mixed as before. Allow them to remain in the second preparation forty-eight hours, when this must be changed in the same manner.

In a few days the ferns will begin to whiten at the edges, and will gradually change from a greenish brown to a beautiful phantom whiteness. Each fern must be carefully taken from the jar, when it is discovered to be perfectly white, without waiting for all to be finished.

Often in bleaching a large fern it happens that only a portion will be thoroughly white. The best plan is to take the fern from the jar, lay it in a basin of clear warm water, cut off the bleached leaflets, and return the remainder to the jar. When ready for your bouquet, you may be able to unite the parts with gum arabic. It will be necessary to change the water four or five times during the bleaching of one jar of ferns, and the time required to bleach them perfectly will extend over a period of one or two weeks. When the sprays are found to be entirely white, take each one separately from the jar with the fingers, always holding them by the stems. Have ready a basin of clean warm water in which to put them; allowing them to remain in it several hours. They may be thoroughly cleaned by changing the water several times, but require gentle handling.

When ready to be dried, take each one by the stem and lay it in another basin of warm water, allowing it to float on the surface, then pass under it a piece of unsized white (or blotting paper) paper, and in that manner lift it from the water. It will cling to the paper, and usually assumes its natural shape. If it does not, straighten the small leaves with the point of a pin. To get rid of the moisture in the paper lay it on a soft towel for a short time, and the towel will absorb the moisture. Then lay it between two sheets of the same white paper, and press in a book. When all of the ferns have been rinsed, dried and placed between papers in a book lay a heavy weight on it to ensure good pressing.

If you choose, you may change the places of the same, or remove them to other books to hasten their drying.

Keep them pressed until you are ready to arrange your bouquet, for they will be apt to curl if exposed to the air.

This is truly a delicate and tedious process, but with care and a great deal of patience you will feel amply repaid for your trouble.

Do Not Exaggerate.

There are persons whom you can always believe, because you know they have the habit of telling the truth. They do not "color" a story or enlarge a bit of news in order to make it sound fine or remarkable.

There are others whom you hardly know whether to believe or not, because they "stretch" things so. A trifling incident grows in size but not in quality by passing through their mouth. They take a small fact, or slender bit of news, and pad it with added words, and paint it with highly-colored adjectives, until it is largely unreal, and gives a false impression. And one doesn't like to listen to folks when so much must be allowed for "shrinkage."

Cultivate the habit of telling the truth in little things as well as in great things. Pick your words wisely, and use only such as rightly mean what you wish to say. Never "stretch" a story to make it seem bigger or funnier. Do this, and people will learn to trust and respect you. This will be better than having a name for telling wonderful stories, or making foolishly and falsely "funny" remarks. There are enough true funny things happening in the world, and they are most entertaining when told exactly as they came to pass.

Wakefulness from Overwork.

It does not seem to occur to some individuals that wakefulness can result from overwork. Though some say they could not sleep they were so tired, yet if asked to explain the fact, could not do it. There is a very important relation between the circulating and muscular systems. Unless the muscles aided the heart and blood vessels to contract, the blood could not circulate. Thus some people find, after a hard summer's work, it is almost impossible to get sound rest until the system gets strong. Old people often cannot sleep after doing work that uses up their strength.

When the wakefulness has become chronic from overwork, it requires time, patience and good sense to overcome it. Rest, light exercise and bracing mountain air, with suitable diet, will do much to restore the forces. As this class of invalids do not stand the cold well, they should go south winters, and if possible get on high land or mountains.

In these days of pedestrian feats, I would that a warning voice was lifted to the rising generation not to try to emulate their example. To travel or to work day and night is not always profitable, as will be seen by the following story:

A man in Maine wishing to put through a large quantity of logs in a certain time, concluded to keep his mill moving day and night. Instead of hiring extra help for this emergency, he foolishly thought to do the work himself, so day and night his sawmill was in constant motion. The doctor passing one day warned him of the danger of his course, to which he paid but little heed. After having finished his job he started for the house, saying that he was going to get some sleep. He went to bed only to imagine himself at his late occupation of sawing logs. His hands seemed to be moving to do their usual tasks, while the brain seemed to tire of its thoughts. The doctor was summoned, but could not quiet the overtaxed system. By this time his distress was awful, and hauling out his money box he offered the doctor its entire contents if he would but put him to sleep, but to no purpose. I need not say here that it requires a person of strong will to forego sleep enough to break down, and in individuals of sound sense it is only by some unusual strain that they finally succumb, and from their honest endeavors to excel they should have our warmest sympathies.

A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

Powerful Explosives.

Gun-cotton is prepared by dipping cellular tissue, viz., cotton, sawdust or printing paper, in strong nitric acid (aquafortis.) It is then to be carefully washed and dried. It is not materially changed in appearance. It explodes at the heat of boiling water (212 degrees.) It explodes with much greater violence and suddenness than gun-powder, and for that reason is more liable to burst the gun. See what a power sleeps in our ignorance. Take a saw and cut up a bit of deal board, a bit of dried pine board. Make a teacup full of sawdust. Steep this in a saucer full of aquafortis, dry slowly at a distance from the fire, and this single cupful of compound, filled into a tin vessel and inserted in the basement wall of a building, will, when exploded, blow it to pieces.

Bad Drainage.

The criminal carelessness or wilful neglect of builders in erecting houses with imperfect plumbing and bad drainage is a fruitful source of disease, and thousands are carried off annually with Malaria or Typhoid Fevers from this cause. The Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters will cure these diseases. The whole treatment for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

Chesterfield on Taxation.

"Luxury, my lords, is to be taxed, but vice prohibited, let the difficulty in the law be what it will. Would you lay a tax on a breach of the ten commandments? Would not such a tax be wicked and scandalous? Would it not imply an indulgence to all those who could pay the tax? Vice, my lords, is not properly to be taxed, but to be suppressed. Luxury, or that which is only pernicious by excess, though not strictly unlawful, may be made more difficult. But the use of those things that are simply hurtful in their own nature, and in every degree, is to be prohibited. None, my lords, ever heard, in any nation, of a tax upon adultery, because a tax implies a license granted for the use of that which is taxed, to all who are willing to pay for it. Drunkenness is universally and in all circumstances an evil, and therefore ought not to be taxed, but prohibited."

A Physician of Great Prominence in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

There is no more trying season than Spring for those afflicted with lung trouble. Use Arthur's Elixir of Sulphur freely. It will strengthen the system and purify the blood, and the changes of weather will cease to trouble you. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

A pert little girl boasted to one of her friends that her father kept a carriage. "Ah, but my father drives an omnibus," was the triumphant reply.

An Irish soldier, who read his name in the list of deaths at a hospital, wrote home that he did not believe it; in fact, he knew the statement was a falsehood as soon as he read it.

An Irish witness in a court of justice being asked what kind of ear-marks the hog in question had, replied: "He had no particular ear-mark except a very short tail."

Two Irishmen were one day engaged in roofing a house, when one of them lost his balance and fell to the ground. The other hastened to him and inquired, when he found him lying prostrate and still: "Mickey! Mickey! are you dead?" "No," replied Mickey, "not dead, but spacheless!"

A farmer who had employed a green Emeralder, ordered him to give the mule some corn in the ear. On his coming in, the farmer asked:

"Well, Mike, did you give the mule the corn?"

"To be sure I did."

"How did you give it?"

"And shure, as ye told me, in the ear."

"How much did you give?"

"Well, you see, the crather wouldn't hold still, and kept switching her ears about so, I couldn't get but a handful into both ears."

A certain literary gentleman, wishing to be undisturbed one day, instructed his Irish servant to admit no one, and if any one should enquire for him, to give them an equivocal answer. Night came, and the gentleman proceeded to interrogate Pat as to his callers.

"Did any one call?"

"Yes, sir, wan gintleman."

"What did he say?"

"He axed was your honor in."

"Well, what did you tell him?"

"Shure, I gave him a quivakle ansur plaze your honor."

"How was that?"

"I axed him was his grandmother a monkey!"

Good Advice for Everybody.

1. Never, under any circumstances, assume a responsibility that you can avoid consistently with your duty to yourself and others.

2. Base all your actions upon a principle of right; preserve your integrity of character, and in doing this never reckon on the cost.

3. Remember that self-interest is much more likely to warp your judgment, than all other circumstances combined; therefore look well to your duty when your interest is concerned.

4. Never make money at the expense of your reputation.

5. Be neither lavish or niggardly. Of the two, avoid the latter. A mean man is universally despised, but public favor is a stepping-stone to preferment; therefore generous feelings should be cultivated.

6. Say but little; think much and do more.

7. Let your expenses be such as to leave a balance in your pocket. Ready money is a friend in need.

8. Avoid borrowing and lending.

9. Wine drinking, and cigar smoking are bad habits; they impair the health and pocket, and lead to a waste of time.

10. Never relate your misfortunes, and never grieve over what you cannot prevent.

11. Cultivate promptness in deciding upon matters that come before you; there are few objects more disagreeable than an undecided, vacillating man. Consider thoughtfully, but decide promptly.

12. Never break a business engagement of any kind, if it be possible to meet it. Let nothing cause you to become careless of business etiquette, integrity and promptitude.

13. Let truth and an unwavering faith in God underlie all your motives and actions.

Presence of Mind in an Emergency.

It was during the seige of Wagner, and the Union parallels were but a few hundred yards away from the line of grim black tubes that ever and anon "emboweled with outrageous noise the air disgorging foul their devilish glut of iron globes." A line of abatis was to be built across a clear space in point-blank range of the rebel gunners and sharp shooters.

"Sargeant," says one of the officers in charge, "go pace that opening and give me the distance as near as possible." Says the Sergeant, for we will let him tell the rest of the story, "I started right off. When I got to the opening I put er like the devil in a gale of wind. What with grape, cannister, round shot, shell, and a regular bees' nest of rifle balls, I just think there must have been a fearful drain of amunition on the Confederate Government about that time. I don't know how it was, but I didn't get so much as a scratch, but I did get powerful scared. When I'd got under cover I couldn't er told for my life whether it was a hundred or a hundred thousand paces; I should sooner a guessed a hundred thousand. Says the Captain, 'Well, Sargeant, what did you make it?' Soon's I could get my wind, says I, 'Give a guess, Captain.' He looks across the opening a second or two, and then says, 'a hundred and seventy-five paces say.' 'Thunder, Captain,' says I, 'you have made a pretty close guess. It's just a hundred and seventy one.'" "And" added the Sergeant, after the laugh had subsided, "that's how I got my shoulder strain."

How to Deal with Rats.

A writer in the Scientific American says: We clean our premises of these detestable vermin by making whitewash yellow with copperas and covering the stones and rafters in the cellars with it. In every crevice in which a rat may go we put the crystals of the copperas and scatter in the corners of the floor. The result was a perfect stampede of rats and mice. Since that time not a footfall of either rats or mice has been around the house. Every Spring a coat of the yellow wash is given the cellar, as a purifier, as a rat exterminator, and no typhoid, dysentery or fevers attacks the family. Many persons deliberately attract all the rats in the neighborhood by leaving fruits and vegetables uncovered in the cellar, and sometimes even the soap is left open for their regalement. Cover up everything eatable in the cellar and pantry, and you will soon starve them out. These precautions, joined to the service of a good cat, will prove as good a rat exterminator as the chemist can provide. We never allow rats to be poisoned in our dwelling, they are so apt to die between the walls and produce much annoyance.

A White Race in Africa.

"Are they then really white?" asked a Paris reporter of Maj. Pinto, the Portugese explorer of Africa, with reference to his widely-published story about a white race in the dark continent. "Absolutely white," replied the Major. "I have seen a young girl who was whiter than I am. They are not Albinos, because they have black hair. They resemble the ugliest of the negroes. They are hideous, and the most savage people that I have met with. In order to see them I was compelled to seize two of them by force. I kept them for some days and loaded them with attentions. Then they consented to take me into their camp, but on condition that I should go entirely alone, because they were afraid of my escort. I went there and passed two days with them. They are poor devils without industry, living by the chase, and have no fixed habitation. Their hair is woolly, their foreheads retreating, their eyes resemble those of the Chinese, their cheek bones are prominent, and their lower lip hang down. They are very strong, and can bury an arrow in the body of an elephant."

Chicago Ahead.

All the world now looks up to Chicago as the great western metropolis of America, being far ahead of all competing cities; but none the less so, in its line, is Electric Bitters. From their real intrinsic value they have advanced to the front, and are now far ahead of all other remedies, positively curing where everything else fails. To try them is to be convinced. Wheat and Poultry.

There is more solid nutriment in whole wheat, as a feed of poultry, than in any other cereal, weight for weight.

It is an excellent kind of grain for this use, though somewhat more expensive than other sorts; but too much of this hearty feed is detrimental, particularly when fed to Cochins, Brahmas, etc.

Fowls are very partial to wheat. It helps the laying capacity of hens, but it should not be used except with discretion as to the quantity allowed them daily. An excess of this raw grain will induce a looseness in the boweis very frequently. It is easy of digestion, and should be furnished in moderation, as a needful and most desirable variety, in conjunction with other dry grains, such as cracked corn, oats, barley, buckwheat, etc.

If not more than one-third or one-fourth of wheat is allowed with the cereals mentioned, for ordinary purpose in the laying season, hens will do quite as well, and they can thus be kept in better average condition than by a greater allowance. We have proved this by frequent practical experiments.

What a Single Bean can Produce.

The history of a single bean accidentally planted in a garden at Southbridge, Mass., is traced by a newspaper correspondent who figures out its product for three years. The bean was planted in a rich, loamy soil, and when gathered in the autumn its yield, as counted, was 1,515 perfectly developed beans from a single stalk. Now, if a single bean produces 1,515 more, the sum total of the second year's product would be 2,294,225, equal to 1,195 pounds, 597 quarts, or 2,390 army rations, equal to 18⅔ bushels. This would be the second year. Now if we plant this product and the yield is the same, we have a product of 5,268,056,800-,625 beans, equal to 1,371,890 tons, or 42,871,578 bushels, or 548,755,068 soldier's rations. This third planting would give the steamship Great Eastern 92 "full freights." Few beans, however, start so well as this one did.

A fair Spanish yew bow costs from $40 to $50, and a fine one, though ever so plain, commands a ready sale at from $60 to $80. Archers think the home article fully equal to English yew, and superior to the best lance-wood, snake-wood, beef-wood and some other varieties.

The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,980.14. The list includes 952 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 363 places of over 5,000 population, and 468 County Seats. For copy of List and other information, address GEO. P. Ayer's Sarsaparilla
Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.
By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.
It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

TECUMSEH, MICH., AUG. 25, 1881.

Mr. & Mrs. A. O. Miller will play again at Blissfield this week.

Uncle Joseph Hagaman of Morenci is very low and gradually declining.

Some one has sent the Clinton News-man a pumpkin, the next offer will be a column of obituary poetry.

C. Bowerfind of Adrian will furnish crackers for the Soldiers and Sailor's reunion at Butler, Ind.

Mr. Rudolph Heesen and Mr. Arthur Swisler of Tecumseh, spent Sunday in the city.—Adrian Record.

Mayor Navin of Adrian has been fitting up a fine new suite of rooms that he may more fully be able to enjoy bachelor life.

The Hudson Gazette and Adrian Record seem to have quite a different opinion on changing the name of Devils Lake. One is Devil and the other aint Devil.

The Adrian Light Guard were very brash in opposing the "appropriation" imposition at first, but now weaken, and have made up their minds to, if possible be led by the nose and pay their own expenses.

The Adrian Press must have been a little off last week when they wrote up that article about their well known friend, "Uncle John Schreader," and we are afraid Uncle John Schreder will not enjoy this representation of his good name very much.

A matter of cores—apples.—[Boston Times. A matter of course—horse racing.—[Elevated Railway Journal. A matter of coarse—crash towels.—[St. Louis Spirit. A matter of corps—our melitia.—[Chaff. A matter of chorus—two tomcats on a woodshed at midnight.—[Adrian Press. A matter of corpse—Stearns.

A friend of ours living near the city is the owner of 150 young turkies. We dare not mention his name, as some lovers of the choice things of this world might be tempted to make his residence a nocturnal visit with an unlawful purpose in view.—Adrian Record.

Perhaps the Record man has adopted the reform method of spelling or may be his young friend has a new breed of turkeys.

In four of our county exchanges this week, we notice an original local item about young ladies being presented with a paper parasol, with Japanese ornamentation, symbalizing an invitation to take a walk with the donor. What puizles us to know how these four editors all happened to think of the same thing at the same time and put their thoughts in precisely the same language.—Adrian Press.

Now this was an unlucky thing for Bro. Smith, and if it should happen to come about to often we fear the Press would run dry for news.

ALBERT CAMBURN, of Franklin, was plowing for wheat the other day and turned up a litter of bumble bees.—The Detroit News says, "he made his team fly out of the way, and himself acted as catcher of the battery, while the bumbles furnished the pitcher in the game. Camburn got about a thousand base hits, and the next day he looked as though he had the dropsy, while the poison went to his stomach, and came near sending him to the celestial bee-hive, where a bumble-bee fallow is not sown to wheat."

THE bowery dance was a parmal failure Friday evening last. I presume because the Tecumseh HERALD force was not present (?). For what amount of "pea-green calico or barber pole stockings" could compensate the loss of the sand-papered cranium and graceful motions(?) of Commodore, or what number of "country swains" could console the rustic maids when Billy's glittering, enameled shirt front (?) was minus? But undoubtedly in their endeavor to get the weather guage on that "*mind*mill by pursuing such a circuitous course through the country and by so many observations on the customs and manners of the natives they have strained their mental engines and are, consequently laid upon the dry docks for repairs. "O, Decumseh! Decumseh! What do you soy?"—Wamplers Lake cor. Clinton News.

Glad to see the interest shown to our party by our Wamplers Lake friend, and if ever again we should have the pleasure of visiting that beautiful lake, it would be a great pleasure to meet this (?) of a correspondent and to even dance with his girl should he wish it.

FROM AN OLD RESIDENT.

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 18, 1881.

Last week I made a trip to Tecumseh, partly on business and partly to call on some of the early settlers, with whom I used to be acquainted and of whom I had seen but little, and many of them not at all in nearly fifty years. I took dinner at Chas. Adam's well regulated hotel at Sand Lake, on the very spot where I passed one summer and fall in a log shanty in 1828, my father having taken a job of the United States of building a turnpike between Lancaster's hotel and the Monaghan farm. I passed the night with George Griswold, an old pioneer with whose family and my own great intimacy exists, who settled on the same farm, north of Tecumseh village in 1825, the next year after we came.

The next morning Mr. Griswold with his two horse carriage, myself, and his wife and daughter, drove to the cemetery, which is located on the north part of my father's old farm.—There we saw the resting place of many of them of those far off days, among whom was Gen. J. W. Brown, wife and son, Lieut. John A. Brown, who was in the Mexican war, and came home in broken health and died soon after, besides many of the younger members of the family. Here also I found the graves of Thomas Griswold and wife, son Charles and daughter, Worthy, wife of Keeler Bangs, besides very many others I was acquainted with in those early days.

We then drove to the south part of the old farm to see if I could locate the spot where the old house stood.—Here we found the ground all covered with nice residences, and no traces left of that old log house, the once happy home of my boyhood days, where I had not been since 1833.

We next drove to town, where I saw Elrey Sisson, oldest son of Thos. Sisson, that old sturdy farmer who had no superior and but few equals in those days. We then went to the Brownville part of the village, where I found Mr. Hiram Adams, now over eighty years of age, one of the firm of Adams & Burt, and a very active and energetic business man fifty years ago. I called to see David VanTine, another old pioneer acquaintance, whose wife, when I left Tecumseh in 1832, was Miss Marilla Hoag, daughter of Judge Wm. H. Hoag, then a young lady in her teens, now the only survivor of a large, intelligent and highly respected family. I also saw Col. Sumner F. Spofford, once sheriff of the county, who came to Tecumseh in 1824, also Mr. Wm. Tilton and Mr. Wm. Nixon, old pioneers, and many other; after which by invitation of Geo. N. Stacy I took supper at Sink's hotel. After supper I drove home to Woodstock, arriving about 10 o'clock P. M., having had a very enjoyable time.

A. C. OSBORN.

HINTS TO EXHIBITORS AT OUR COUNTY FAIR.

People of Lenawee: The time for our annual fair is fast approaching, and as so much depends upon early preparation to assure success, I deem it my duty to call your attention to the fact, and to urge each and all to be active in making arrangements for a fine display, in whatever department you may be most interested. Let us all take a deeper interest, and do more effectual work for the society than ever before. A fine display in every department is desirable and essential to meet with best results. To acquire this will call for individual effort, and the time has now arrived when we should begin to prepare and put into shape things intended for exhibition. Let the preparation be thorough and complete, so that the exhibition will not only be large but of superior merit, proving that our tastes through cultivation, are aspiring to better works. The premium lists are now ready for distribution, and can be obtained either of Secretary Mann at his office, or of your township or ward director. Secure a copy early and read carefully all the rules and regulations, so that making wrong entries and mistakes of various kinds may be avoided. The executive committe have used great care in its revision, and if each and all will become acquainted with its contents, we shall pass smoothly through. It can not be reasonably expected that the book is in accordance with the views of every one, or without actual fault. Those who have had the matter in charge have kept in view the best interest of the society and mutual welfare of all. When you consider the conflicting interest and different views of various people you must be willing to admit that concessions must be made from individual ideas, that all may work together for a common purpose. This being understood, I think we can accept the work of the executive committee, and according to their rules and provisions conduct a successful exhibition. I cannot urge you too strongly to do your best endeavor in this matter, and not think your time thus expended lost. Let each contribute a little time and money, and learn the lessons and facts which friendly competition is intended to teach. The success of a fair should not be based upon its ability to make money directly for those who support it. But as knowledge is power, and time is money, let us learn from our fair association, to so use them in our financial operations that we shall reap the reward. While the success of a fair should be based more upon its ability to impart knowledge than to save money for itself, yet it is necessary that money should be sufficient to meet all demands, and if need be to carry the institution over some reverses. This money must come a little from each contributing. Therefore we cordially ask all to unite in the work, and come to the support of those whom you have placed in position to receive the fruit of their toil.

G. B. HORTON,
President Lenawee Co. Ag'l Society.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Postmaster General James, in a letter to the chief of the Dominion postal service, states that no Canadian mail-bags have ever been used in the domestic service of the United States, and that no special international pouch will be required if the bags of each country are promptly returned, empty, to the exchange offices. That this is not done on the Canadian side is shown by the recent dispatch of closed mails from Montreal to Winnipeg in United States sacks.

Willie Cantrell, a lad residing near Pekin, Ill., while carrying some potatoes along the road, was seized by a middle-aged man and tied to the railway track with a rope. An Indianapolis train soon came round the curve, and the boy was struck by the pilot, breaking his ribs and foot. The man then cut and threw away the rope and fled into the woods, being seen by the passengers. The train was backed up, and the lad was found moaning in the ditch. Several parties of citizens are in pursuit of the villainous plotter.

Guerilla work has commenced on the Arizona border, which demands prompt attention on the part of the United States. A Mexican train recently sent onto from Sonora to purchase supplies at Tombstone was robbed by Arizona cow-boys and two of its men killed. In retaliation, a party of American butchers who went to the border ranches to purchase cattle were surprised by Mexicans, while asleep, and six of the number put to death. Two companies of the 6th United States cavalry have been ordered to Camp Grant. General Dominquez, adjutant on the staff of the Mexican commander, has appeared at Tombstone, Arizona, to arrange for united action against the border thieves.

About daylight Wednesday a guard in the jail at Washington discovered Guiteau in a suspicious attitude at the window of his cell. The officer at once commenced an investigation, when the assassin seized him and tried to throw him down. In the struggle the guard's pistol was discharged, the bullet striking the wall which separates the passages. The explosion called other officers, and the assassin was secured. The warden declares that this is the whole truth of the encounter, but the guard positively states that Guiteau was armed with a knife made from the steel shank of a shoe, and that the lapel of his coat was cut by a thrust from the prisoner.

The English journals insist that the failure of negotiations with France for a new commercial treaty must result in a serious curtailment of trade between the countries. An official note issued at Paris states that there is yet ample time to arrange a basis.

The final concessions of the house of commons to the ideas of the house of lords on the land bill were made on Monday evening. At a meeting of the peers, it was decided to accept the measure as it left the commons. The bill is understood to have been stripped of its beneficent features.

The international law conference, in session at Cologne, adopted by acclamation a resolution introduced by David Dudley Field, that in extradition treaties neither assassination or attempts thereat as a means of effecting a change of government or redress of grievances shall be deemed a political crime, and that the privilege of asylum be denied the perpetrator of such deed.

Hudson Post: Last Sunday evening while Kirk Sprague and Doc. Pixley were driving on Main street, in opposite directions, their buggies collided, smashing Mr. Sprague's buggy rather badly, and throwing the occupants out. Nobody was much hurt, only a little scared.

STILL IN SUSPENSE.

THE PRESIDENT'S RELAPSE ON SUNDAY.

SUNDAY.

"The situation is very grave." Such are the words which Mr. Blaine has just used. So grave is it that the cabinet is now (10 p. m.) assembled at the white house informally, and in the fear that possibly they may not separate again until the end has come. The president is not dying but the truth must be told. The fear is very great that not many hours will have elapsed before the sufferer will have passed beyond the control of earthly skill. The physicians do not yet give up hope, while Dr. Bliss still shows the great nerve that he did last week in predicting something better in a few hours.

Dr. Boynton has just said that the president awoke from one of his fitful naps delirious, and that this is not the first time that delirousness has seized the president's mind. Dr. Boynton adds that he looks forward to the next twelve hours with the greatest solicitude, and his manner indicates that this solicitude is tempered with but little hope. Reports come not wholly authenticated that the pulse, since the evening bulletin, has gone up to 118, and that the temperature has remained stationary.—We shall be able, possibly, to learn at a later hour something more definite.

That there has been a serious change for the worse is beyond question. This change the news of the day has prepared us in a great measure to see. There seems to have been a steady decline, and if the downward tendency did not begin before, it certainly began last night. The morning bulletin intimated that the president did not rest well, but he seems hardly to have rested at all. He slept in naps of not over twenty minutes, and while sleeping he tossed his head. The stupor which was first observed a few days ago, it seems, has gone to his wakeful moments to-day, but little more of consciousness than he had during sleep, for that he was in a stupor all the time, but that he was not far from it much of the time.

By the meager accounts that can be obtained, the president's active brain seems at last to have been touched by disease, so that the dreaded indifference is more and more observed by those around him to have taken the place of the interest which he has so constantly evinced in every detail of his condition.

Yet two days ago when the president said that he would be glad to vomit if thereby he could throw off the phlegm, the physicians urged him to resist any tendency to vomit. The fear was that vomiting would weaken the stomach, and that all that had been gained would be lost. The bad news spread quickly. Throngs gathered at the bulletins. The offices of the correspondents were sought by many anxious people, and the cabinet and others privileged to do so went at once to the white house. But little could be learned there. The physicians were busy in the sick room.

A night of anxiety—perhaps of the end of anxiety—seemed to have come. There seems to be little doubt the critical situation is caused by the very great debility of the president, complicated with blood-poisoning of greater or less degree.

The physicians have now (midnight) sent out word that they do not look for any change before morning. The white house was closed at once for the night. The president has fallen asleep. The rise of the pulse to 118, occurred after the evening dressing. The pulse then fell to 100. The pain in the legs, which Dr. Boynton referred to, is more of an ability to move the legs than any pain in them. Mr. Blaine regards the situation as very critical.

MONDAY.

Previous to the appearance of the official bulletin it was reported that the president had passed a comparatively quiet night. He asked for and took a small quantity of koumiss without producing any nausea. At 8:30 a. m. the official bulletin announced the president has not vomited since yesterday afternoon, and this morning has twice asked for and received a small quantity of fluid nourishment by the mouth. He slept more quietly during the night, and this morning his general condition is more encouraging than when the last bulletin was issued. Pulse 104, temperature 98.4, respiration 18.

Up to noon no change for the worse has occurred.

Evening News: There comes up from certain quarters in Adrian a wail about the way purchases for fitting up the reform school are made, and it is made to appear that Adrian merchants are not sucking as much meat out of that egg as they expected to. The burden of the complaint is that there is favoritism in the matter of purchases, and that there is a little nepotism in the favoritism. It is a little early for Adrian merchants to begin growling, but it is their privilege to do so if they choose.

THE PRESIDENT'S WOUND!

A PARALLEL CASE IN ARMY LIFE.

In the issue of the Philadelphia Record on the 27th of July was published an article relating to the case of Capt. William Palmer, now Quartermaster Second Brigade New Jersey State National Guard, who was wounded at the battle of Mossy Creek, East Tennessee, in the winter of 1863. In that article the striking resemblance of the case to that of President Garfield, in many particulars, was pointed out, the authority for this statement being the brave captain himself. A still better authority is Dr. David Kennedy, then surgeon U. S. General Hospital, West Philadelphia, who had charge of the case, and performed the operation of removing the detached bone, and finally extricated the bullet. The entire treatment being perfectly successful—Capt. Palmer living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr Kennedy does not hesitate to say that many of his patients both in military and civil practice owe their lives to the wonderful healing and strengthening powers of his medicine called "Favorite Remedy." The Doctor is in possession of an autograph letter from Capt. Palmer, attesting his indebtedness for his present good health to this medicine—"Favorite Remedy" which he says has doubled the obligation which he felt to the Doctor for the treatment of the Captain's terrible wound.

While Dr. Kennedy is engaged in the introduction of "Favorite," he still continues the practice of his profession at Roundout, N. Y., performs all the minor as well as capital operations of surgery. Address as above. 4w

STATEMENT UNDER OATH.

A Startling Revelation of Suffering!

"Oh, My God, How I Did Suffer!"

"I have been afflicted for twenty years with an obstinate skin disease, called by some M. D.s Psoriasis, and others Leprosy, commencing on my scalp, and in spite of all I could do, with the help of the most skillful doctors, it slowly but surely extended, until a year ago this winter, it covered my entire person in form of dry scales. For the last three years I have been unable to do any labor, and suffering intensely all the time. Every morning there could be nearly a dustpanful of scales taken from the sheet on my bed, some of them half as large as the envelope containing this letter. In the latter part of winter my skin commenced cracking open. I tried everything almost that could be thought of, without any relief. The 12th of June I started West, in hopes I could reach the Hot Springs. I reached Detroit, and was so low I thought I should have to go to the hospital, but finally got as far as Lansing, Mich., where I had a sister living. One Dr. ——— treated me about two weeks, but did me no good. All thought I had but a short time to live. I earnestly prayed to die. Cracked through the skin all over my back, across my ribs, arms, hands, limbs, feet badly swollen, toe-nails came off, finger-nails dead and hard as bone, hair dead, dry and lifeless as old straw. O, my God! how I did suffer.

"My sister, Mrs. E. H. Davis, had a small part of a box of Cuticura in the house. She wouldn't give up; said 'We will try Cuticura.' Some was applied on one hand and arm. Eureka! there was relief; stopped the terrible burning sensation from the word go. They immediately got the Resolvent, Cuticura and Soap. I commenced by taking one tablespoonful of Resolvent three times a day, after meals; had a bath once a day, water about blood heat; used Cuticura Soap freely; applied Cuticura morning and evening. Result, returned to my home in just six weeks from the time I left, and my skin as smooth as this sheet of paper.

TREACHEROUS TALKERS.

If our friends in the country should be approached by a good talker, who has some new machine for the sale of which he desires to make the farmer an agent, it would be just as well to decline the honor. Oftener than otherwise it brings trouble. A band of just such swindlers have been thoroughly working Ohio. They have patent rakes, pitchforks, pumps, corn huskers, etc. They appoint rich farmers agents, supplying them with machines without any trouble, and only ask them to sign a note payable to the nearest bank for $30 when they have sold $325 worth of the implements.—This contract is so written that the end is torn off and leaves a good straight note for $325, payable at the bank, at 6 per cent. interest. A large number of farmers have walked up and paid the amount, and charged it up to experience, profit and loss.

AGAIN a paragraph meets our eye that tells of two boys ten and twelve years of age respectfully, sent to the "Reform School," for pilfering. Curse that reform school and all others. At the rate we go on the boys will all be made thieves and criminals, and now we have a similar mill for fixing a criminal character on girls, they will take the same road. Pilfering is a besetting sin of children, and always was. Almost as common as fibbing, and of the same character. Our wiser fathers and grandfathers, used to whip it out of their children, with other childish freaks, and instruct them in honesty and truthfulness. We allow the larger part to run wild and take the chances, and send the rest to a state institution to receive the lasting stigma of criminality, and be taught to deserve it. This idea may be novel, but time will prove its truth. —Ypsilanti Sentinel.

The weight is the marvelous point in the deception. The counterfeit as it stands would pass in size easily, and its weight would not be detected on any but a fine scale. The date upon it is 1878.

Allow me through your valuable paper to thank the Times man for his suggestion that I ask the Workingmen's committee (a member of which I presume I am indebted for the suggestion) to send a "palace car" and "brass band" for my accommodation. FARMER'S PICNIC.

Ten Thousand People in Attendance—A Grand Good Time—Everybody Happy.

Last Wednesday, Aug. 17th, rolled around and with it came the annual farmer's picnic at Devils Lake. To the people through the county this did not seem much of an event, but to the farmers, judging from the number present, it was the greatest day of the year.

The day was the finest that could have been found, notwithstanding Vennor predicted it the hottest in August, and our farmers turned out from Rollin, Wheatland, Woodstock and the neighboring towns in numbers to numerous to mention, while even Hudson was represented by a nice number of good looking girls. Hillsdale sent down a few of her noble young men, while you could see a sprinkling of Morenci folks in the crowd by the natural inclination to "swap horses, and talk about agricultural fairs," however all things seemed to be in a fine state of harmony and we think there never has been, nor never will be, such a day at Devils Lake.

About eleven o'clock people began to get a little hungry, the tables were spread in the grove and it seemed as if never was there so large a family gathered together at one table before, and besides this they were all gathered together in God's dining room, while peace, harmony and happiness reigned everywhere. After dinner was over the crowd began to gather around the speaker's stand, and at one-thirty o'clock the President of the picnic association, Hon. Brackly Shaw called the meeting to order, and after the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by the Secretary, prayer was offered by Rev. T. S. Lyon, of Napoleon. The Brooklyn Glee Club sang America, which was followed by a Quickstep played by the Napoleon band, and the President welcomed all as follows: Want of space prevents us from giving a verbatim report of the speeches but we will endeavor to condense their words in as good shape as possible.

Ladies and Gentlemen:—It gives me great pleasure to meet you here to-day in what seems to be the Gala day with the farmers of this section, when you can come here to this beautiful lake to make merry after the harvest is done. Agriculture is now recognized as the base of all advancement and prosperity, and this is shown by the number of farmers represented in our state institutions, our state House and Senate and in our Hall of Congress at Washington. I am happy to meet and welcome you as men, and agricultural workers, but will not detain you with a long speech as there are others to follow who can attend to that better than I.

Hon. John K. Boies, of Hudson was then introduced and spoke as follows:

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:—Abraham Lincoln whom you all remember as our good President, and great story teller, when the great problem was brought before the people in relation to the Emancipation bill, said it was opposed by many on the ground that the blacks having never had any care of themselves, would when left to their own resources, be unable to take care of themselves, and then be in a worse condition than at that time. Lincoln simply referred to a story about an old farmer who had a large drove of hogs and being in no mood to feed and take care of them, turned them out in the field to shift for themselves. In summer they could do very well for themselves, but when asked by one of his neighbors what would become of his stock in the fall, he said, I have no time to see to them and they must either "Root hog or die." And although I fully realize and appreciate the honor given me in being called upon to make a speech to-day, yet together with the other duties I have had to perform, it has placed me a good deal in the same position as the farmer's stock, that is, I must "root hog, or die." I suppose that remarks made to-day, should properly be made on the topic of agriculture, and I find by looking at Webster's dictionary that agriculture means tilling of the soil. All industries might be stopped, and yet people would continue to live in some way or other, the same as the Indians and savage tribes of the east. But we read in Holy Writ to "till the soil and prosper," and there was the starting point of all civilization. We do not work on our farms and in our shops for fun, it is to gain the comforts of life and civilization, and by this toil and labor comes the natural tendency to progress and new devices for supplying and increasing capacity for work. Thus the reaper is a substitute for the cradle; the mower for the scythe, and at last the Binder for the reaper. And in the method for tilling the soil great improvements have been made which by constant working our farms would in time run out and become worthless. In New England we can see farms all run out and in some cases almost abandoned, simply because the farmers have not kept up with the times, and because their sons are all leaving the farms and taking places in the great manufactories which are springing up in every village and hamlet. But not so in Michigan, our farms, instead of running out are growing better all the time, our farmers are getting new ways and improvements can be seen in every direction, yet all this, when we look around and see all our fine farms with their improved looks and appearance, may seem strange enough when we look back and take the report of the commissioner of the land office in 1816, how he reported to the President that Michigan was one vast wilderness, and unfit for anything except a reservation for Indians, and indeed I wonder what the old patriots would say now could they look down on one of these farmer's picnics and see such a vast number of intelligent thriving farmers, to gather in a spot called worthless by them so many years ago. Now what our farmers should strive for is to steadily and surely improve as they have been doing. They should improve the quality of their wool, stock and products, and the young men should take a serious thought before leaving the farm and going in business in the villages and cities. And in closing I will join with Bro. Lyon in thanking God for all his blessings showered down upon us at this time.

Hon. Chas. E. Mickley, of Fairfield addressed the farmers, as an old farmer and pioneer which address was listened to very attentively by all.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:—I assure you that I listened to the excellent remarks by our esteemed friend and co-worker, Hon. J. K. Boies, and have profited greatly thereby. For fifty years I have been instrumental in farming, both in a practical way and in instructive and governmental farming. I came to this state a short time after our good old President Madison had made such a mistake about the farming lands in Michigan which our friend Boies has told you about, and indeed thought a good deal as he did about Michigan and thus we all thought that no section but the southern tier of creation amounted to anything, but we were not wholly to blame in ourselves about that, for it had been taught to us, as you see, by our superiors, and now as I have seen the change from the once vast wilderness to our splendid farming country, it seems almost a miracle rather than a reality, and now we can look upon our beautiful state as the brightest star of them all, and now you come out from this once vast wilderness to this grand farmer's picnic, and who is it, who has made this great change? I want to make your acquaintance. Were it not for the woodman's ax, the old pioneer and the hard labor of the farmer, our state would have been where it was forty years ago. But now a word about the farmers. Numerically we are in excess of all other classes, and at the same time own this vast portion of territory, the farmers are the owners of Michigan, all that is redeemed, and what is not, will be by just such men. What if all the graneries should fail, what would become of all the people, and since the farmers are placed in such situations see what a responsibility is placed on their shoulders, virtually they hold the bread in one hand and the ballot in the other. Now when we are placed in this responsible position as to ourselves and others, why is it that we should not be represented in government in proportion to our responsibility and numbers, also why should we not have our proper position in the commercial world? All professional men and merchants are allowed, or take the liberty to set the price on their work and goods, and the farmer has to come to it, while the farmer has to be ground by the price set for them by the commission men and buyers, and can't either take what is offered him or draw his stuff home again, and now to bring this error to the right as should be done, we should see that the farmers are represented at the caucus and polls, to attend to having proper nominations and elections. I do not blame professional men for accepting fat offices when they are offered and given to them. I would do the same thing, but it is our duty to see that the farming country is represented, and this can be done, as we have the majority on our side, and thus the thing with all in our hands. For they who do the work and furnish the bread for our country should represent it in the Halls of Congress, and if we wish to hand this government of ours to our children, we must stick to the plan of our forefathers.

The Glee Club sang, The Harvest is past, after which a letter was read from W. T. B. Schermmerhorn, (although not in his own hand writing, for it was read without difficulty,) in relation to changing the name of Devils Lake. It seems that some of the Hudson friends have made up their minds that Devils Lake is not quite high toned enough for a place so fast becoming a watering place, and situated so near Hudson, but our farmer friends did not feel in the same mind and voted it down with a voice that was astounding and made the woods ring for miles around.

After music by the band, the following officers were duly nominated and elected for the ensuing year:

President—S. Lewis, of Madison.
Vice President—Mrs. J. W. Allen, Rollin.
Secretary—J. U. Harkness, Rollin.
Treasurer—Stephen C. Lumbard, Rollin.

And also the directors from the different towns, and this closed the literary exercises of the day, when everyone seemed to think it their duty to do all in their power to have a good time. The warm candy establishment was well patronized, ice cream and lemonade flowed like water. The fine pin auction man who represented Adrian drove a good trade, and the eating places closed out their last sandwich. The Napoleon, North Adams, Wheatland, Hudson and Springville bands all played at once, each striving to out do the other, the little steamer could have taken four loads at once could she have accommodated them, every man seemed to get some other chap's girl, while excitement and hubbub predominated. Everybody seemed to want something they couldn't get, and even the Gazette reporter had to hunt in his dictionary to find large words sufficient to express the merits of the occasion. The extreme excitement seemed to affect different persons in different ways, and while the Hillsdale boys' head swelled to the peril of their hat band, one of the Tecumseh delegation was obliged to remove his boots on account of blood rushing to his feet. All in all it was a grand picnic and the farmers of Lenawee and Hillsdale counties can only be proud of such an organization, and that every body comes to have a good old fashioned, hand shaking and merry making time once a year.

GOOD WORDS FOR A MICHIGAN MAN.

In speaking of the sale of the Placerville Academy property, the Mountain Democrat published at Placerville, California, says:

But we have a pleasant assurance that, by a chance that almost seems providential, the Academy has passed into posession of those in whose hands its interests will suffer no detriment. The purchaser is Mr. Geo. P. Tindall A. M., a graduate of the University of Michigan; and his family, consisting of his wife and two daughters, are on their way to enter upon the duties of their new relation.

Mr. Tindall has had a wide experience in educational matters, and in mathematics and astronomical science especially stands high as a lecturer, inventor and instructor. His daughters are also graduates of the University of Michigan and the State Normal school, and are said to be first class educators, being now engaged in teaching in some of the most responsible positions in the East. We learn that the school is to be conducted on the same basis as heretofore, and no pains will be spared to keep it up to the very highest grade of efficiency. Mr. Tindall assures us that he has come here to stay, and hopes to secure the confidence and support of the community with whose interests he is now so closely identified.

THE Adrian Press prophecies that Chas. F. Hatch, now general manager of the Chicago, St. Paul & Omaha road, will be the next Superintendent of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern. We hope the prediction will prove true.

The indications are that an unusually large acreage of wheat will be sown this fall, and considerable 'stubbling in' done, as the light crop has not exhausted the soil as a heavy one would have done.

Go and hear Mason Long next Sunday evening.

The End of the Honey Moon.

Oh, what a lovely moon! Do not let us light the gas, Augustus. Let us sit here by the window and admire it. It is exactly like silver; and, oh, how beautiful you look in it—yes you do, splendid! Oh, Gusty, how I like your Roman nose, and I'm so glad you've such elegant whiskers; do you love me? Oh, Gusty, how sweet you are! And I your own little darling—really, am I? I don't think they can see in from over the way, do you? You may kiss me just twice more. Isn't it awful to think of married people quarreling, Gusty? We couldn't quarrel, could we? Oh, no, never, never. I could not say a cross word to you, and you couldn't to me, could you? We'll live together as the angels do, and die at the same moment. Oh, Gusty it's awful to love as we do! sometimes my heart stands still when I think of it. You may give me two kisses more. Hark! what's that? I hope it isn't that James coming to call. I hate him?"

"It's unreasonable to hate him, my love."

"Unreasonable to hate him? Why Gusty—I unreasonable?"

"Why do you hate him?"

"Why do I hate him? Well, I don't know—he has such a funny, long neck and—and—he's horrid."

"He's my dearest friend."

"He's your dearest friend! Oh, a wife should be her husband's dearest friend Augustus. What do you say—I have cousin Jane and sister Sarah and ma? Well, a woman must have some one; and dear ma—to bring her in!"

"Oh, I don't care. They'll be company for you when I am at the club."

"The club, Augustus! You don't ever mean to go to the club again, do you? Augustus Gardner—you a married man, and go to a club?"

"Why not?"

"Why not? Why because it's a place for dreadful dissipated bachelors. I know all about it. It's all of your Jones' fault. He has put it into your head. What's that your muttering—My chatterbox women friends have put queer things into my head? Do I hear aright? Mr. Gardner! My cousin Jane, my sister Sarah, and dear ma, chatterboxes? I call that shameful. Oh, have I lived to hear such things? But what can I expect from a man that will go to a club and leave his deserted wife to sit up for him, all alone, and come home the worse for liquor, no doubt. No, that I won't bear, Mr. Gardner. Do that once and I'll have a divorce."

"Very well, as soon as you like, my dear."

"As soon as I like! Ah, I see. That is what you want. Jones has been putting that into your head. No doubt he'd like to see you free to lead any dreadful life you choose again. When ma first saw that Jones, she said—'I don't like that man, my child.' Ah, she has penetration.

"She'd better mind her own business."

"What—ma—ma? Oh, can I believe I hear aright?" "I thought I'd married an angel, but I find I've tied myself to a—"

"Well to a what? Speak—say it out."

"Oh, I know what the antipodes of an angel is. Say it out. You meant to say it. You did—no, don't deny it. You did—you did—you did! No, there's no use kissing me now, Augustus. You've killed me. It's all over."

"A woman ought to be reasonable? Ah, how unfair, Augustus. It's you that abused my friends, and talked of leaving me for a wicked club, and a mean old Jones, and called me a dev—you didn't? Yes you did. O—oh! Am I your own dearest, and are you sorry, and will you always do as I like? I think I'll try to live, yes, Gusty, dear, I'll live for your sake. You may kiss me; but now pull down the blinds and light the gas. The moon has set."

The Chromograph.

The copygraph, chromograph, and a variety of other names have been given to the simple arrangement by which letters, drawings, plans, music, etc., can be copied at a slight cost. The process has been patented in England, but in advance of any patent in this country, a number of persons have made the article and advertised it for sale at prices varying from $5 to $7.50, according to size, in either case allowing very handsome profits. A tablet of gelatine is prepared thus: Take one part by weight of gelatine, (glue will do just as well,) soak in 2 parts of water till melted, to which add 4 parts of common glycerine, with a few drops of carbolic acid, and sufficient whiting or white lead to give the whole a milky appearance. Pour the mixture into a shallow zinc or tin dish, and it will be ready for use in about twelve hours. The use of the whiting or white lead is to show up the writing on the composition, and to enable the washing off to be observed more easily. The ink used is made of 1 part violet methylated aniline, (Hofman's purple,) 7 parts distilled water, and 1 alcohol; but acetic rosaniline, boiled down in alcohol till it does not run in writing, forms a capital red ink. To use the process, write on a hard, finished paper with the ink, taking care that the writing is thick enough to show a green luster when dry. When thoroughly dry place it face downwards on the jelly, rub it gently to bring it well into contact, and leave for three minutes, then peel it off. It will leave a portion of the ink neatly transferred to the jelly; then place the paper to be printed on the writing and pass the hand over, bring it well in contact as before, peel it off, and it will bring away a perfect copy of the original. In this way sixty to eighty copies may be made; by using a thick pen and plenty of ink 150 good copies may be taken. If the original still shows a green luster, another transfer may be made. When exhausted, wash off the ink from the jelly with a sponge and cold water. A layer of the compound one quarter of an inch thick would give 5,000 copies at least, if not twice that number. If the jelly is injured it can easily be melted down over a spirit lamp or in an oven. After melting, and in the first instance after making, the surface should be washed with cold water.

Better than Quinine. Few constitutions can stand the continuous use of quinine. It is not only a very expensive medicine, but will ultimately cause the patient to succumb to its powerful influence upon the nervous system. But if you want to get rid of Malaria and all Fevers of that nature use the Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters. The whole treatment for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

The Staff of Life.

In order to always secure good bread, it is economy to purchase the best flour, even at a greater cost. Newly-ground flour, which has never been packed, is much superior to barrel-flour. Indian meal, also, is much the best when freshly ground.

No one thing is of more importance in making bread than thoroughly kneading it. When bread is taken out of the oven hot, never set flat on a table, as it sweats the bottom, and acquires a bad taste from the wood. Take out of the tins, wrap in clean linen, and set on end till cool. If it has a thick hard crust, first wrap in a wet cloth, then a dry one over it, and let it sweat till it becomes soft.

WHEAT BREAD.—Take two quarts of wheat flour, half a cup of molasses, a tea-cup of lively yeast, mixed up well with warm water; let it stand in a warm place an hour and a half. If necessary add a little saleratus; bake an hour and a half.

SALT-RISING BREAD.—Take a little warm water, with a little salt in it, and mix with enough flour to make about a quart of batter; it will rise quicker with a handful of meal stirred in; and set in warm water, near the stove, where it will keep moderately warm. When it rises and comes up, near the point of running over, mix your bread, place in tins, and set near the stove to rise. When it comes up light, put in a hot oven and bake till well done. Some prefer moulding it over after it comes up, and then re-raising before baking.

RYE AND INDIAN BREAD.—Take two quarts of Indian meal, and scald it; then add as much rye meal, a tea-cupful of molasses, half a pint of lively yeast. If the yeast be sweet, no saleratus is necessary. If sour, put in a little; let it stand from one to two hours, till it rises; then bake it about three.

BROWN BREAD.—Put the Indian meal in your bread-pan; sprinkle a little salt among it, and wet it thoroughly with scalding water. When it is cool, put in your rye, add two gills of lively yeast, and mix with water as stiff as you can knead it. Let it stand an hour and a half, in a cool place in summer, on the hearth in winter. It should be put into a very hot oven, and baked three or four hours.

Greatest Remedy Known.

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumptive is certainly the greatest medical remedy ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity.—Thousands of once hopeless sufferers now loudly proclaim their praise for this Discovery to which they owe their lives. Not only does it positively cure Consumption, but Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Hoarseness and all affections of the Throat, Chest and Lungs yield at once to its wonderful curative powers as if by magic. We do not ask you to buy a large bottle until you know what you are getting. We therefore earnestly request you to call on your druggists, M. Wright & Son, and get a trial bottle free of cost which will convince the most skeptical of its wonderful merits, and show you what a regular one dollar size bottle will do. For sale by M. Wright & Son, Tecumseh.

Every young man should remember that the world will always honor industry. The vulgar and useless idler whose energies of body and mind are rusting for want of exercise, the mistaken being who pursues amusement as relief to his enervated muscles, or engages in exercises that produce no useful end, may look with scorn on the laborer at his toil, but his scorn is praise, his contempt honor. Honesty and industry will secure the respect of the wise and good among men, and yield the rich fruits of an easy conscience, and give that hearty self-respect which is above all price. Toil on, then, young men and women. Be diligent in business—improve the heart and mind.

Druggists Praise Them.

"We always recommend Malt Bitters."

"A perfect food medicine."

"Best nourishing agent we know of."

"Women and children take Malt Bitters."

"Overcome nervousness and sleeplessness."

"Not a vile rum bitters."

"A perfect renovator of exhausted nature."

"Most successful medicine in the world."

Keep it on hand. No Farmer or Teamster should be without Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment. It is invaluable in cases of hurts either on man or beast.

The Indians call the colored troops buffalo soldiers, on account of their kinky hair. They never scalp them, and dislike fighting them, because when they kill them the braves have nothing to show for their prowess. Until their enlistment as soldiers, negroes could pass safely through an Indian country where to a white man it would be certain death.

Given Up by the Doctors.

Where doctors have failed to cure, and have given their patients up to die, Electric Bitters have often been used, and a cure effected, greatly to the astonishment of all. Diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs are positively cured by Electric Bitters. They invariably cure Constipation, Headache and all Bilious Attacks. Try them and be convinced that they are the best medicine ever used. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents a bottle.

Why an object of loathing and disgust to yourself and society from catarrh, when Sanford's Radical Cure externally and internally administered, will cure every symptom of the disease. Every package is a complete treatment. Only $1.

The Cyclopaedia War.

The month of July, 1881, witnesses the completion of the largest and most important literary work this country and the century have seen. It is the Library of Universal Knowledge, large type edition, in 15 large octavo volumes, containing 10 per cent more matter than Appleton's Cyclopædia, at less than one-fifth its cost, and 20 per cent more than Johnson's Cyclopædia, at a little more than one-fourth its cost.

Victory

Chambers's Encyclopædia, which forms the basis of the Library of Universal Knowledge (the last London edition of 1880 being reprinted verbatim as a portion of its contents), is the laborious product of the ripest British and European scholarship. It has developed through a century of Cyclopædia, making its various editions having been many times revised, in successive years, till it has come to be universally recognized, by those competent to judge, as standing at the very front of great aggregations of knowledge, and better adapted than any other Cyclopædia for popular use. It contains such full and important information as the ordinary reader, or the careful student, is likely to seek, upon about 25,000 subjects in every department of human knowledge. Chambers's Encyclopædia, however, is a foreign production, edited and published for a foreign market, and could not be expected to give as much prominence to American topics as American readers might desire. To supply these and other deficiencies a large corps of American editors and writers have added important articles upon about 15,000 topics, covering the entire field of human knowledge, bringing the whole number of titles under one alphabetical arrangement to about 40,000. Thus the work is thoroughly Americanized, and the Library of Universal Knowledge becomes at once the latest and most complete Encyclopædia in the field, at a mere fraction of the cost of any similar work which has preceded it.

Price of the 15 volumes, complete, in extra cloth binding, $15.00. In half Russia, sprinkled edges, $20.00. In half Russia, gilt top, $22.50. In full library sheep, marbled edges, $25.00.

The superlative value and importance of this great Encyclopædia lies especially in the fact that it is brought within the reach of every one who aspires after knowledge and culture. It is really a library of universal knowledge. It brings a liberal education easily within the reach even of every plowboy of the country and apprentice boy of the city. Every farmer and every mechanic in the land owes it to himself and to his children that such a Cyclopædia shall henceforward form a part of the outfit of his home. To the professional man, and every person of intelligence in every walk of life, a Cyclopædia is a necessity.

Revolution

Of course the old and wealthy publishers who have grown rich (it is said that the Appletons have made a profit of nearly two million dollars on their Cyclopædia) from the sale of their high-priced publications are not pleased that their monopolies are broken and their power overthrown. Of course the book agents and booksellers who have been used to getting from 40 to 60 per cent commission for selling these high-priced books are not so well pleased to sell the Library of Universal Knowledge on 15 per cent commission, though those who are not short-sighted discover that their own interests, after all, are identical with the interests of the people, and their real profits, in the end, are increased, by the immense sales which result from meeting the people's wants. The majority of booksellers, however, are better pleased to slander than to sell this and our numerous other standard and incomparably low-priced publications. But the Literary Revolution has always looked to the people, in whose interests it is, for its patronage, and it has never looked in vain, as our more than one million volumes printed last year (this year being increased, to probably more than two millions) abundantly prove.

$10,000 Reward

To Club Agents.

You can order the Cyclopædia directly from us, and by uniting with your neighbors and friends you can secure club rates as follows:

A discount of 10 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering at one time three or more sets of the Cyclopædia; and a discount of 15 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering five or more sets at one time.

As a special inducement to our friends and patrons to go to work promptly and vigorously, each doing what he can for the dissemination of universal knowledge, we propose to distribute $10,000 in special premiums as follows, in addition to the regular discount to clubs:

$5,000 Reward to be distributed equally among the first 500 club agents who send us clubs of not less than five subscribers, after June 15th and before September 1st.

$5,000 Reward In addition to the first $5,000 to be distributed among the 500 club agents who, during the same time, send us the largest number of subscribers, not less than twenty in number, the amount to be distributed proportionately to the whole number of subscribers which each of the 100 club agents may send us.

The names of the subscribers must in every case be forwarded to us. The first $5,000 named will be distributed as specified as rapidly as the orders are received, and the remaining $5,000 will be distributed promptly on Sept. 1st. The names of the persons receiving these rewards will be printed, with the amounts received by each, and the list sent to all the club agents entering into competition for them. Subscribers must be actual purchasers for individual use, to entitle the club agent to the rewards under this offer, and not booksellers or agents who buy to sell again.

Persons desiring to raise clubs may send to us at once for sample volumes, if they desire, in the various styles of binding, paying us 75 cents for the volume in cloth, $1.00 for the volume in half Russia, sprinkled edges, and $1.25 for the volume in library sheep. Orders for the full sets will be filled by us with the utmost promptness, within our ability to manufacture, beginning not later than July 10th, orders being filled in the order of their receipt by us.

Specimen pages of the "Library of Universal Knowledge" will be sent free upon request. Descriptive catalogue of our large list of standard publications, with terms to clubs, and illustrated pamphlet describing book-making and type-setting by steam, will be sent upon application. Remit by bank draft, money order, registered letter, or by express. Fractions of $1.00 may be sent in postage-stamps.

A new sect has sprung up in Eaton county, who call themselves "The Church of the Living God." It is said to number over three hundred proselytes, and a committee of twelve—probably an imitation of the Apostles—are engaged in making a suitable bible for their faith. This is almost an exact repetition of the origin of Mormonism, but there is no probability that the new "Church of the Living God," will ever rival the success of the "Church of Christ of the Latter Day Saints."

We are informed that the mother of a family of four interesting little girls at Napoleon, has abandoned them and her home owing to continual misunderstanding with her husband. Her acquaintances have appealed to her maternal instincts and advised her to reconsider her course, but she refuses absolutely to again go back to her hearthstone. The eldest of the children is said to be under twelve and upon her now devolves the labor and responsibilities of the household. The father is often away, and they are not unfrequently alone through the day and far into the night. The mother is at the home of her father, who lives a few miles southeast of Jackson.

The Jackson Patriot says: "One of the inmates of the Jackson county poor-house named Murphy who several years ago was tried for the crime of murder, convicted and sentenced to solitary confinement in the state prison for life. He remained in his cell about eight years, and in the meantime became demented, when facts were developed proving that at the time the deed was committed he was between 100 and 200 miles in another direction. The poor fellow, broken down in body and mind, was discharged, and afterward admitted to our county house. Subsequently sundry citizens, notably Dr. W. H. Palmer, visited Lansing and brought the matter to the attention of members of the legislature in the hope that some provision would be made for his relief, but the great wrong was never to any degree righted. Murphy has been a public charge for perhaps eight years or more, and this county, without having been in the least degree instrumental in reducing him to the wreck that he is, finds itself forced to support and care for him during his natural life. It is a sad case, but by no means without a parallel. And in common justice it must be conceded that the state should make ample provision for the victims of such mistakes, and not cast them ruined out upon the world. Especially is it unjust and unreasonable for the commonwealth to reduce a man to the condition of a pauper, although unintentially, and then throw the burden of his support upon a community that had no hand in bringing him to such a strait. Murphy was tried and convicted in another section of the state."

Abuse of Animals Before Slaughter.

The more sensible physicians have for a long time urged that more attention should be paid to the slaughter of animals intended for food. Dr. Jackson describes, with great vividness, the effect produced by driving a cow in the heat and dust, frightened and angry, directly to the shambles. It has been urged that the transportation of animals by rail long distances, so affects their blood and general health as to make them, in some cases, seriously poisonous to those who eat them. Dr. Roser, the celebrated anatomist, cites the case of a family which ate of a roebuck caught in a snare. It was so caught that it must have survived long in most severe agony. On the day that the family first partook of the dainty the members were all afflicted with dryness of the mouth, oppression of the stomach, and nausea. All were alike troubled with pain in the head and giddiness, as well as extreme weakness in the limbs. One lost sight for several days, and the mother died after a prolonged illness. He concludes the communication by urging that as many animals are tortured to death, a medical police ought to sharply supervise the matter that such animals be not sold for food. No one who has lived in any portion of the Southwest can fail to appreciate the importance of this subject. Most city people are absolutely at the mercy of the butchers. They must eat what is exposed for sale without the slightest knowledge of how it came to its death. A more decent civilization will undoubtedly take care to furnish healthy meat as well as milk. It is not what we drink, but what we eat also, that infuses the system with fevers and agues and subtle destroying agencies.

ANNOYING POSTAL CARDS.

The Postmaster General has issued the following order, in answer to request for instructions on the general subject of annoying postal cards:

"When anyone is annoyed or expects to be annoyed by postal cards sent from any particular place, or from known persons, he may direct the Postmaster at the point named to destroy all postal cards addressed to him or cards from any person named so addressed, and so far as the discharge of the duties of the office permits sufficient examination the Postmaster should comply with the request. The same request may be made of the receiving Postmaster. The direction to the Postmaster should be in writing, and should be filed for preservation.

THE CROPS.

The following reports showing the condition of spring wheat, tobacco and corn crops, have just been issued by the department of agriculture:

Spring Wheat—The returns on Aug. 1 give the condition of spring wheat at 81, against 88 last year, and 81 in 1879 at the same time. Compared with the crop last year there is reported a heavy decrease in the states of Iowa and Illinois; a slight decrease in Minnesota, Nebraska, and California; while in Wisconsin and all the New England states there is an increase. Reports from Dakota indicate a fair crop, with large increase in acreage.

Corn—The general condition of corn, Aug. 1 is 77—a very considerable decline since last month, when it stood at 93. In August, 1880, the condition was 98, which however, was exceptionally high. The Atlantic coast states make a showing somewhat better than the general average, except in South Carolina, where the excessive drouth has cut down the figures to 41. Louisiana and Texas are the next lowest of the coast states, from the same cause, reporting 67 and 46, respectively. Tennessee is the lowest of the interior states, its average falling to 63. In the great corngrowing region, the highest reports are 95 in Wisconsin and 92 in Nebraska, and the lowest 74 in Kansas.

CENSUS BULLETINS.

Census bulletins 245 and 246, just issued, are devoted to the salt industry and city and town debts, respectively. From the former it appears that the number of establishments for the production of salt has decreased from 390 in 1879 to 164 in 1880. During the same period the amount of salt produced has increased from 12,771,198 bushels to 29,830,398 bushels, showing that the salt industry is now carried on by larger establishments, requiring more capital, and producing a proportionately larger amount of salt. There is a capital of $28,225,740 invested in the industry. Michigan leads in production, with New York next, followed by Ohio and West Virginia.

According to the latter bulletin the total town and city indebtedness is $70,588,924. New York leads with a total bonded debt of $308,256,882; a floating debt of $3,959,378, and sinking funds of $[illegible]. New York is followed by Pennsylvania, with a gross debt of $97,087,521. Massachusetts follows with a gross indebtedness of $78,630,441, which [illegible] has the smallest bonded debt, $46,[illegible], and being at the smallest gross indebtedness, $79,[illegible].

PLYMOUTH ROCK ACCIDENT.

Secretary Windom has addressed the following letter to the supervising inspector of steamboats at New York: "In view of the recent accident to the steamer Plymouth Rock, you are directed to make special examination and report to the department upon the general condition of that steamer as to strength and seaworthiness for the route outside of Sandy Hook to the pier at Long Branch, with special reference to the location of the boilers upon the guards of the boat, and, whether steam-pipes connecting the boilers with the engine are properly supplied with efficient slip-joints to afford the relief necessary in case of a heavy sea striking under the guards. You will also report in detail the nature and cause of the accident to the steamer; also whether, in your judgment, it is safe to allow any steamer with wide guards to carry three thousand passengers upon routes outside of Sandy Hook."

THE SIOUX AND PONCAS.

The decision arrived at between the Omahas, Winnebagos, Sioux and Ponca chiefs, and secretary Kirkwood was to purchase from one of the several tribes represented in the conference lands on which to locate about 175 Ponca Indians, who yet remain upon the old Ponca reserve. The Omaha and Winnebago delegates refused to dispose of any part of their reservations, assigning as a reason for refusal that their tribe was increasing in numbers and that they needed the whole of their reservations for their children. The Sioux delegates consented not only to part with the land the Poncas needed—about twenty-five thousand acres—but offered to give the lands to the Poncas. White Thunder (successor to Spotted Tail), who spoke for the Sioux delegation, was quite dramatic in delivery. He spoke with forcible gestures and apparent eloquence when he said the Sioux would let the Poncas have the land. When Secretary Kirkwood inquired whether they expected the government to give anything to the Sioux for the permission given to the Poncas to live on their land, White Thunder drew himself up proudly and said: "No, my friend; that is not what I want. You told me yesterday that I ought to have pity upon these poor Poncas. If I have pity upon them, I am not going to take their money. We give them the lands they asked."

THE NEW YORK CUSTOM-HOUSE LABORERS.

Secretary Windom, in a letter to Collector Robertson, regarding the petition of laborers in the New York public store, writes: "The plan of doing work in a public store by contract system instead of by government labor originated only in a desire to administer the customs business with as much economy as practical; but at the same time it is of course requisite that the work shall be well done and to the satisfaction of the customs officers. The contract for doing work in the public store has already been awarded to Keyes and Stickney, and therefore it is too late to consider the propriety of granting the prayer of the petitioners to continue work under government supervision. But the contractors will be required to give good and sufficient bond for proper performance of their contract. From the advertisement transmitted, you will see you are vested with power to reject any employe whom the contractors may propose who, in your opinion, is not qualified for the work, and who is not a proper party to be employed in the store. If at any time there shall be any remissness on the part of the contractors to perform their work, or if it shall not be done to the satisfaction of your officers, I shall consider it incumbent upon you to report the fact to the department for such action as it may deem proper. I think, unless other reasons are found, that preference should be given by contractors to men already employed in the public store, at least to those who have been there any length of time, and who are familiar with the work. I will thank you to communicate this to the parties transmitting the petition and the contractors."

AN UNFORTUNATE WOMAN.

A special dispatch from Washington, based upon official information furnished by the president's family physicians, makes the announcement of a fact which must greatly intensify public interest in the president's case, and add to the sorrowful features of it if the executive should yet prove a victim to the assassin. This news relates to the condition of Mrs. Garfield. This lady, as the public already know, has been very ill ever since her advent to the white house. Her sickness dates almost from inauguration day. At the time the president was shot Mrs. Garfield's condition was so critical that the physicians who attended her at Long Branch all but despaired of her recovery. After her recall to Washington by Guiteau's crime, the true character of the lady being so strongly appealed to, asserted itself, and from that time she has apparently been much better. It is now announced that it is expected that in November next Mrs. Garfield will again become a mother. Mrs. Garfield was married to the president in 1858, in her 23d year, and in his 27th. She is now in her 46th year. When it is stated that Mrs. Garfield's case was entirely misunderstood up to the time of the attempted assassination, that only at that time was its real nature made known to her and the president, the special enormity of Guiteau's act becomes apparent. The present announcement will carry with it to the American people a new idea of the patient heroism which has inspired the noble fortitude of the illustrious sufferer at the white house, and that of his devoted wife during the long and weary weeks of their unparalleled trial.

THE ASSASSIN—HE MAKES A FURIOUS ONSLAUGHT UPON A PRISON GUARD.

In some way on Wednesday Guiteau gained information that the president was in a sinking condition. This made him extremely nervous, feverish, and excited, and he paced his cell in a hasty and anxious fashion, asking again and again for "more news." This excitement was intensified by the noise of the drill of the marines, as the guard had been doubled, caused by genuine fear that a popular outbreak might result from the increased danger of the president. Guiteau seemed nervously to take in the situation, almost without the necessity of telling it to him. In the evening the people at the jail believed the president was dying, and in some way Guiteau heard that also, and became more restless. He climed to the window of his cell and down again ceaselessly, acting very much as a crazy man under intense excitement.

Guiteau's condition attracted the attention of everyone about the jail who saw him, and W. C. McGill, who has charge of the jail on alternate nights, visited the cell several times. From what he there saw he concluded Guiteau had heard from some of the prisoners the alarming rumors. He watched him carefully, and several times saw him climbing the iron bars. McGill suspected the assassin was attempting to escape or to hang himself, and at 4:30 a. m. visited the cell. He found Guiteau concealing something in his hands, and supposing it was a knife asked what he was doing with it. Guiteau looked up excitedly and cried: "So help me God, I have no knife." McGill insisted that he had and stepped toward him, when Guiteau sprang up, rushed at the guard furiously, and made a savage cut at his throat. McGill drew back, and the knife passed through his coat collar, cutting off the upper button, and making a clean cut on the left shoulder. The guard drew his revolver when Guiteau dropped his knife and grasped the more formidable weapon, crying for help, and calling that he was being shot. The pistol was accidentally discharged, and several guards rushed to the cell, when Guiteau was disarmed. The assassin said he was acting in self-defense, and that McGill had attempted to shoot him.

How Guiteau obtained the knife is explained by the fact that "Babe" Bedford had once occupied the cell, and several similar instruments had been concealed there. The knife is known by the prisoners as a "cheeser," and was the criminal's substitute for a jack-knife, razor, and dagger. It is made of a piece of steel, found in the side of a boat, at the instep and can be sharpened on a stone or window-sill until it becomes exceedingly keen. The blade is generally about two or three inches long, half an inch broad, and an inch or more is left unsharpened and wrapped in rags or paper for a handle. These instruments are used by prisoners for various purposes, being confiscated by the jailers whenever found. It is customary for prisoners to hide them carefully in the walls or crevices of the cells. The assassin considers his escape very fortunate, and when a guard said in his presence that he had thought that the pistol shot had settled the poor dog, he replied: "My dear sir, this is too important a subject for joking. Life is valuable." The attempt created intense excitement. McGill said he supposed Guiteau thought the president was dead, and took his means of proving his insanity conclusively.

OUR EXPORT TRADE.

Mr. J. N. Whitney, acting chief of the Bureau of Statistics, submits his report of exports of dairy products for the three months ending with July. There was a considerable falling off in the export for July this year as compared with last in the item of butter, as the statement shows that in July, 1880, $872,707 worth of this article was exported, against $624,354 worth for July which has just passed. In the matter of cheese the showing is the other way, there being a considerable increase. In July, 1880, the trade was worth $2,698,286, compared with $3,304,118 for July, 1881. The butter export was $3,024,024, against $2,556,844 for the same period of 1881.

The cheese trade, as in the previous case, shows a considerable improvement, being worth $8,059,699 for the first seven months of last year, against $9,273,360 for the first seven months of the present year. The trade in dairy products for the last three months of this year compared with those of last, exhibit some curious variations. While the butter trade for the three months of 1881 showed a considerable decrease over that of 1880, the trade in cheese exhibits a small increase for the same period. To be more explicit; the figures show that for the three months ended July 31, 1881, the butter export was $2,279,321 worth as compared with $1,370,024 worth for the same time this year. The cheese exports for the three months in 1881 were $3,491,493, showing a slight increase over the corresponding period of last year, when it was $3,236,233. Taking the total trade of all these articles combined, it is found that for the single month of July there was a decrease when compared with the corresponding month of last year. The July export for last year amounted to $12,892,517 against $11,542,029 of this year. For seven months combined the value of exports of all these articles was about the same, being $82,768,977 for 1881, against $82,286,346 for 1880. Going back a step further, and taking the total for the nine months ended July, 1880, there seemed to be a marked increase for a similar period ended July 31, 1881. In the first instance, the value of its exports was $88,321,007, while for the latter period it was $95,809,277. The last three months of this year, as compared with last year, does not make so good a showing. In dairy products alone, since last year, there was exported $8,516,667 worth for May, June, and July, against $7,561,466 for the same months of 1881.

PORK.

The prejudice against American pork, owing to the scare over trichinosis, shows its effect in the export of that staple, and, in consequence, there is a considerable falling off in trade in these products. In July of last year there was exported $1,078,136 worth of bacon, while during July of the present year there were only $3,635,359 worth.

The exports of hams, lard, and mess pork show the same marked decline of July of that year. The export of hams was worth $547,634, while this year it was $402,678. In lard the falling off may be seen by comparison of values, which were respectively $2,192,544 for July, 1880, against $1,701,112 for this year.

In mess pork the decrease is considerable, being $526,030 for July of last year, against $426,536 for the past month. For the seven months ending July 31 of last year, the exports of fresh beef amounted to $5,142,538, while for the same period of this year the showing is $6,036,364, nearly a million better.

IN SALTED BEEF

there is a slight decrease for the period of seven months ending July 31, in 1881, as compared with that of last year. For the first seven months of 1880 the exports of salted beef were $1,756,598, while for the first seven months of this year it was $1,575,271. The same marked decrease in comparison with the exports of hog products for the seven months of this period is not observed as in the month of July alone.

Farmers and Mechanics.

If you wish to avoid great danger and trouble, besides a no small bit of expense, at this season of the year, you should take prompt steps to keep disease from your household. The system should be cleansed, blood purified, stomach and bowels regulated, and prevent and cure diseases arising from Spring malaria. We know of nothing that will so perfectly and surely do this as Electric Bitters, and at the trifling cost of fifty cents a bottle.—Exchange. Sold by

"A Girl's Choice."

It was in a drug store of course. All interesting incidents occur in drug stores,—that is, nearly all. She was pretty, with blue eyes, and golden hair, one of those kind of beauties the poet would have called an "angel," but for the fact that a colony of pimples on her fair frontispiece precluded all thought of a celestial being. Bowing timidly to the handsome clerk, she asked for "Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases," and upon receiving it vanished like the morning dew before the Summer sun.

A sort of intermittent fever accompanied by a complication of other ailments afflict numbers of our citizens at this writing. A seemingly large number of deaths have been reported here during the past few days, while others linger in a critical state of health.

The recent death of Rev. Albert R. Hazen, a former pastor of the M. E. church, caused an additional gloom to settle over the place. To the writer's personal knowledge this makes the fifth minister who, having preached or resided here has entered the great unseen within as many years. Truly passing away is written on all things.

"The Beare is a Beaste," says a quaint old book, published in London in London three centuries ago, "whose flesh is good for mankynd: his fat is good, with laudanum, to make an ointment to heal balde-headed men to receive the hayre agayne." We know of many "balde-headed men" who would be glad to "receive the hayre agayne," but we do not desire to encourage them in a trial of bear's fat and laudanum. Far from it. We, however, do not hesitate to commend Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.'s Hair Vigor, which not only has the effect in some cases of making the hair grow on heads once bald, but cleans the scalp and restores gray and faded hair to its original color and vitality, imparting to it the glossiness and softness of youth. The evidences of its utility are too numerous and of too high a character to admit of any doubt. It required years of study and scientific experiment to decide upon the combinations of ingredients that would accomplish what Ayer's Hair Vigor now does.—The Interior, Chicago.

THE REASON WHY.

The following oration was delivered by Edwin Taylor, of Armstrong, Kansas, at the third quinquennial re-union held at the Raisin Valley Seminary on Friday, August 19th, 1881:

Among the harmless little fictions that some of us imbibed, rather than were taught, in our school days, was the one that conspicuous oratorical possibilities were latent in us. With respect to that supposed forensic talent, most of us long ago discovered in ourselves an unexpected shortage.—And it is as one of that majority, that leaving my place at the plow-tail, I come before you, confessing that I am no orator, merely to mention a few unimportant reflections, rescued from the furrow, together with some disconnected reminiscences having more or less bearing upon the subject selected—The Reason Why.

It was at one time in its earlier history, the policy of this Seminary to make much of the study of physiology, which was taught largely by means of charts. One of those charts represented the osseous framework of a suppositious female with the ribs cruelly contracted and out of place from tight-lacing—a monstrous practice which could be averred with perfect safety, as I understood it, of the average young woman of the period. The frightful effects of this distortion were duly enlarged upon as a Reason Why there was the well-known excessive mortality among the class of people in question—or, at least, so I understood it. At this stage of my instruction we were one day asked by the teacher, why women were shorter lived than men. Deeply impressed by my recent lessons and without the shadow of a doubt on my mind, I spoke up promptly that it was because they dressed so tightly. The shock that my reflective faculties sustained when we were thereupon assured that, after all, women outlived the men was not lightly gotten over. I tried to ease off the mortification I felt over my "smartness," as the boys called it, by wondering how it could be that an important part of society was killing itself off with notoriously vicious practices and yet was living longer than the other half.

About this time a telegraph line was constructed by my father's house and the well-known hum of the wires at once attracted my juvenile attention. The wise man and wit of our country neighborhood was called upon to explain the phenomenon. He said it was made by passing messages, the electric current disturbing the resonant quality of the iron. This explanation did excellently well till I was put into a book of philosophy called Reasons Why which said the hum of the telegraph wire was due merely to vibration in the wind. Then I was all at sea upon another subject. My Reasons Why recommended glass insulators for lightning rods, with many a plausible why and wherefore. But while upon the subject I saw a large, new church with the conductor nailed tight to the steeple, and I said to myself see what these stupid people have missed by not reading my book; their house is endangered and their money thrown away. Judge of my amazement then, at being assured that this particular rod was put up according to the very latest fashion in electrical science and under the immediate supervision of one of its chiefest apostles. I hesitated long between the book and the professor, the position of each seemed so impregnable, and I never felt that I had gotten at the true inwardness of this subject till, after visiting many cities and seeing miles of costly buildings without lightning rods, and learning that fire insurance companies neither require nor recommend them — then I discovered that their primary uses were to ornament rural architecture, and bring astonishing profit into the pockets of the peripatetic merchants who vend them. My book spoke highly of a newspaper spread over a bed as a valuable addition to the bedclothes because, light as it seemed, it was substantially air-tight and would more effectually arrest escaping heat than apparently warmer quilts. I tried the paper comfortable one cold night, and the uppermost thought in my wakeful mind was a desire to put the man who wrote that book into a newspaper bed. Being considered a delicate plant, a work by a noted author entitled "Weak lungs and how to make them strong," was put into my hands. One of its leading recommendations was an open window for a sleeping room in all weather; and it was shown by such convincing clearness that a sleeper in a close room will breathe up all the oxygen present several times over before morning, and each time inevitably be his last, that I flew like a dove to my window, threw it open in the dead of winter and straightway caught a cold the effects of which I shall never outgrow.

It was after many such experiences as these that I began to appreciate Longfellow's hidden meaning when he said "Things are not what they seem" and to notice that both in books and out of them an abundance of reasons why things were so was no sure indication that they were so, and that, generally speaking, their probability decreased in an inverse ratio as the reasoning increased. The wilder the notion, as it seemed to me, the more it was bolstered up with reasons; that in a general way facts and philosophy, as it were, supplemented each other, and whether in political economy or gardening the more elaborate the argument in support of a conclusion, the less the probability of that conclusion's correctness. It appeared to me on further reflection that the average citizen abhors accurate observation but delights in ratiocination; that he will believe anything which is well theorized but will doubt everything that you haven't a WHY for.—He has opinions in plenty where he has no knowledge and bases far more of his beliefs respecting things of every day interest, even, upon his generalizations than his information. His invariable first question is, Why is it? Answer that to his satisfaction and he will take the Is it? for granted. A plausable wherefore will gain his credence to the wildest story, though he would refuse to recognize the veritable truth itself, in propria persona, unless presented with an introductory formula. Tell him, for instance, that giant powder is customarally tamped with water and he will refer you to the "marines"; but tell him that a blue glass window is the sovereignest remedy on earth for his complication of diseases because the actenic effects of the blue light will dispel the rheums and humors of the blood, and he will forthwith send for a glazier—nevertheless, giant powder is tamped with water in rock work and the blue glass cure is an exploded chimera.—When old Polonius directs Rinaldo to "by indirections find directions out" he but indicates, as it has sometimes seemed to me, the inborn bias of the human mind. Independent investigation is one of the crowning glories of our latter day intellectual development; but the bias of our long-time mental habits is still strong upon us, constantly dragging us back into the confusions of wherefore, therefore and because. To cite an illustration of what I mean, which may stand as a sample of ten thousand more weighty matters, ever since my earliest reading down to this very year, at least annually has come up the question, which end down should a fence post be set to last the longest? I have never seen the man who claimed to know, absolutely, but I have met a large number who have solved the problem one way or the other in their minds, by a sort of mental triangulation with a base-line taken in the nature of timber, earth and air. I suppose that it is no exaggeration to say that the time spent in writing the controversies upon this comparatively unimportant question would have sufficed, twice over, to split out and plant, and wait for them to rot off, enough posts to settle it forever.

When I became a farmer I found very few fellow craftsmen who could give me any absolute data respecting farm operations; but I found still fewer who could not readily evolve out of their ignorance and inner consciousness answers to all my questions. I have read much upon the merits of top-dressing for instance; but not one essay that stopped with the end-all and be-all, the dollars and cents of it—the rule being that the weaker they have been in figures, the fuller in deductions. Out of the large number of rural philosophers who plant according to the moon's phases, not one has ever, to my knowledge, tested his case on the absolute fact; like so many of their co-scientists in larger fields, they prefer to speak in the future tense and fortify their predictions with, "and I'll tell you why."

Questioning two eminent unat meteriologists on the probable rain-fall in the near future, I learned from one that it would be wet because, as the horn of the new moon hung down, the water would run out; while the other maintained that the pendulous horn being adjusted so as not to hold the hunter's equipments, was a dry-weather sign. Both knew in their souls that the moon told them nothing; but their human instinct for drawing conclusions was too strong to allow such an opportunity to go by without "catching on"; that they got on opposite sides is a mere incident and should not be allowed to weigh against the reliability of either. Respecting my adopted state, which has within its borders a considerable portion of what the earlier geographies represented as the Great American Desert, I often read in articles written by people of attainments, that its annual rainfall is increasing, because, according to Prof. Tice, the continuous conductors afforded the iron rails of several roads across the plains have equalized the electrical conditions; because, according to Prof. Baker, the large streams that are now spread over the surface in irrigation are returned in dew and rain instead of running off to the sea, as formerly; according to Josiah Hoopes, because "the plow was the true rain-persuader," and is daily extending its dominion; and finally, because, according to a host of writers, of the increased growth of timber from artificial planting—four separate and distinct theories to account for what is an open question; the fact being that the signal service records in Colorado and Kansas, as I interpret them, do not show an increasing rainfall, and if they did, it could not be charged to the principal reason given, tree planting, since, including orchards and hedges there cannot be in those states one-half the square feet of tree foliage to-day, that there was on the original forests. Our minds seem to be so constituted that we require reasons to circle them around even in the simplest affairs. The Prince in the story must needs have his hoe-handle filled with drugs before he would consent to seek for health by manipulating that wholesome weapon of the gardener's welfare: the old nurse recommended for croup two thicknesses of flannel with a caterpillar between them so that when the croups began to scatter they could go into the worm. A water-witch once located a well for me, and when I asked him if the peach-wood fork did not really point out locations as he made it appear to, he answered "yes," because the occult sympathy between the peach-wood and the aqueous treasures under ground were brought into contact by virtue of the aquatic affinities of

HAVE COURAGE TO SAY NO.

You're starting to-day on life's journey,
Alone on the highway of life;
You'll meet with a thousand temptations
Each city with evil is rife.

This world is a stage of excitement—
There's danger wherever you go—
But if you are tempted in weakness,
Have courage, my boy, to say no.

The siren's sweet song may allure you,
Beware of her cunning and art;
Whenever you see her approaching,
Be guarded, and haste to depart.

The billiard saloons are inviting,
Decked out in their tinsel and show;
You may be invited to enter—
Have courage, my boy, to say no.

The bright ruby wine may be offered;
No matter how tempting it be,
Grasp poison that stings like an adder,
My boy, have the courage to flee.

The gambling hells are open before you,
Their lights, how they dance to and fro
If you should be tempted to enter,
Think twice, even thrice, ere you go.

In courage alone lies your safety,
When you the long journey begin,
And trust that a Heaven Father
Will keep you unspotted from sin.

Temptation will go on increasing,
As streams from a rivulet flow,
But if you are true to your manhood,
Have the courage, my boy to say no.

THE DEACON'S VOW.

The sword of a terrible suspense was quivering over the household of Deacon Cameron and his wife. In the small white-curtained chamber over the sitting-room their only daughter, Agnes, lay between life and death. The doctor gave them little reason to hope, that the feeble spark which was flickering, and nearly ready to expire, could be again rekindled. For days and weeks all that love and skill and tender nursing could do had been done, to win back health to the fever-stricken girl; but so far it seemed in vain. Her mother and brothers were tireless in their watching and devotion, and an arrest, in the last few days, had been laid on everything except the most necessary work, while they waited, in that solemn hush which is less of hope than of despair, for what the next hour might bring to pass. House, fields, business, life were all overhung and clouded by the mystery which always hovers about the bedsides of the departing, even when the prospect is bright with trust in Him who says: "I am He that liveth and was dead, and behold! I am alive forevermore."

Agnes was the Deacon's darling. Stern and grim to others, he had invariably been gentle and indulgent to her. In her babyhood it had been his delight to have her nestle against her father's broad breast and play with his long beard, or fall asleep in his arms. As a child, her seat at the table had been next to his, and her place in the pew by his side. As she grew into fair womanhood, she had become his companion and friend and almost his second self. Now that his eyes were beginning to fail and his ears to grow deaf—infirmities of advancing age which he resented, yet was compelled to acknowledge—it was Agnes who read to him, and talked to him, in her clear voice, never loud, but distinct and pure in its utterance, so that every syllable was like a silver coin for finish. The Deacon loved his daughter as he loved no one else in the world. Even her mother knew that her own was the second place in her husband's heart. Yet she was contented; for her's was a sweet and easily resigned nature, and, she, too, idolized her Agnes.

Did he love her best? He supposed so; and still there was a doubt of it in the minds of his friend. Deacon Cameron had another idol, and that was money. He hugged it closely and worshipped it slavishly. It cost him bitter pain to part with it, unless it were in some way which he knew would return it in kind and increased. Honest, just, defrauding none, he was scrimping and niggardly in expenditure for his family; nor could he bring himself to part with an acre of ground, nor the price of a portion of his crops, to aid the poor, to assist the church, or to further mission work. His children had been stinted in their education, deprived of opportunities and privileges for which they longed; and forced to live narrow, contracted lives under the old roof, where raged many a storm of passion that only God and mother knew any thing about.

It was a winter's morning, but soft and mild as spring, with blue skies, undimmed by a cloud, and gentle south winds stirring the leafless branches. The physician had told the father that there was little probability that Agnes could recover, and that the issue would ere long be decided. With pale face and haggard eyes, he left the house, and wandered on past his ample barns, through the great apple orchard and the vineyard, and over the wide meadows, that were his pride. The man's soul was desolate. He felt as though a hurricane had gone over him, sweeping him bare of what the good years had given. The cry of his heart was: "Lord, take the rest! Take all, but leave me Agnes!" For the first time in his experience his wealth was a matter of utter indifference to him. He walked on, looking strangely older than ever before, and the bowed head, shrunken stature, and tottering feet were curiously unlike the self-assertive, arrogant man, whose very gait was usually the unconscious expression of a will that would have its way, encounter what opposition it might.

There was a great spreading oak which stood on the edge of his land, shadowing equally his farm and that of his nearest neighbor, Harmon Murray. The Murrays were the opposites of the Cameron's. Gay, light-hearted, spending money lavishly, sending the boys off to college and the girls to city schools, buying books, music and pictures, filling the house with guests at midsummer and in the holidays. Deacon Cameron could not help having private doubts as to the Christianity of the Murrays. Though Harmon Murray was a liberal subscriber to every good cause, and a regular attendant on the services of the church, he was, in the deacon's prejudiced eyes, a heathen man and a publican. It had been an aggravation of his grief that the gloom in his house was shared in his neighbor's. Especially had he chafed and struggled against the knowledge that one member of the family that was so antagonistic to his own, cared for Agnes with a love deeper than that of kindred. The Deacon, though a strong man, was selfish. He would have looked with aversion on any man who might have desired to win the affection of his child; for he meant to keep her as his own particular treasure if he could. But that, Edgar Murray should aspire to her hand, and that, even timidly and afar off, Agnes should venture to regard him as her future lord, had awakened in him a resistance as violent as it was stubborn. Till now he had been fiercely angry when three or four times a day the young man had presented himself to inquire for Agnes or to bring her fruit or flowers. He had been indignant at his wife, because she had accepted Mrs. Murray's help in caring for the sick one; nor could he forgive her ignoring his displeasure and sending to the Murrays for aid in this emergency.

But now he was in extremity. He staggered to a seat beneath the oak, the very seat where Edgar and Agnes had been accustomed to rest after their occasional saunterings together by the creek or along the embowered lanes, and his gray head went down upon his hands. His whole heart was concentrated in a vehement, worldless prayer, which was fain to beat against the Almighty's throne. No feeling of God's paternity entered his mind at that intense moment. No remembrance of Christ as the great High Priest, who pleads for the children of men with a brother's tender comprehension of their wants. No thought of the Holy Spirit, with its sacred influences, came to him, as, shaken, tempest-tossed, and almost heart-broken, he cried to God, the Strong One, who could hear him, if He would. The God of the Deacon's imagination was a despot, but a despot who could be gracious. An Orthodox Congregational deacon, believing in and accepting all the doctrines, of his church as he understood them, he prayed, as a Saxon might have prayed to Thor, as a Roman to Jupiter or a Hindoo to Vishnu, that his child might be spared. Sinking to his knees, in the agony of his still unvoiced supplication, the cry of his soul broke forth into speech:

"Lord! give me back my Agnes, my darling, the one precious thing of my life! Let her not die, I beseech thee! Lord! listen. Thou hast ten thousand times ten thousand in thy Heaven. Why dost thou want my little ewe lamb? Oh, let her live! Let her live, and I will give thee whatsoever thou shalt require. My money, if thou askest it, to the uttermost farthing. My will—if it be counter to thine. I will surrender it wholly. Yea, Lord, let Agnes live, though she sit at the fireside of another and break bread in the house that I hate. Take not the sunshine out of the world, Lord, though it shine not on me. Hear my prayer, for thy dear Son's sake."

"Amen!" said a low voice, and, looking up, the Deacon saw that his prayer had had another than a divine listener. Edgar Murray walking homeward on the boundary-line had heard the flow of the Deacon's petition; and as he stood there, bare-headed, the Amen had welled up from his heart almost before he was aware of it.

"Can a man go nowhere to be alone?" exclaimed the Deacon. "Must he be followed and spied upon under his own trees and on his own ground?"

That instictive animosity was dominant in a moment, though the prayer had scarcely died upon his lips.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said Edgar, humbly. "I did not mean to intrude; but I have just come from the house, and Hugh tells me there is a shade, at least, of hope. Agnes has fallen asleep. She may be better when she awakes."

The shade of hope was not an hallucination. Very slowly, very tremulously, almost imperceptibly, the young girl passed into the several stages of convalescence. So gradual was her improvement that it was measured by weeks. From day to day no change was apparent; but from week to week a slight progress was visible, and, after awhile, pale but beautiful, she resumed her place in the household and took up one by one her old tasks. Like a lily, like a wild rose, like a bit of mignonette, she brightened and sweetened the place where she dwelt. Hers the mission which no woman need despise to make people happy, to charm away their sullen moods, and to diffuse pleasantness wherever she appeared.

"I don't know what to think of Deacon Cameron," said the pastor, Mr. Denbigh, who for thirty years had labored in the Hillside church. He was talking confidentially with his wife. "He is becoming more cranky and crotchetty every day. I did hope that the illness of his child would have wrought a change; but, if so, it is a change for the worse. I am informed that he forbids young Murray to enter his door; and when I asked him to increase his subscription to our Domestic Board, he treated me as though I were begging for myself. Adversity hardens a man when it does not refine him.

"It may be," said the pastor's gentle wife, "that God is striving with the Deacon. There is good in him, I am sure. I think he is not at peace with God, or with himself just now. He knows he is in the wrong about Agnes, and he is, therefore, not comfortable. Perhaps, dear, we have not prayed for him as we ought."

The plain fact was that the Deacon was exceedingly uncomfortable in his mind. He had offered a genuine prayer and pledged an honest vow, fully meaning to keep his word, while in his heart had been a vague idea of propitiation, as he knelt beneath the oak. When Agnes had first begun to grow stronger, his resolution had been firm to fulfill his word; but as she had crept onward to health, it had loosened its hold upon him. Could a miracle have been performed, and the maiden have arisen from her couch, at one triumphant bound, from death to life, he would have been awed and overwhelmed and in haste to make good his word to the Almighty. The comparative slowness of her restoration had given time to his nature to assert itself, and he was really more ill-tempered, cross-grained and churlish than he had been before. Even to Agnes he was sometimes harsh; the more so that, under her soft exterior and winsome ways, the slender girl had an underlying subsoil of granite, not unlike his own character and far firmer than the fabric of which her gentle mother was made.

Agnes loved her father, but she loved her friend too. If Edgar were prohibited from visiting her at her own hearth, she was not ashamed to meet him openly under the sky; to walk with him to the choir rehearsals, and to go riding with his sister, while he held the reins and his swift horses, the admiration of the country, trotted smoothly up hill and down vale and over the hard, beautiful floor-like roads which swept around mountain sides, skirted limpid streams, and intersected the thriving villages which dotted that portion of the state. Had any other member of his family thus dared his displeasure, the Deacon would have met them with prohibition and threatening; but it was too late to begin this course with Agnes, whom he did not wish to drive into entire estrangement. So the year wore on, darkling and sorrowful in the Cameron household, though outwardly all things prospered and whatever the Deacon touched turned to gold.

His main trouble was with his Bible. Turn where he would, the verses familiar from his childhood mocked him. The word vow seemed to stare at him from every page. It was David who said: "Shall I offer to the Lord sacrifices of that which cost me nothing?" And David had always been his favorite character. But they all paid their vows.

Even Jephthah, whose rash and sweeping pledge to the Deity had involved the offering of his only daughter in a dark and mysterious doom, had not shrunk from the terrible exaction. Saul, in a moment of haste, had condemned a possible offender to death; and lo! it proved to be Jonathan who must meet the bolt of fatih, and only the majestic protest of the united nation had availed to save him. The Bible was an armory which bristled with weapons turned constantly against the Deacon's conscience. And while he sat at the head of his table, silent, constrained, and gloomy, imposing an unwholsome and irritating repression on wife and children, a fiery battle was raging within him. He grew to dread Agnes' sweet, composed face, where the patience that could wait indefinitely, and hold its own to the last, was already stamped a Madonna-like dignity. Often, as he saw Edgar Murray in church, he felt that he was unreasonable in opposing his suit. There could be no valid objecton to a pure, steady, well-educated and honorable young man, who loved his daughter, and whose love she returned. The obstinate antagonism of his dislike had no foundation which could be sustained by arguments.

Days wore on. Months and seasons waned. The apple trees blossomed, ripened, and were shorn of their fruit. Successive harvests were reaped. And then the tide of good fortune turned, and the deacon had a new experience. He lost money. Apparently stable investments collapsed. His eldest son went to a distant state. A horse of which he was proud was carelessly tied, and lamed in consequence. A favorite Alderney sickened and died. The barn took fire and was consumed. None of the losses, so far, were crushing; but the aggregate bore heavily on the Deacon and made him very sad. As he sat in his arm-chair or followed the plow, he felt that the warfare of the Almighty had assumed a tangible form, and that His arrows were being aimed for his destruction.

One sorrowful day there came a greater loss. The hand of paralysis was laid upon the meek and ever-submissive wife, and she lay for hours in that death-in-life which is so horrible and so inscrutable. Now was the cup of calamity full and running over. Never a demonstrative nor a very loving husband, the Deacon had felt a true respect and a complacent proprietary affection for the woman who had given herself in the radiant bloom of her girlhood, when she had chosen him from many suitors. Always had she been a faithful wife, diligent frugal, and obedient to his wishes. When she passed softly away, amid the sobs of her children, he shed no tear; but God's lightning had, nevertheless, smitten his soul. When she lay, queenly, in silent state, in the house where she had been chief servant rather than mistress, he sat for hours in the room, living over long years, and suffering poignant remorse, which none knowing the man would have imagined possible. When he followed the hearse to the family lot where the Camerons had been buried for generations, he was bowed under an anguish as deep as it was unspeakable. Agnes slid her hand into his; but he scarcely felt the pressure, though he suffered her to lead him home like a little child, after the earth had been packed upon the coffin.

A few days crept on—interminably long in the abode of mourning—and one night the family were gathered for worship. The Deacon took the Bible, and slowly turned the leaves until he came to the sixty-sixth psalm. In a voice low and deep with emotion he read these words:

"For thou, O God, hast proved us. Thou hast tried us as silver is tried. Thou broughtest us into the net. Thou laidest affliction upon our loins. Thou hast caused men to ride over our heads. We went through fire and through water; but Thou broughtest us out into a wealthy place. I will go unto Thy house with burnt offerings. I will pay Thee my vows, which my lips have uttered and my mouth hath spoken when I was in trouble."

The Deacon paused. "Children," he said, "I have had a controversy with the Lord. I have made vows; but I have not paid them. The Lord is too much for Alexander Cameron. I shall resist him no longer. I have been vain, conceited and stubborn; fond of my own way and careful of my own interest. But now I shall begin again, if I may, and seek, if haply he let me find him, my wife's God. Your mother was nearer to him than I. Hugh, ask the pastor to come hither to-morrow. I want to help him with my substance. Agnes, daughter, Edgar Murray may come as you list, and I will give him my child and my blessing. Let us pray."

As his way was, the Deacon, having begun, paid his vows to the uttermost. The evening of his life was sweet with thankfulness; and when the sturdy sobs of Edgar and Agnes clambered on his knees and held fast to his hand, they thought in the wide world there was nobody so kind and good as grandfather.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

Mix a little saltpetre or carbonate of soda with water, and it will preserve flowers for two weeks.

A French chemist asserts that if tea be ground, like coffee, immediately before hot water is poured upon it, its exhilerating qualities will be doubled.

Sore Throat.—Dissolve one drachm chlorate potash in half a pint of water, and gargle the throat therewith; a few applications will allay inflammation.

Cure for Earache.—Take a tobacco pipe, place a wad of cotton in bowl, drop eight or ten drops of chloroform and cover with more cotton, place stem to afflicted ear and blow in the bowl.

Rose Water.—Take otio of roses, twenty-five drops, rub it in with an ounce of white sugar and four drachms of carbonate of magnesia; then add gradually half a gallon of water and four ounces of proof spirits.

To Heal Cuts and Wounds.—The leaves of geranium are an excellent application for cuts, when the skin is rubbed off, and other wounds of the kind. One or two leaves must be bruised and applied on linen to the part, and the wound will become cicatrized in a very short time.

Liquid Shoe Polish.—The following is a German recipe: Dissolve three and a half ounces of shellac in a half pint of alcohol. Rub smooth twenty-five grains of lamp-black with six drachms of cod-liver oil, and mix. A few drops are to be applied to the leather with a sponge.

Remedy for Diphtheria.—A New Bedford, Mass., woman reports a new, and as she claims, a successful cure for diphtheria. A little nephew of hers was sick with diphtheria, and the child's mother was told to give him a tea made of the bark of the roots of the white birch. She did so, and the white coating of the throat and mouth began to loosen and come off, and entire recovery followed. The tea may be used as a drink or gargle, or may be held in the mouth.

Popular Science Notes.

It is stated that the soft bluestone rock which underlies a wide part of the prairie region of Texas, is fully six hundred feet thick in many places.

Ernest Renan, writing from the region of the Nile, claims to have discovered a little model of a sewing machine, supposed to have been made over six thousand years ago, by an Egyptian, named Zynger.

In many parts of southern Europe a flour is made from chestnuts, which is said not only to be cheaper, but fully equal to wheat flour in the making of breads. A writer from that country states that in some places wheat flour and corn meal are entirely superseded by this product, which is very nourishing, and can be saved two years or longer without injury.

The largest grain elevator in the world is at Jersey City, erected by the Pennsylvania railway company. It is 145 feet wide, 200 feet long, and has a capacity for storing 1,500,000 bushels of grain. The building has twenty-four sets of elevating apparatus for taking grain from cars, and four "conveyors" run from the building to the wharf for unloading canal boats and loading ships.

In the excavations made for the widening of the bed of the Tiber, many interesting archaeological discoveries, in the way of Roman relics, were made. A perfect statue of a Roman matron was found, and close by, another statue of Tiberius, the latter being broken in several places. Urns, decorated with reliefs of fruits and flowers, of fine workmanship, and many other articles, unique and ancient were also discovered.

According to Professor Tyndall's definition, the brain is the organized register of infinitely numerous experiences received during the evolution of life, or rather during the evolution of that series of organism through which the human organism has been reached; the effect of the most uniform and frequent of these experiences has been successfully bequeathed, principal and interest, and have slowly mounted to that high intelligence which lies latent in the brain of the infant.

The important work of connecting the system of triangulation, covering western Europe and Northern Africa, was successfully consummated, by powerful electric lights being placed at a high elevation on mountains of the British Islands, France, Spain and Algeria. Thus these countries were united into one grand system of triangles, reaching from the Sahara to the northermost of the Shetland Islands, giving a meridian arc of 27 degrees, the greatest hitherto measured on the earth.

The result of experiments extending through a period of two months, on the influence of the electric light on the growth of plants, has been reported to the Royal Society of London. It is shown that plants do not require any rest during the twenty-four hours, but that their growth may be materially quickened by giving them the benefit of the electric light at night. A light equal to 1,000 candles, at a distance of 6 or 7 feet from the growing plants, appeared to be equal in effect to average daylight at this season of the year.

The Road to Poverty.

Be a "clever fellow." It is the nicest thing in the world. While your money lasts, all the dead-beats will laugh with you, and as soon as it is gone they will laugh at you, which makes quite a difference, as you will find.

If you do not like this plan, or have not money enough to follow it successfully, you can attain the same end by loafing around waiting for something to turn up. This will take some time longer, but then you can afford to wait for starvation. If you want to hurry up matters, you can waste a good deal of money on tobacco and cigars, and to some extent injure your health.

But the great specific that rarely fails to bring not only poverty, but also crime, disease and shame, is to drink intoxicating liquors. It does not matter how you begin; consult your own taste as to that. Wine, cider, beer, whisky, it is all one—no matter where you begin, you will end with gin or whisky and the gutter.

This plan has many and peculiar advantages. As soon as you are known to be in the habit of taking intoxicating liquors, no matter how small the quantity, men will begin to suspect you, and in a short time will cease to trust you, and then if you have not already accumulated property, you cannot. So, as you will have more time, you can drink more, go down faster and faster, and in a few years die a pauper.

Fusing Metals Without Fire.

Jacob Beese, of Pittsburgh, Pa., puts forth some remarkable claims in regard to an alleged new discovery in metallurgy. He says he is able to melt instantly a bar of cast steel one inch in diameter—which cannot be fused in less than five minutes in the highest furnace heat attainable—simply by throwing against it a column of air having a velocity of 25,000 feet a minute. The instant the air touches the metal, fusion takes place. He says further:

"By furnace heat it requires many hours, and sometimes many days, to anneal metals. By a recent discovery which I have made, I can anneal bars of iron or steel at the rate of one foot per second, thus increasing the ductility of the metal 100 per cent, without the use of other fuel than that contained in the metal itself. I simply unlock the occlude (latent) heat. It becomes sensible and enlarges the metal, and by the method of doing this the enlargment is made permanent, that is, it does not contract to its original limit.

Now, annealing and fusing iron and steel in one second of time may seem absurd, but it is nevertheless a fact, and reduced to practical utility in the arts."

The above may be true, and it may not. In either case, it strikes us that Jacob is giving us considerable "wind."

A Physician of Great Prominence in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

The only absolute specific we know of for sneezing, snuffing and choking catarrh or head colds is Sanford's Radical Cure, which for the small sum of $1 affords instant relief and invariably cures.—Medical Times.

Across the Atlantic.

Those who are anxious to know the distance, in nautical miles, between some of the principal seaboard cities and Liverpool, will find the following figures upon the subject, from the New York Journal of Commerce, satisfactory. The distance between New York and Liverpool, says that paper, by the most direct route, is as follows:

"From New York to Sandy Hook about 20 miles; from Sandy Hook to Cape Race, 1,000 miles; from Cape Race to Cape Clear, 1,713 miles; from Cape Clear to Queenstown, 60 miles; from Queenstown to Liverpool, 240 miles. Total, 3,033 miles. By the route adopted by the steamers of the White Star line on the outward trip hence to Liverpool, the distance traveled is 3,145 miles. From Liverpool to New York, by their shortest route, the same steamer makes the distance 3,040. From Cape May to Liverpool, the distance, by direct route, is 3,074 miles, viz.: From Cape May to Cape Race, 1,061 miles; from Cape Race to Liverpool, (as above,) 2,013. The distance from Philadelphia to Cape May, in a straight line, is 62 miles, but by the routes taken by the pilots it is given at 75 miles, which, added to the above, makes the total distance from Philadelphia to Liverpool 3,149 miles. The steamers of the American line, on their outward trip from Philadelphia, pursue a route of about 3,300 miles in length, and on the return trip make about 75 miles less. From Baltimore to Liverpool, the most direct route gives a distance of 3,272 viz: From Baltimore to Cape Charles, about 140 miles; Cape Charles to Cape Race, 1,119 miles; Cape Race to Liverpool, 2,013 miles. As there is no regular line running from Baltimore for Liverpool direct, we are unable to give the exact length of the course which they might pursue, but the same conditions which cause the vessels of the New York and Philadelphia lines to run to the southward of the direct course, thereby lengthening the trip, would apply in case of the Baltimore steamers, and the same relative difference would ensue."

Which Pays Best?

How often do we hear farmers ask this question: Which will pay me best, cattle or sheep? Now, there is much difference of opinion on this question. Those that keep cattle claim that they are the most profitable, and those that keep sheep think the same of their flocks. I claim that sheep are the most profitable, and I will try and prove it to your readers. Take, for instance, a two year old steer, weighing 1,000 pounds, worth 4 cents per pound, or $40. What is the cost of raising to that age?

First year to milk, grain and hay $12; one summer's pasture, $4; six months feeding hay or grain, $16; making a total cost of $32. This is a very low estimate; everything is down to the lowest notch.

Now you see that it has cost $32 dollars to raise this calf. Subtract his keeping from what he sold for, and you have the profit of 8 dollars. This is counting nothing for your trouble, allowing the manure to balance that.

Now for the sheep. It will cost to raise and keep eight lambs until they are one year old, for pasture, hay and grain, $12; for one year more for hay and grain, $20; making their total cost from birth until two years old, $32. Now for the other side. Eight head of sheep weighing 125 pounds per head, making one thousand pounds at 4 cts per pound, is $40. Two clips of wool, sixteen fleeces, weighing five pounds per fleece, makes eighty pounds of wool; at thirty-two cents per pound, $25.60. Now take the $40 that the sheep sold for, and you have $65.60 as total receipts. Subtract cost from this and you have $33.60 profit on eight sheep against $8 profit on the steer, both weighing the same at same age, and both costing the same for keep, leaving a balance of $25.60 in favor of sheep, showing clearly that it is better to keep sheep than cattle, especially where we have small farms. I think that this estimate is correct, taking prices in this neighborhood as a basis.—Practical Farmer.

Intoxication Among French Children.

Sylvanus Urban, in the Gentleman's Magazine, says: "I shall, I doubt not, startle not a few of my readers when I state that during a recent visit to France I have frequently seen French children intoxicated. Strange as such an assertion may seem, I deliberately make it and stand by it. Again and again at tables d'hotes I have seen children scarcely more than babies suffering distinctly from alcohol. It is, as travelers in France know, the custom in all districts south of the Loire to supply wine gratis at two meals, breakfast and dinner, at which the residents in a hotel eat in company. Repeatedly then, in the hotels in French watering places, I have watched children of five years old and upward supplied by their mothers with wine enough visibly to flush and excite them. At Sables d'Olonde one little fellow, whose age could not be more than six, drank at each of two consecutive meals three tumblers of wine slightly diluted with water. The result was on each occasion that he commenced to kiss his mother, proceeded to kiss the person on the other side of him, continued by sprawling over the table, and ended by putting his head in his mother's lap and falling asleep. It never seems to enter into the mind of a Frenchwoman that water may be drank at a meal. When long journeys by rail are taken, there is always in the neat basket in which the French mother carries provisions a bottle of wine or wine and water, out of which those of her children who have passed the stage of absolute infancy are allowed to drink. I can, indeed, say with truth that in the course of a pretty long series of observations of the French, chiefly made, I admit, in public vehicles and hotels, I have hardly, if ever, seen a glass of cold water, unqualified with admixture, quaffed by a native. It is now the fashion to mistrust water, even when blended with wine, for which purpose the various springs of Eau St. Galmier are largely employed."

"The Domestic Tyrant."

"The average man," quoth Mrs. Pardington, "is a weak and irritable domestic tyrant," and Mrs. P. is correct. Tyrannical to a fault the average man will enter the blissful paradise of a happy home, scratch himself in fiendish glee, send the baby into convulsions, and for what? Why, because he has the Itching Piles, and is too mean to buy Swayne's Ointment, which is an infallible cure for the worst cases of that annoying complaint.

Women as Physicians.

The earliest records of the world's history bear testimony to occasional instances of successful practice of medicine by women. Mythology corroborates the current belief in woman's capacity for this career by ascribing to the Egyptian Isis the duty of watching over the health of the human species and the discovery of several drugs. Among the Romans, Juno Lucina presided over childbirth and hastened delivery. Hygieia, the daughter of Esculapius, and Ocyroe, the daughter of Chiron, were learned in medicine. Esculapius is portrayed as followed by a multitude of both sexes who dispensed his benefits. As early as the eleventh century before Christ there existed in Egypt a college for physicians, who seem to have been of the sacerdotal caste, and were certainly of both sexes. The Iliad and Odyssey both refer to women skilled in the science of medicine; among the Greeks, Olympus of Thebes, Aspasia and Agnodice were pre-eminent for their ability and medical writings. The skill of Agnodice is said to have been such as to have brought about the legal opening to all free born women of the state. Phænarete, the mother of Socrates, was a midwife. Between the eleventh and the thirteenth centuries several women acquired widespread renown as teachers in the great school of Salerno. In succeeding centuries many female physicians held professional chairs in the universities of Italy, especially that of Bologna. In this university, about the middle of the eighteenth century, "there was an Anna Morandi Mazzolini, whose husband held the chair of anatomy. It happened that he fell ill, and she, being a loving wife, sought to supply to him the place of his enfeebled powers. So she became an anatomist, and presently delivered lectures for him from behind a curtain. She became famous, and was offered a chair at Milan, which, however, she refused, and remained at Bologna till her death, in 1774. Her anatomical models in wax are the pride of the anatomical museum at Bologna."

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C. A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

MIXED SPICES.—It is very convenient to keep a quantity of mixed spices constantly on hand for seasoning. The following quantities will make enough to last a long time: half an ounce each of thyme, marjoram and sweet basil and a quarter of an ounce of bay leaves, all of which must be well dried; one ounce each of cloves and white pepper corns and quarter ounce each of mace and nutmeg. Pound the spices; inclose them in a tight tin or wooden box and lay in a warm place until perfectly dry. Pound fine, put through a sieve and cork tightly. A pinch of this powder is a great addition to soups, gravies and stews.

TO FRESHEN MEAT OR FISH.—Buttermilk is best, and sour milk the next best, for freshening beef, pork or fish, and will preserve beef for several hours. Soak salt fish for eighteen hours in buttermilk, with perhaps one quart of water; change every six hours. In freshening always put the skin side up so the salt can have a chance to settle to the bottom of the dish. If you have beef, either fresh or corned, that is tainted, soak the same as fish, boil an hour or so, throw away the water and put in fresh to finish. When it comes to the table you will be surprised that so good a dish was made out of such poor material.

SELECT LIST OF LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

An advertiser who spends upwards of $5,000 a year, and who invested less than $350 of it in this List, writes: "Your Select Local List paid me better last year THAN ALL THE OTHER ADVERTISING I DID."

IT IS NOT A CO-OPERATIVE LIST.

IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.

IT IS AN HONEST LIST.

The catalogue states exactly what the papers are. When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST.—When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.

The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single States ranges from $2 to $80. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $625. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,980.14. The list includes 952 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 363 places of over 5,000 population, and 468 County Seats. For copy of List and other information, address GEO. P. Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often, though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

The surgeon general of the navy has in charge a case very similar to that of the president. For the past six weeks the patient has been kept alive by beef extract and brandy. The leader was captured, in a wounded condition, and a posse is pursuing the other murderers.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

THE LONG TALK ENDED.

The final Indian conference took place at the interior department Friday. Secretary Kirkwood refused Little Chief's request to be allowed to return to the Red Cloud agency with 400 of his people, but decided that Little Chief and the men who left with him to go to Indian territory might return to Red Cloud's protection.

GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS.

Judge Lawrence, the first comptroller of the treasury, has rendered a decision in which he maintains that if a contract with the government is sold by the contracting party, the contract itself is annulled, and that any person or party selling such a contract runs the risk of obtaining no pay. The opinion is based on the ground that the original contractor in such an event does not perform the service, and the purchaser of a contract violates existing law.

FOREIGN AMERICAN MAIL BAGS.

The Canadian post-office department has been placed in a very unpleasant position by the discovery of the wholesale use and appropriation of United States mail bags. The department officials acknowledge that they have been caught napping, but state that precautions have been taken to preclude its recoccurrence. Orders have been given for the peremptory return of all United States bags, which were in such general use that some difficulty has been found in transmitting mails since their withdrawal.

THE GARFIELD FUND.

With reference to the Garfield fund, originated by the chamber of commerce, Cyrus W. Field said, this afternoon: "If the president should die, the whole of the $350,000 which was proposed to be subscribed for Mrs. Garfield and family would be forthcoming. About two-thirds of the amount is already pledged, and the remaining third could be promptly secured." Even if the president should survive Mr. Field says he does not intend to abandon the plan of securing the full $350,000, as it is well known that a large sum of money will be needed to pay the doctors' bills and other heavy expenses attending a long, serious illness.

YORKTOWN CENTENNIAL.

The Yorktown centennial commission and citizens of Washington and Baltimore, have decided to entertain guests in Baltimore on Oct. 10, 11, and 12, and in Washington on Oct. 13, 14, and 15. It is expected there will be twenty guests from the French government, and that France will send over one or two of her large war vessels with troops. They will arrive about the 5th of October. The commissioners decided to issue joint letters of invitation to the French guests, inviting them to attend several entertainments. Arrangements have been made with all the leading lines of railroads and steamboat lines east of the Mississippi for half rate tickets to cover three points, Yorktown, Washington and Baltimore.

SENATOR BECK.

In an interview with Senator Beck, of Kentucky, with reference to the course of the democrats in case of the death of President Garfield, the senator said: "It would be a time when love of country should rise above all party questions. As to my own course, I would be in favor of the election of some conservative republican, say Henry B. Anthony, of Rhode Island, to the position of president pro tem. of the same, of the senate, and thus avoid any inducement for any insane or political fanatic to desire the death of Mr. Arthur. In such a contingency that would be a graceful recognition of the fact that under the great calamity which had befallen the nation, the intensity of party spirit and the eagerness for spoils were for the time forgotten."

SUNDRY NOTES.

The attorney general has given a decision in favor of Gen. Hazen as against Gen. Sherman, concerning the rights of the signal corps officers under the law.

The national board of health says to health and quarantine officers: "All vessels from ports liable to infectious or contagious diseases, especially those in which yellow fever prevails or is likely to occur, should be subjected to the most rigid examination, and be regarded as suspected vessels, unless provided with a bill of health showing strict compliance with all the requirements of our law. No vessel should be allowed to discharge her cargo until every precaution has been taken to prevent the introduction of contagious or infectious diseases into the United States."

THE GUARD'S FEARS.

An official of the jail is authority for the following statement: On Friday Guiteau asked Warden Crocker, to have the cell he (Guiteau) now occupies made more secure from any attempt upon his life. What he desired—even demanded—was that iron shields or shutters be put up at his window and doors, with bolts upon the inside. Guiteau added he believed most of the jail officials and army officers surrounding the jail were his friends, and he did not fear any attack upon his life by them; but, owing to the position of his cell, persons on the outside had ample opportunity, if they were so inclined, to fire at him through his window, which looks out upon the street. He seems to have got an inkling of the president's critical condition, and is fearful that his life will be taken by some one shooting at him through this window. He also asked to have a piece of manilla rope about ten feet long, and one-quarter inch thick, adding at the same time, "You need not think that I want to commit suicide, for I have no idea of taking my own life. I merely want to protect myself." This same official says during the past two weeks Guiteau has tried very hard to impress his keepers that he is gradually becoming insane.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

The chief of the bureau of statistics, in his first monthly statement for the current fiscal year of imports and exports, reports that the excess of exports of merchandise was as follows:

Month ending July 31, 1881	$ 19,699,460
Month ending July 31, 1880	13,713,587
Twelve months ending July 31, 1881	256,691,591
Twelve months ending July 31, 1880	171,759,150

The excess of exports or of imports of gold and silver coin and bullion was as follows:

Month ending July 31, 1881 (excess of exports)	$ 177,222
Month ending July 31, 1881 (excess of imports)	334,415

The total values of imports of merchandise during the twelve months ended July 31, 1881, were $683,972,221, and during the previous twelve months, $637,724,475. The total values of exports of merchandise for the twelve months ended July 31, 1881, were $855,722,371; twelve months ended July 30, 1881, $834,416,066.

THE MESCALERO INDIANS.

Agent Llewellyn, from the Mescalero agency, New Mexico, under date of Aug. 29, telegraphs the commissioner of Indian affairs as follows: "Designing persons have scattered broadcast infamous lies concerning the Indians of this agency; that all but myself had been massacred, and that the Indians have gone on the war-path. There is not a particle of truth in the report. A detachment of troops under a non-commissioned officer is regularly stationed here, and at the time the worst rumors were flying two companies of United States cavalry were patroling the reservation. One company in command of Capt. Cusack, of the 9th cavalry, passed directly through the agency, visited the Indian camp satisfied were that all was right, and secured the service as guide of Chief Rolan Chiqui, whom the Santa Fe papers reported as being on the war path. I assure the department that all the Indians under my charge evince no disposition to leave."

Commissioner Price, of the Indian bureau, says: "So far as can be ascertained, the depredations and outrages about which so much has been said to have been committed by roving bands of Indians not on the reservation, and there is good reason to suppose there are some lawless white men among these roving Indians."

CALLED FIVE PER CENT. BONDS.

The following notice to holders of called bonds has been issued by the treasury department.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY, WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Notice is hereby given that the department will redeem, upon presentation without rebate of interest, outstanding 5 per cent. registered bonds (funded loan of 1881) embraced in the 15th call, maturing Oct. 1 next. Parties transmitting bonds for redemption should address them to the "Secretary of the Treasury, Loan Division, Washington, D. C.," and all bonds included in this notice should be assigned to the "Secretary of the Treasury, for redemption." Where checks in payment are desired in favor of anyone but the payee, the bonds should be assigned to the "Secretary of the Treasury, for redemption for account of ——." (Here insert name of person or persons to whose order check should be made payable.)

WILLIAM WINDOM, Secretary.

The secretary of the treasury, upon being asked why payment of 5 per cent bonds maturing Oct. 1 had been anticipated, stated that it had been customary to anticipate such payments more or less when the treasury had ample means for that purpose, rather than to let money lie idle in the treasury, to be paid out all at once in large amounts. Under the present notice it is not expected that any large amount will be presented at once, but that payment of bonds will be extended through the remainder of this and perhaps all of next month. Payment of these bonds is the last act in the plan by which loans have been continued at a reduced rate of interest, and the secretary is anxious to have the transactions closed as soon as practicable.

THE VICE PRESIDENT.

"In order to relieve the public mind from any fear which may exist that the government will suffer serious detriment from the inability of the president to discharge the duties of his office, we deem it proper to make this suggestion: If it should be necessary during the illness of the chief magistrate, to have any executive appointment made requiring personal participancy or the signature of the president, the cabinet could, under warrant of the constitution and of common sense invite the vice president to perform that duty or affix the necessary signature. Should the vice president thus act he would not be president. He would not cease to be vice president, but he would be the acting president for the time and the proper mode of signing an executive paper would be 'Chester A. Arthur, vice president and acting president.' It is true there is no law providing any tribunal to officially determine and declare when a president labors under such 'inability' as to require the vice president to act in his stead. But the request of the president's constitutional advisers, the heads of departments, would be ample notice to the vice president that his services were required. He would have no occasion to take an oath of office, for he would not change his office. There could not be two presidents at one time. The vice president, then acting, would be simply discharging the duties of president, as the chief magistrate of a state or a second officer of an association or corporation discharges his duties in acting for his superior when that official is absent. This is plain sense, and as we have intimated, is the true intent and meaning of fundamental law. We can see no objection to the adoption of this simple plan should the president's illness continue."

A PLAN TO LYNCH AND TORTURE GUITEAU.

C. C. Corkhill, United States district attorney for the district of Columbia, says he is fully aware of the existence of a secret organization in Washington city, whose purpose, in the event of Garfield's death, is to break the jail and put an immediate end to the life of the assassin Guiteau. He says it is intended to hang Guiteau by a slow process, and in the meantime each member of the organization is to be allowed to put a bullet in his body, taking care not to strike him in any vital point until the last possible moment. The colonel says he has good reasons for the belief that the guards of the jail, who are all of them ex-union soldiers, know of this secret organization, and are in sympathy with it. He says that it has been with the utmost difficulty that the warden of the jail has prevented these guards, long ere this, from finding some excuse to kill Guiteau. This explains the encounter he went upward and Guiteau, which took place in the latter's cell recently. The assassin knows he guards want to kill him, and for that reason has suffered great mental anguish. Since the first relapse of the president he is so nervous that he gets little or no sleep. The colonel says that while he believes that no torture too great can be visited on Guiteau, he sees that the law is obeyed which protects him and secures the man a fair trial before a jury of his countrymen. He says it would never do to go to the world that in the capital of the nation the officers of the law were unable to enforce its mandates, and were at the mercy of a mob. All that will be necessary to secure the jail from the interference of a mob will be a battery of artillery. There are now three batteries of United States artillery stationed at the arsenal in Washington, and about two hundred marines at the navy-yard.

CAPTAIN HOWGATE.

Col. Wm. A. Cook, as special attorney for the government, in behalf of the United States, has entered civil suit against Capt. H. W. Howgate to recover $101,257. Writs of attachment were issued and placed in the marshal's hands, and his deputies seized all the real and personal property belonging to defendant. The suit is based upon affidavits by A. B. Newcomb and Louis V. Cazari. They state that investigation has developed that defendant has unlawfully drawn from the United States treasury, on checks, and appropriated to his own use, the sum mentioned. They believe further investigation will disclose further large sums taken by Howgate; that he has, with full knowledge of these facts, and while investigation is still going on, suddenly and without declaring any business or reason for leaving, left the District without indicating how long he will remain or if he ever will return. They believe Capt. Howgate intended to dispose of his real estate in the District so as to defeat the just demands made against him. The checks on which money was unlawfully drawn are: Nov. 11, 1878, in favor of the American Telegraph company, or order, 409.09 dol.; Nov. 18, 1878, in favor of the Western Union Telegraph company, or order, on account of L. Adrian Times: Thomas E. Johns, who was assaulted some time last March by Homer Andrews, was at court yesterday and is now almost well. Andrews confessed the whole thing to Johns, and told him that one Wm. Nowland, who was then in the employ of Austin N. Kuner, aided him in performing the deed. Andrews wants his sentence made shorter if he gives up the money.

Adrian Times: While Johnnie Bowerfind, a fourteen year old son of Charles Bowerfind, was pouring a cup of hot coffee in his father's bakery today, another clerk picked some paper from under the counter before the boy and in turning around, struck the cup in such a way as to spill the boiling liquid all over one side of the boy's face and neck, scalding him very badly.

Deerfield Record: Lulu, the 17-months old baby of Mr. & Mrs. Mart Irish, while playing on the stoop in front of A. A. Aiken's residence, last Sunday, fell through the railing and down to the sidewalk, a distance of about twelve feet, striking upon its stomach, and knocking nearly all the wind out of its little body. In less than ten minutes it was running round again, seemingly none the worse for its aerial flight. We understand the baby has fallen down twice before, and is probably getting used to it by this time. We challenge the county to produce its equal.

IN this colicky season the example of one of our rural friends is worthy of imitation. He is very fond of cucumbers, watermellons, muskmellons and other internal commotion producers, and on being asked the other day if he was not afraid that the stuff he was eating would disagree with him said: "Oh no, you see I go prepared," at the same time taking out of his pocket a box of pills.

THE Manchester Enterprise man is a firm believer in watermelons. He thinks they posses curative virtues also. Hear what he says: "Watermelon contains about 85 per cent. of the purest of water, and a trace of the purest sugar, and nothing has been discovered that furnishes so speedy a 'cure' for summer complaint as watermelon and nothing else. Even when diarrhœa has been kept up by continued eating of ordinary food, until the disease has become chronic, this delicious beverage—for it is little more—watermelon, taken freely two or three times a day, has again and again been known to work wonders, and to cure when the usual remedies have failed."

LIEUT. HENRY ROMEYN who has been on duty at Hampton University during the absence of the president and principal in Europe, and also awaiting the arrival of his successor, has been invited to remain until Oct. 15th, to assist in the organization of the school for the ensuing year. Reasons—Acquaintance with the school and its needs, and experience as an instructor and commandant.

AN interview with a farmer, one day this week, elicited the fact that pasturage in this vicinity was rendered worthless by the drouth. The grass appears in good condition but contains no substance or nourishment. The high price of butter is owing to this fact. One lady who prides herself on making only first class butter refuses to sell at any price, as she considers the butter made under existing circumstances necessarily inferior, and fears that she might lose more from the sale of poor butter than she would gain.

HASKINS VS. MUSSER.

A Scandal for Tecumseh once more.

James Haskins and Frank Musser both live or have lived in Brownville in quite close proximity to each other and their families have been quite intimate with each other for some two years past, the two men particularly having been quite good friends and aiding each other with their work, and in various other ways, but of late Haskins has seemed to take more particular notice of Musser's wife than of Musser himself, in fact Musser's family seemed to be much more pleasant for him than his own, and he spent most of his time there. Musser seemed well enough pleased that Haskins should have such a brotherly feeling for himself and family, and then they both attended the same church and it was pleasant to be neighborly and sociable, and that the families should have good times together, until last Saturday, Haskins bethought himself of a more perfect plan to promote this fast growing friendship, so after getting Musser to take his place in the paper mill for the afternoon on pretense of going to Adrian after some horse medicine, he went up and got Mrs. Musser to go and help him carry home the medicine, and in short, they both skipped on the P. M. train for parts unknown. Haskins leaves a wife and three small children in a destitute condition, and Mrs. Musser leaves Musser with two small children. Musser is now investing in revolvers to shoot both of them, and we think the Brownville boys will take care of Haskins should he again show up in these parts. Musser can safely say "thank God, I am rid of such a woman," but what kind of a man must he be who will desert a wife and three small children. No earthly punishment could be mean enough for him. Both families attend the Baptist church and we venture to say that our Baptist people will see that Mrs. Haskins and her children do not suffer, their good neighbors in Brownville having already attended to her immediate wants.

ATTENTION TEACHERS.

The County Board of School Examiners, through their secretary C. D. West have announced the following schedule of examinations for the school year, viz:

1881, Sept. 3, Adrian (High School Room.)
" " 10, Adrian.
" Oct. 28, "
" Nov. 5, "
" " 19, "
1882, Mar. 11, Tecumseh;
" " 31, Adrian.
" Apr. 2, Hudson.
" " 22, Morenci.
" " 29, Blissfield.
" Aug. 19, Adrian.

I would advise all desirous of teaching during the coming year to preserve this schedule for reference. The new school law is an experiment. In order to make it successful the hearty co-operation of all interested in public education is necessary.

CHARLES E. CONLEY,
Chairman of Tecumseh Township Board of School Inspectors.

Tecumseh, Aug. 30, 1881.

In connection with the above we will state, for those interested, that a letter from Prof. E. G. Walker conveys this information: All certificates given prior to July 1st, are good for the time given. All given after that date up to Aug. 2d, will be valid for three months only.

THE boss hunter. Mr. Samuel P. Sherman, of Caro, Tuscola co., is the boss hunter of Michigan. He lived in Oakland Co. 25 years and killed 800 deer and 6 wolves, for which latter he got $18 each, bounty included. At Indian Plains, where he removed, he purchased a farm of 1000 acres, the site where Caro, capitol of Tuscola Co. was situated, and has shot within these precincts 60 deer, 3 wolves and 2 black bears. At both places he killed over 300 wild turkeys, in the same period.

MR. A. MCNEIL is canvassing for a a new illustrated edition of the revised new testament, with notes by the Abbotts. This is the best work of the kind we have yet seen, and the price is remarkably low for a book so well printed and bound, being only $3,00 and $2.50. Mr. McNeil has the townships of Tecumseh, Raisin, Franklin and Clinton to canvass and will call on every family in these towns at an early day.

THE President has successfully passed another crisis, and hope in his final recovery is again revived. Last Friday his condition was so critical that the attending surgeons gave him up. On Saturday he was slightly better, and he has been slowly but steadily improving ever since. He is still a very sick man, but the chances now seem probable for his ultimate recovery.

HARRY LEE has purchased the Baxter stock of boots and shoes. The little old man will tell the story soon.

INTERESTING FEATURES OF THIS YEAR'S COUNTY FAIR.

We are pleased to note a new feature in the exhibition at our county fair this fall, viz: the "merchant's display." Messrs Allen Beach and J. H. Warren, of this city, are the commissioners in charge.

We learn from Secretary Mann, that the executive committee has decided to take the fruits, vegetables, dairy products, &c., &c., out of Floral Hall, and use what has been known as Mechanic's Hall, for the display of these articles. This will give almost the entire space in that large building, to the merchants of the county, and we believe no better occasion could be afforded for exhibiting samples of the goods and wares of the rival dealers. We earnestly hope to see Blissfield, Tecumseh, Hudson and Morenci, all represented in good style; and, with the numerous stocks of this city to draw from, Floral Hall should become one of the most beautiful and attractive places ever shown in this county.

The gentlemen in charge of this department, are men of experience and taste, and will no doubt, with their counsel, assist to decorate the hall in a manner that must excel anything ever gotten up at a county fair.

The people are to be the judges, as will be seen by the premium list, and will decide by a vote during the fair, as to who has made the finest display of all the exhibitors.

This certainly must prove one of the most effectual means of advertising ever offered our dealers. Their representatives will be present to show goods, to solicit votes and to make the acquaintance of new customers from all parts of the county. To the dealer who receives the most votes the society will award its diploma.

The secretary wishes us to say that if those merchants who desire to exhibit, will communicate with him by postal card he will, at an early date, before the fair, set a day when he, with his two commissioners, will meet them at his office and perfect all the details of the arrangement, and the commissioner will assign each his allotted space in the hall, so that sufficient time may be had to put it in shape, and decorate to suit the taste and wishes of the exhibitor.—Adrian Record.

Adrian Record: Mr. Joseph Hagaman died at his residence in Morenci Saturday last, at half past five o'clock, of Bright's disease. Mr. Hagaman came to Michigan in 1841, and settled in Medina on a farm on section 26, he located in 1834. He followed farming successfully until 1861, when he moved into the village of Morenci, and has resided there ever since. He engaged in the mercantile business in the village, and continued until 1865. He did his share in improving the village being interested in the erection of a brick block there. He also erected a very fine residence. He was a successful, prompt and honorable business man, industrious, energetic and social. He was born in Varick, Seneca county, N. Y., March 18, 1811, and was twice married. His present wife was the widow of Franklin Cawley, the founder of the village of Morenci.

ELEGANT CARDS.—John A. Haddock, 914 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., the original wholesale card manufacturer, is sending out for the benefit of card collectors, $5 packages of 1538 elegant cards, which he will mail postpaid to any address for 25 cts. additional. He will also furnish complete sets of samples of all the series which he sells, for 35 cents; comprising over 100 neat cards—as well as a finer box of 104 elegant cards, for 50 cents, postage paid. This is an excellent opportunity to increase one's stock, as Mr. Haddock's designs are many and extremely beautiful. Postage stamps may be sent.

WE have received from the publisher, F. W. Helmick, 180 Elm st., Cincinnati, O., a beautiful song and chorus entitled "God Bless the Little Woman." Immediately after President Garfield was shot, he dictated a telegram to his wife, informing her of the sad occurrence, remarking in the most affectionate manner, to those beside him, "God bless the little woman," etc. From this is founded the words of the song. Send 35 cents to the publisher and receive a copy.

DIED.

MILHOLAND—In Raisin, August 17, 1881, Ella J., daughter of John and Etta A. Milholand, aged six years, nine months and two days.

UNDERWOOD—Mrs. Eliza Underwood, wife of William Underwood, died in Ridgeway, Lenawee county, Aug. 23d, 1881, in the 37th year of her age.

Mrs. Underwood leaves a husband and nine children and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss. It is a consolation to her friends to know she was conscious to the last, and gave directions concerning her funeral, chosing her pall-bearers, and the hymns she wished to have sung. The funeral was held at the Christian church, East Ridgeway, conducted by Elder Geo. Price, of Tecumseh, assisted by Rev. Fields, of Ridgeway, and the Rev. C. C. Sink, pastor of the Christian church. Rev. Thos. Lupton, who officiated at her marriage, made a few remarks.

CHARLES—Died on the morning of Aug. 24, 1881, at Wm. M. Lambs, near Rollin, Mich., William Henry, son of Dr. H. Charles, of Carthage, Ind., and Olive A. Charles, (the latter deceased.)

He was born in Wayne county, Ind., on the 20th of Feb., 1855, being 26 yrs., 6 mo. and 4 days old. He was educated in the tenets of the Orthodox Society of Friends, and took upon himself the obligations of a christian life before he was thirteen years old. In his fourteenth year very serious afflictions came upon him. After an illness of three months his precious mother passed on to the better land. During all this weary time he also had lain at the gates of death. While they were thus sick a number of meetings for social worship was held in the house. It was in these, and under this fiery baptism of trial that his ministry commenced. There are some souls who, neither on earth nor in heaven, will ever forget it. Several persons professed conversion at his bedside. Most of these and some of them as young as himself have passed the portals of death, and were already there to greet his coming to the fair clime of eternal day.

He was recorded a minister of the gospel by Fairmount Grant co., Indiana, of Friends, in Grant co. About the while yet in his 20th year, to Tecumseh to live. He was a pupil in Raisin Valley Seminary nearly two years. Too close application to study here brought on some nervous troubles causing him to leave school. He still continued to preach to the Friends of this vicinity, and remained mostly there until early in the present year, when he went to Rollin in this county, where he took pastoral charge of two congregations of Friends in that vicinity. His preaching was clear and forcible. He taught with great emphasis that to be a christian means holiness of heart and life. Death found him where he had so long and so faithfully lived, closely engaged about his Master's business. His right side was paralyzed early in his sickness, and he also lost the power of speech at the same time. But before this he had expressed a desire to live that he might do more and better work for the Lord. "But, if I die," he said, "it is all right, I praise the Lord for all his mercies to me."

At another time, when in great suffering, and also nearly the last words spoken before he was paralyzed, he said, "what a grand thing it is to be happy through it all." For over two weeks his paralyzed tongue failed to tell the love to God and to men which filled his heart, but his eyes seemed to assume added expression and to speak what he could not utter.

In the moment of death, with his left hand he placed his helpless right hand upon his breast and then laid the other down by it, and so passed away, as we reverently believe, to be forever with the Lord. During his sickness every want and wish was anticipated and provided for by kind friends and neighbors. A large concourse of these sorrowing ones followed his remains to their last resting place at Adrian meeting house, where his body was committed to the grave on the afternoon of the 26th inst.

The Rising Generation.

A CONTRAST BETWEEN THE YOUTH OF THE PRESENT AND THE PAST.

If there is one thing more than another lacking in the young people of our time, it is force of character, self-reliance, courage to meet and grapple with the stern realities of life. Never, perhaps, were young people so well cared for, so well clad, so well educated in the technical sense; never was the path of life made so smooth before them; and yet there seems to be a feeling that they are wanting in the endurance, independence and force which belonged to former generations.

Education, so called, seems to be alienating the rising race from manual labor, and even from skilled mechanical pursuits. What to do with our sons and daughters when they leave school is a problem pressing very heavily on many minds.

But too few of the rising generation—of the male sex we are speaking—show that self-reliance and sterling manliness which characterized the younger days of our merchant princes and men of means, who started with nothing, who really faced the world, and were often footsore, hungry and roofless; who ashamed to be dependent upon "the old folks," left their homes, not knowing whither they went, with a staff in one hand, and a little bundle of coarse, but cleanly linen in the other, and who are now the owners of houses, lands, and those much abused but very desirable "bonds."

In other days young people had to "rough it." They not only had to go to school, but had to get up very early in the morning, just when the sun was peeping over the tops of the hills, and in the winter before its rosy face could be seen; they had to milk the cows, and saw the wood, and weed the onions, and fetch the water from the well; and very likely they had too hard a time of it, and too little frolic and fun. Still one cannot help thinking that such physical exercise as these tasks involved was a good antidote to the confinement and studies of the school, and was possibly a better training for all the practical purposes of life than base ball clubs and croquet parties; and it may well be that in rebelling and protesting—as it is right that we should—against the harsh old way of bringing children up, we have swung around to the opposite extreme, and are in danger of coddling the young people so much, of smoothing their way and making things so easy for them, that they will be like those puny and delicate but hansome oaks which we are told the Chinese raise in pots, in their hot houses, instead of like those sturdy trees that stand exposed to all the storms that blow.

Does the fault lie with the young ones? Who cannot see that parental indulgence, forethought and care, carried to excess are sure to make children inefficient and weak? There are many instances of parents who have immolated themselves on the alter of love, who by their very kindness and self-denial have made their offspring extremely selfish, exacting, and idle. They have acted on the principle that nothing could be too good and no way too easy for a child, that no rough breeze must ever strike his cheek, and that he must be saved from all unpleasant tasks.

Parents wear themselves out, deny themselves, and reduce their own wants to the minimum of bare existence, and succeed in making their children vain and selfish, lacking in nerve and vigor, and disqualified for those common duties which are the common lot of all.

Our first aim should be to teach our children self-reliance. Our main anxiety should not be to remove all obstacles and difficulties from their pathway, but to aid them in developing their own resources, and to encourage them to remove obstacles and overcome difficulties by and for themselves. The way must not be made too smooth, even for young and tender feet, else those feet will never be able to climb "the steep and ragged pathway" up which all noble lives must ascend. Let there be plenty of love and tenderness; let there be an abundance of light and gladness shed around our boys and girls; but let them be made early to understnad that even love itself cannot shield them from difficulties or excuse them from unpleasant and irksome tasks.

Next, in dealing with our children there should be the most careful discrimination, a painstaking anxiety to find out and cultivate their individual tastes and gifts.

A child is like a lump of clay which an artist holds in his hand, and out of which he can mold a Mephistopheles or a saint. Some take no special pains to mold this plastic human clay into lovely shapes or fine issues. John is treated exactly like Jamies, and no more consideration is shown for Mary, the sensitive, than for Clara the gay; no particular pains taken to find out the tastes, aptitudes or feelings of either. Thus great opportunities are missed, great injustice done, great pains inflicted, and the intentions of nature violated.

There is no short and easy way through life. There is no magic wand to wave away the homely, the needful and the commonplace; no slieght of hand by which we can place ourselves in perfect or ideal conditions. But the commonest tasks and lowest spheres may be beautified by engaging in them in a noble way, by realizing that the distant and the unseen are affected by the works of our hands and the words of our lips, and that all "common things," manual labors and domestic duties, rightly done, help to establish the reign of health, wholesomeness, beauty and truth in the world.

Bad Drainage.

The criminal carelessness or wilful neglect of builders in erecting houses with imperfect plumbing and bad drainage is a fruitful source of disease, and thousands are carried off annually with Malaria or Typhoid Fevers from this cause. The Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters will cure these diseases. The whole treatment for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

A Good Sermon.—Said a good lady to the preacher, as he came out of the pulpit: "You preached a good sermon to-night." "What is your standard of a good sermon?" "When a sermon makes you feel that you ought to do better, and that you feel better, I call it a good sermon." It would be hard to find a better definition than the saying of Matthew Henry: "That is a good sermon which does thee good."

Good Manners and Equal Rights.

If you pay the price of admission to a concert or any other entertainment, you have a right to the undisturbed enjoyment of that which you pay for; and persons who come tramping into the room while the entertainment is in progress, or who go tramping out before it is concluded, or by bustle and whispering prevent you from hearing what you came to hear, rob you of that which belongs to you. These persons could not, of course, steal 50 cents out of your pocket-book, but if they wilifully spoil that which has cost you 50 cents, their act is essentially larceny. Well-bred persons never do any of these things, because well-bred persons are always careful to respect the rights of others.

If you pay for one seat in a railway car, you are entitled to that one seat; but if you occupy two seats, while any decent person who has paid for one seat has no seat at all, you are simply robbing that person of what belongs to him. The writer of this not long ago saw a well-dressed lady sit for an hour and look in the face of an equally well-dressed man who stood during all that time and held a young child in his arms, because there was no vacant seat in the car, save the one in which the lady had placed some small parcels, of hers, and which she did not offer to remove. The man had paid for the seat, and it belonged to him. The lady had not paid for the seat and it did not belong to her. She would have been greatly insulted if any one had called her a robber, but what was she doing? In some way she ought to have been delicately reminded that to take what does not belong to her is not one of the rights of woman, and that it is evidence of a lack of good breeding.

You secure by the payment of a good round sum, a berth in a sleeping-car. That should entitle you to immunity from disturbance by your fellow-passengers. Unhappily, it does not always. Not long ago a train stopped at midnight in a large town at the West, where it was to remain for twenty minutes. Into the sleeping-car of that train came three passengers, two males and one female. It appears that they had just met in the station, and on entering the car they were exchanging loud greetings. They sat down in one of the sections and went on with conversation, without any lowering of their tones. The porter of the car was absent while the train waited at the station, and after he returned he seemed to be too timid to rebuke the talkers, so they kept on for the best part of an hour, talking and laughing much louder after the train started than before. The fact that there were about a dozen other passengers in that car who had purchased a right to sleep in the car, was a fact of which they were utterly oblivious. Yet these persons evidently belonged to what is called good society. Their language was grammatical, and one of the males was a clergyman.

"A Girl's Choice."

It was in a drug store of course. Al interesting incidents occur in drug stores,—that is nearly all. She was pretty, with blue eyes, and golden hair, one of those kind of beauties the poet would have called an "angel," but for the fact that a colony of pimples on her fair frontispiece precluded all thought of a celestial being. Blowing timidly to the handsome clerk, she asked for "Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases," and upon receiving it vanished like the morning dew before the Summer sun.

Making Gold Lace.

One of the most singular mecnanical operations imaginable is the making of gold wire for what is known as gold lace. The refiner first prepares a solid rod of silver about an inch in thickness; he beats this rod, applies upon the surface a sheet of gold leaf, burnishes this down, and so on, until the gold is about one-hundredth part the thickness of the silver. The rod is then subjected to a train of processes which brings it down to the state of fine wire, when it is passed through holes in a steel plate lessening step by step in diameter. The gold never deserts the silver, but adheres closely to it, and shares all its mutations; it is one hundredth part the thickness of the silver at the beginning, and it maintains the same ratio to the end. As to the thinness to which the gold-coated rod of silver can be brought, the limit depends on the delicacy of human skill. It has been calculated, however, that the gold actually placed on the very finest silver wire for gold lace is not more than one-third of one-millionth of an inch in thickness; that is, not above one-tenth the thickness of ordinary gold-leaf.

Better than Quinine. Few constitutions can stand the continuous use of quinine. It is not only a very expensive medicine, but will ultimately cause the patient to succumb to its powerful influence upon the nervous system. But if you want to get rid of Malaria and all Fevers of that nature use the Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters. The whole treatment for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

She Meant Business.—They have some queer girls in Colorado. One of them, who resides in the Cache la Poudre Valley, had been receiving the attentions of a young man for about a year, but, becoming impatient at his failure to bring matters to a crisis, she resolved to ascertain his intentions. When he next called she took him gently by the ear, lead him to a seat, and said:

"Nobby, you've bin foolin' 'round this claim fur mighty near a year, an' hev never yit shot off yer mouth on the maryin' láz. I've cottoned to yer on the square clean through, an' have stood off every other galoot that has tried ter chip in; an now I want yer to come down tu business or leave the ranche. Ef yer on the marry an' want a pard thei'll stick rite to ye till ye pass in yer checks an' the good Lord calls ye over the range, jist squeal an' we'll hitch; but ef that ain't yer game, draw out an' give some other feller a show fur his pile. Now sing yer song or skip."

He sang.

The Cyclopaedia War.

The month of July, 1881, witnesses the completion of the largest and most important literary work this country and the century have seen. It is the Library of Universal Knowledge, large type edition, in 15 large octavo volumes, containing 70 per cent more matter than Appleton's Cyclopædia, at less than one-fifth its cost, and 20 per cent more than Johnson's Cyclopædia, at a little more than one-fourth its cost.

Chambers's Encyclopædia, which forms the basis of the Library of Universal Knowledge (the last London edition of 1880 being reprinted verbatim as a portion of its contents), is the laborious product of the ripest British and European scholarship. It has developed through a century of Cyclopædia making; its various editions having been many times revised, in successive years, till it has come to be universally recognized by those competent to judge, as standing at the very front of great aggregations of knowledge, and better adapted than any other Cyclopædia for popular use. It contains such full and important information as the ordinary reader, or the careful student, is likely to seek upon about 25,000 subjects in every department of human knowledge. Chambers's Encyclopædia, however, is a foreign production, edited and published for a foreign market, and could not be expected to give as much prominence to American topics as American readers might desire. To supply these and other deficiencies a large corps of American editors and writers have added important articles upon about 15,000 topics, covering the entire field of human knowledge, bringing the whole number of titles under one alphabetical arrangement to about 40,000. Thus the work is thoroughly Americanized, and the Library of Universal Knowledge becomes at once the latest and most complete Encyclopædia in the field, at a mere fraction of the cost of any similar work which has preceded it.

Victory

For The

Revolution

$10,000 Reward

To Club Agents.

Price of the 15 volumes, complete, in extra cloth binding, $15.00. In half Russia, sprinkled edges, $20.00. In half Russia, gilt top, $22.50. In full library sheep, marbled edges, $25.00.

The superlative value and importance of this great Encyclopædia lies especially in the fact that it is brought within the reach of every one who aspires after knowledge and culture. It is really a library of universal knowledge. It brings a liberal education easily within the reach even of every plowboy of the country and apprentice boy of the city. Every farmer and every mechanic in the land owes it to himself and to his children that such a Cyclopædia shall henceforward form a part of the outfit of his home. To the professional man, and every person of intelligence in every walk of life, a Cyclopædia is a necessity.

Of course the old and wealthy publishers who have grown rich (it is said that the Appletons have made a profit of nearly two million dollars on their Cyclopædia) from the sale of their high-priced publications are not pleased that their monopolies are broken and their power overthrown. Of course the book agents and booksellers who have been used to getting from 40 to 60 per cent commission for selling these high-priced books are not so well pleased to sell the Library of Universal Knowledge on 15 per cent commission, though those who are not short-sighted discover that their own interests, after all, are identical with the interests of the people, and their real profits, in the end, are increased by the immense sales which result from meeting the people's wants. The majority of bookseller, however, are better pleased to slander than to sell this and our numerous other standard and incomparably low-priced publications. But the Literary Revolution has always looked to the people, in whose interests it is, for its patronage, and it has never looked in vain, as our more than one million volumes printed last year (this year being increased to probably more than two millions) abundantly prove. You can order the Cyclopædia directly from us, and by uniting with your neighbors and friends you can secure club rates as follows:

A discount of 10 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering at one time three or more sets of the Cyclopædia; and a discount of 15 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering five or more sets at one time.

As a special inducement to our friends and patrons to go to work promptly and vigorously, each doing what he can for the dissemination of universal knowledge, we propose to distribute $10,000 in special premiums as follows, in addition to the regular discount to clubs:

$5,000 Reward to be distributed equally among the first 500 club agents who send us clubs of not less than five subscribers, after June 15th and before September 1st.

$5,000 Reward in addition to the first $5,000 to be distributed among the 100 club agents who, during the same time, send us the largest number of subscribers, not less than twenty in number, the amount to be distributed proportionately to the whole number of subscribers which each of the 100 club agents may send us.

The names of the subscribers must in every case be forwarded to us. The first $5,000 named will be distributed as specified as rapidly as the orders are received, and the remaining $5,000 will be distributed promptly on Sept. 1st. The names of the persons receiving these rewards will be printed, with the amounts received by each, and the list sent to all the club agents entering into competition for them. Subscribers must be actual purchasers for individual use, to entitle the club agent to the rewards under this offer, and not booksellers or agents who buy to sell again.

Persons desiring to raise clubs may send to us at once for sample volumes, if they desire, in the various styles of binding, paying us 75 cents for the volume in cloth, $1.00 for the volume in half Russia, sprinkled edges, and $1.25 for the volume in library sheep. Orders for the full sets will be filled by us with the utmost promptness, within our ability to manufacture, beginning not later than July 10th, orders being filled in the order of their receipt by us.

Specimen pages of the "Library of Universal Knowledge" will be sent free upon request. Descriptive catalogue of our large list of standard publications, with terms to clubs, and illustrated pamphlet describing book-making and type-setting by steam, will be sent upon application. Remit by bank draft, money order, registered letter, or by express. Fractions of $1.00 may be sent in postage stamps.

Bay City Press: Lee DeLand is now able to be out riding every day. His recovery is one of the most remarkable in this part of the country. His skull was fractured, four bones were badly broken in his legs, he was totally insensible for thirty-five days, yet he is rapidly recovering and will be as strong and healthy as ever.

Sam Sias, of Midland has contracted with Col. Geo. Fuller to put 30,000,000 feet of logs into the Muskegon river the coming winter, for which little job he is to receive an even $100,000. Jackson Citizen, Aug. 26: A narrow escape was had to-day noon by a young lady named Francis Haymond, who works in Lusk's corset steel factory. She was crossing the tracks near the central depot to go to her residence on Pearl street, when the Saginaw train moving down the yard, caught her and the engine wheels run over her right foot, completely smashing the big toe. The other foot was bruised, but no other bones were broken. It was a narrow escape from a horrible death by being knocked down and run over.

The area of the burned district embraces over 10,000 acres. Nine hundred acres of cranberries were consumed, killing the crop for the next three years, besides large quantities of hay that was in process of curing. The fire was started by people living west of the marsh, who were taking advantage of the dry time to clear up their farms. It is proposed to find the offenders and make them suffer.

Jackson Patriot: One of the inmates of the County House, a man 75 years old, was once the owner of a well-stocked Michigan farm of 500 acres, and was considered the most substantial farmer in his neighborhood. He lost his property by speculating in pine lands, and last week was removed from a friend's house in Pulaski to the County House. He has three thrifty sons in this, Calhoun, and Hillsdale counties, respectively, and Supt. Kennedy intends writing them the facts in the case and asking them to pay for the old man's keeping, or otherwise care for him at their own houses.

The Sault Ste. Marie News gives the particulars of the sad drowning of four children of Capt. Trinchette, of the tug Antelope. The captain's family lives on the bank of a creek which empties into Hay lake, and it appears that the other day, while the mother and oldest son were absent from home the four younger children, the oldest of whom was eleven years and the youngest only three, harnessed up a dog and hitched him to a little boat in the creek. By some means the boat was upset and the children drowned. The dog made his way ashore and attracted the attention of neighbors by loud howling, but too late to resuscitate the little victims.

Speaking of the preparations for the state fair, the Jackson Citizen of last week says: "There are now 400 horse stables, 400 cattle stalls and 350 pens for sheep and swine; a neat and convenient poultry house and two carriage sheds, one open and one enclosed, each 24x196 feet; ample ticket offices and check rooms; business offices and private apartments for ladies.—The speakers' stand has been put in a convenient spot, and attached thereto are reporters' rooms, with telephone and telegraph offices, washrooms, water-closets and every convenience.—Agricultural hall is being enlarged and the main hall has been doubled in capacity."

Livingston Republican: An instance of pluck and nerve is sent to us by a subscriber in Montcalm county. Last week a little son of L. R. Stevens, of Maple Valley, while searching for his cows, was caught under a rolling log. His mother heard his screams and ran to his assistance. She found a log twenty feet long and eleven inches in diameter lying across his abdomen, and saw that he was already nearly crushed to death. Although she is a slight woman, weighing only about 100 pounds, she seized a lever and succeeded in moving the log up hill sufficiently to relieve the child. The fact is considered a wonder by all who know the circumstances.

"Eating Crow."

This well known phrase, which is so often applied in political articles and speeches to those who are constrained to support a candidate whom they do not like, or have previously opposed, came into vogue through an anecdote published in the Knickerbocker Magazine over a quarter of a century ago:

It was a story of a summer boarding-house keeper on the Hudson and of an indignant patron. Whenever the latter ventured to suggest that the spring chicken was rather tough, or that the roast beef must have been cut from the cow's hoofs, he was directly told that he was entirely "too pertickerler," and that the autocrat of the table and the house could eat anything, even a crow. This settled the matter for the time being, but the boarder convinced against his will was of the same opinion still, at all events, in regard to the quality of the edibles placed before him. So often was the remark, "I kin eat anything; I kin eat a crow," brought down on his devoted head that he finally resolved to try the old man. He went out gunning one day and succeeded in bagging a very fine fat, old black crow. He went into the kitchen and by dint of soft words and filthy lucre, induced the cook to allow him to prepare that crow for the table. He boiled it nicely, and it wasn't such a bad looking dish after all. His heart misgave him; the flinty old cuss would eat it after all. The cook was a Scotch woman and used snuff. He borrowed all she had and sprinkled it liberally over the crow, gave her another simmer, and then taking it on a salver brought it before his host, saying as he sat it down, "Now, my dear sir, you hrve said a thousand times, if you have said it once, that you can eat crow. Here is one very carefully cooked." It is said that the old man turned pale for a moment, but braced himself against the back of his chair, and with "I kin eat crow," he began, cutting a good mouthful. He swallowed it, and then preparing for a second onslaught, he looked his boarder straight in the eye, while he ejaculated, "I've eaten crow," and took his second portion. He lifted his hands mechanically, as if for a third onslaught, but dropped them quickly over the region of the stomach, and, rising hurriedly and unsteadily, retreated for the door, muttering as he went, "but dang me if I hanker arter it."

THE PRESIDENT'S WOUND!

A PARALLEL CASE IN ARMY LIFE.

In the issue of the Philadelphia Record on the 27th of July was published an article relating to the care of Capt. William Palmer, now Quartermaster Second Brigade New Jersey State National Guard, who was wounded at the battle of Mossy Creek, East Tennessee, in the winter of 1863. In that article the striking resemblance of the case to that of President Garfield, in many particulars, was pointed out, the authority for this statement being the brave captain himself. A still better authority is Dr. David Kennedy, then surgeon U. S. General Hospital, West Philadelphia, who had charge of the case, and performed the operation of removing the detached bone, and finally extricated the bullet. The entire treatment being perfectly successful—Capt. Palmer living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr Kennedy does not hesitate to say that many of his patients both in military and civil practice owe their lives to the wonderful healing and strengthening powers of his medicine called "Favorite Remedy." The Doctor is in possession of an autograph letter from Capt. Palmer, attesting his indebtedness for his present good health to this medicine—"Favorite Remedy" which he says has doubled the obligation which he felt to the Doctor for the treatment of the Captain's terrible wound.

While Dr. Kennedy is engaged in the introduction of "Favorite," he still continues the practice of his profession at Roundout, N. Y., performs all the minor as well as capital operations of surgery. Address as above. 4w his humid and magnetic organization. Then I knew he was a fraud. It has occurred to me that in politics, government, society in its broad signification and manifold enigmas we have a multitude of water-witches whose involved prognostications are conspicuous mainly for failure, and to whose paintings we pay uncalled for heed. How often has it been true in the past that the out come of vexed questions has not been according to the expectations or surmises of either party? the presumption being that that feature will be repeated in the controversies of the future? What a disappointment to both the pros and cons was the effect of admitting women to your state university? Neither the college nor the women have been especially affected by the contact, though great success for both had been promised by the pros and dire disaster by the cons. When the subject was under discussion it was my privilege to hear Dr. Haven, the then Chancellor, whose name I speak with deep respect, in a discussion on it show from deep lying principals of human nature, which could not be ignored that the result of the proposed innovation would inevitably be matrimony—that the arts must languish when Cupid stalks abroad.

Hosea Bigelow's injunction "don't never prophesy onless ye know," and it is perhaps the best advice on the subject out of scripture. While the wise men confine themselves to pointing out the threads upon which are strung, so to speak, the beads of past events, their labor is not altogether in vain; but what oracles successfully forecasted those events? Which of them were not surprises? What important movements of society ever resulted as one might have supposed or answered prediction? Could it have occurred to any contemporary of the crusades, when even the semblance of law and order then enjoyed seemed dissolving into chaos during the extraordinary period, that that was the beginning of the end of middle age darkness? When the Mayflower landed its little company, in early winter, upon a savage coast, with insufficient supplies, cut off from succor by relentless seas, confronted by illimitable forests, what probability was there that the coming spring would not find them exterminated instead of taking shape as the lively corner stone of a great nation? What important epoch ever failed to take unlooked for directions bearing surprises in its outcome? In 1861, evident nationality was not the issue in the beginning of the Revolution, neither was Emancipation aimed at in the outset of the Rebellion. I have seen the historian Froude quoted as saying that "each generation of us is as if it had grown up in a single season, and experience throws no light on the fruit it will produce." The logic of events seems to me a very uncertain quantity, and the repetitions and sequences of history much less apparent than its arbitrariness, its inconsistencies, its paradoxes and discrepancies.

Is not Beaconsfield's saying "it is the unexpected that happens," one of the truest aphorisms, and as true of individuals as of nations? Show me the man who, in his progress down the River of Life, is not constantly making unintentional landings, and running clear by objective points. Our very best efforts are often in the direction of side issues, failure in great attempt is has stranded many a man upon the shall beginnings of still greater achievements. Shakespeare noted this in the familiar quotation, "Our indiscretions oftimes serve us well, when our deep plots do fail."

When the teacher observed how easily a great ship is turned by a very small helm he was illustrating one of the most important and significant phases of human affairs, viz, the apparent insufficiency often of causes to produce the results that hinge upon them. "For want of a nail a shoe was lost, for want of a shoe a horse was lost, for want of a horse a rider was lost, and with the rider were lost the dispatches that lost the army that lost the kingdom." How different might have been the map of Europe if Napoleon's reserves had not failed him at Waterloo! If the commons of England had regarded our great struggle in the same spirit which animated her aristocracy, it requires no extravagant fancy to see the genius of Geography writing across the words, United States, "Mexico of the North." Who can predict the effect of his surroundings upon even a child? Those conditions most favorable to the development of one organization may be prejudicial to another. The winter's wind that braces and invigorates the sturdy constitution, fans the life away from the less robust. One young man uses affluence as a stepping stone to rise from; another is ruined by its temptations and immunities; one bewails his want of classical education, another regards the lack of it as the Reason Why he gets on in the world. Doubt and hope alternate in the parental prospectus of the infant in his cradle; every step of the youth is taken in uncertainty, and what account he will render of himself as a man passes computation—defies every system of foretelling. For ourselves, we are constantly surprised, disappointed and puzzled at the good and bad qualities, strength and weakness so strangely mingled in us all. Thackeray says, "I never could count how many causes went to produce any given effect or action in a person's life, and have been for my own part many a time quite misled in my own case, fancying some grand, some magnanimous, some virtuous reason for an act of which I was proud, when lo! some pert little satirical monitor springs up, inwardly upsetting the fond humbug I had been cherishing and says, away with this boasting, I am the cause of this virtue, my lad!"

How true is it also that whatever one puts his hands to, whether public or private affairs, from the simplest seed sowing to the highest concerns of the state he knows not whether will prosper, this or that. In state affairs it may be further observed that they again verify the scriptures in that the foolish things so often confound the things that are wise. The advances the world has made have not sprung from the higher walks of society, but are of lowly birth. The christian religion itself could not have been presented in a humbler manner. The men who extorted the magna charta from King John could not write and never dreamed that their lofty scene would be acted over and extolled in states unborn; Cromwell's "serving men and tapsters," as he called his follower upheld the people's cause against the scholars and gentlemen who followed the King; the pioneers of Universal Liberty in this country were a handfull of fanatics, unknown outside of their hobby, opposed by press, bar and pulpit. Out of the Nazareth of greenbackism came deliverance from the share of the monometalists. The cow boys and miners of Wyoming first gave woman the ballot; and so far as I know the heads of corners in the social and political structure are commonly fashioned from stones rejected by the builders.

When I was a mere boy at home, we took a number of agricultural papers, in which I read of improved methods, scientific processes in farming, whereby we could, the papers said, become speedily enriched. But we, never heeding "went on, like the plowman in Gray's elegy, "plodding our weary way," till I could endure it no longer, and I said, "Lo! my father, why do we not observe the words of correction and profit in the books? Go to now, and let us analyze our ground, and take more heed to the salt of the earth, and effect great changes in our short and long fodder by cooking the same to the end that our great and small cattle may wax fat exceedingly, and let us soil and subsoil, and use concentrated manures; in the morning sow leached ashes, and in the evening with-hold not our hand from spreading lime and phosphate and arrest escaping gammonia. And my father said, "My son, these things are not for us who live by farming; they are the substance of things hoped for with little evidence so far as seen that with us they would pay," and I turned away sorrowing. But since I have in my turn confronted the theorists and doctrinaires, I have regarded with increasing admiration the unlearned wisdom which has so long preserved our farmers from the Lo heres and Lo there of pretentious, pernicious pedantry.

In agriculture at least, and to some extent medicine, it is notorious that the great improvements have not been the fruit of deductions. Clover and plaster may be called the sheet-anchor of your Michigan farming; but no chemist ever suggested the fertilizing or stimulating effects of plaster; its discovery was an accident and its action still an enigma. When Jesse Williams hit upon the idea of collecting milk in a central point for manufacture, since developed into our cheese factory and creamery systems, in my opinion, he did a greater service directly and indirectly for farming than all our agricultural schools have done since Jethro Wood invented the plow. The process known as ensilage, the leading sensation in the farm papers at the present time, has long been practiced by ignorant peasants, sons of still more ignorant sires, who simply found out this way of keeping cattle on krout.

In somewhat the same way we are justified, as it appears to me, in speaking of medicine; if its practice is more reasonable in these latter days there is infinitely less reasoning about it. I shall never forget my early introduction to the Esculapian mysteries at that important time when the measles marked me for their own. I was treated according to the wisdom of that age, my burning thirst was intensified by occasional teaspoons of warm water and my spirits sustained by repeated assurances that whatever was comforting to me was bad for the measles. The old doctor books are most amusing to read except that it is saddening to think of the barbarities our ancestors were subjected to in the name of physic. What strikes me the most forcibly is that the absurdest doses were given without any reference to the actual effect, but because of some reason which depended upon another reason, and that upon another till the whole train was lost in distance and confusion. A decoction of ash-tree bark was recommended for snake-bite, not because it was good, but because the ash tree was under the influence of the sun, and the sun was inimical to venemous reptiles. It is a comparatively recent date when something extraneous to the action of medicine was not attached to it.

It is remarkable to me how many modern isms in doctoring have had their origin in some fancied general principle which to its adherents embraces the world. When Dr. Graham unfurled the banner of bran and turnips, preaching a crusade against meat and butter and bolted flour, what a multitude of those people who accept mental tests for tangible things, and able to refute the doctor's arguments, joined his ranks; scarcely a corporal's guard of them remain, living refutations of their faith. Thomsonianism took for its starting point the position that all disease results from one common cause, viz: A disturbance of the equilibrium of the bodily forces. Dr. Tanner basis his system upon the position that the sanitary principle is not in medicine but the human system, and that this great, self-adjusting curative agent exerts itself whenever the ordinary work of digestion is suspended.

What a travesty upon what we call the science of medicine is that spreading heterodoxy, so abhorent to the ancient faith, which must often leave its own adherents in doubt whether to class it under the head of the miraculous or ridiculous. Fifty years ago Hahneman's disciples were tarred and feathered for quacks and pretenders; to-day they are not only thoroughly established but are taking the country. I once asked a homeopath how he could hold his countenance while giving his little pills confessedly flavored with the merest suspicion of an extract; and he said it was as wonderful to him as to me that disease should yield to such feeble influences; he simply knew it did, and would respectfully offer the fruit in vindication of the tree. Isn't it fruit that we are after? What is it to the sick man whether like cures like or the theory of infinitessimal doses is nonsense if he is speedily cured? But mark you that while debate on this very question has run so high as to divide college faculties, in the discussions which I have heard upon it, it was not the "fruits", not the mortuary records of the homeopaths, their hospital practice, nor the success of their general treatment, that have fallen under condemnation, but their abominable doctrines. Now, as to the respective merits of the rival schools, I maintain the impartiality of Tallyrand when inquired of respecting the rumored death of George the Second: "some say he is dead," said the courtier, "and some say he is not, for my part I believe neither story." But one point in the case which appears to me to be of great value is thus referred to by Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes: "All the reason in the world," says this eminent writer, "would not have had so rapid and general an effect upon the public mind to disabuse it of the idea that a drug is a good thing in itself instead of being as it is a bad thing as this monstrous fiction."

How well might a jester Madame Roland exclaim "O, logic! logic, what absurdities are committed in thy name!" To make the worse appear the better reason is one of its provinces; both Czar and Nihilist are directed by its contradictory guidance. It leads the 'sand lots' and academy into mutual misunderstanding and confusion. It makes you and me think many things to be true that our later judgments will reverse and leave us at last in doubt, though still certain that whatever is carried to its "logical conclusions" is commonly run into the ground. The gentle reformer finds that some drops of the oil of tobacco will kill a dog, and forthwith enters upon a holy war against the soothing pipe. The old farmer had no faith in the plan for assisting nature in potato culture by cutting off the tops; he had tried it on his peas and didn't get a pod. The anxious mother with seven daughters out and none passed out decided upon a fish diet for the girls, because there was so much phosphorus in fish and everybody knew that was what they made matches of. How was the whole country startled two or three years back with the well-remembered piscatorial plan for making smart people smarter and lighting up the mental gloom of the dull.—Many serious people, I am told, seriously believe to this day that much intellect may be captured by the angler's art,—expectant of a future Laureate of the hook and line who shall write, "some men are born great, some achieve greatness, some have greatness thrust upon them, and some grow great of eating fish."

But it is by the same processes and out of no more valuable materials that so many winds of doctrine that blow up and down the world are made. A noted man said not long ago at a College commencement that to get rich it was only necessary to work sixteen hours a day for sixteen years; because ——. Suppose we all were to try it, how would our relative positions be changed? Another says a shoemaker makes a better workman if that be his calling for having a classical education; because ——. Suppose the young graduate with his academic honors thick upon him were to be set down to the lapstone with the shoemaker's certainty that the narrow outlook which it afford marked the limit of his career—how long before he would be selling maps or soliciting insurance?

Ingersoll maintains that there is nothing in poverty to depress a man's manliness, that his spirit should rise above circumstance, and that if he has but one dollar he can spend it like a lord. You and I know that whatever it might and should do poverty does depress. Who that has observed the terrible struggle of the unskilled laborer to keep the wolf from the door which shelters his family has failed to note the marks of conflict, "the weariness and dejection born of strife" that brand him? Look at the railroad magnate making a tour of his shops; no one would take him for a roustabout. But take away the magnates authority and possessions, let him wheel iron and shovel cinders for a few years at a dollar a day, and you wouldn't know him.—Even a dog feels the inspiration of a brass collar. The hard-handed toiler, wrinkled and bent, can't spend his last dollar like a lord, unless he is drunk.

It is perhaps unfortunate that so commonly, these things which present themselves for our consideration are a law unto themselves; and that before applying our maxims we must first consider whether "the circumstances do not alter the case." Necessary consequences, dependence of things upon each other, reign of law, relegation to general principles you have always thrust upon you. Let me ask leave to bespeak your passing attention to the absolute in affairs, the accidental, the inconsistent, the inexplicable, the paradoxical, the empirie.

Woman's True Friend.

A friend in need is a friend indeed. This none can deny, especially when assistance is rendered when one is sorely afflicted with disease, more particularly those complaints and weaknesses so common to our female population. Every woman should know that Electric Bitters are woman's true friend, and will positively restore her to health, even when all other remedies fail. A single trial always proves our assertion. They are pleasant to the taste and only cost fifty cents a bottle. Sold at Godey's Lady's Book for September is brimful of attractions. The steel plate of "Love and Duty," designed by Darley, and illustrates a scene in Dickens' great novel "Our Mutual Friend." The colored fashion plate and the other numerous illustrations of the latest fashions are exceptionally good. Jas. B. Marshall contributes a story of great interest entitled "Ashton's Acquaintance," and there is in addition the usual budget of short stories, poems and sketches, and a Diagram Pattern for the latest style of an early autumn wrap for ladies.

An Established Remedy. Down's Elixir has been widely known and used as a cough remedy for fifty years. No other cough medicine has stood the test half this length of time. The people stand by that which is good.

Choice Extracts from Druggists.

"We know the value of malt, hops, calisaya and iron composing 'Malt Bitters.'"

"Our lady customers highly praise them."

"Physicians prescribe them in this town."

"The largest bottle and best medicine."

"The best blood purifier on our shelves."

"Our best people take 'Malt Bitters.'"

"Sure cure for chills and liver difficulties."

AROUND THE COUNTY.

SPRINGVILLE.

It being some time since your correspondent has made any report from this section, thought it best to put in a few notes, though they may not be newsy.

On Friday morning the Brooklyn Exponent was presented for my perusal. It is a very good paper, is put up in good style, no editorial except the salutatory opening. Should think the town would be able to fill its columns from the number of its correspondents residing there.

There is a fine improvement going on here. Mrs. M. Groger is at work fixing up a fine addition to her hotel, and when it is completed she will be prepared to give the traveling public a fine reception.

On Saturday last Miss Addie Gerralds returned after an absence of three weeks, and now is ready to do all kinds of dressmaking in the latest fashions at reasonable terms.

Miss Rachael S. Mosher has been at home for the past ten days resting up. She will return to Detroit on Thursday accompanied by Miss Mary Booher.

Our SirKnight Simon Shultis leaves town on the 12th inst for Rotterdam, Germany, his old native home. Hope he will be able to meet some of the brothers there and witness some of their work, for he is one of the true kind.

On the 3d, our neighbor Jonathan Hand was presented with a son, a 13 pounder. All doing well.

Marion Mason for the past week has been very sick but is now better.

The past week we have had some rain which will be received with great pleasure, and assist the farmers in preparing the ground for sowing of wheat.

On Sabbath last the communion of the Lord's supper was administered and 18 persons came forward and joined the Methodist Episcopal church of Springville. Rev. W. Pierce will preach his farewell sermon after three years service, next Sabbath.

On Friday last Miss Helen Queal left for St. Johns, where she is engaged as teacher in the High School. She has been spending part of her vacation with her parents, Mr. Wm. Queal.

Business is very quiet, many persons sick but none dangerous. Our sheep men are making arrangements to make a display of their stock at the coming fairs that are to be held the present month.

BROOKLYN.

Warm, dry days and cold nights do not assimilate with rules for health, and not to have cholera morbus or chills is an indication of constitutional remissness. Only a few have gone to the Jackson camp meeting on this account. Doctors have become people of consequence and are much sought after.

Dr. Jones has been very sick for some days, and typhoid fever is invading the southern hills.

Mr. O Terrill died there yesterday.

When the sun shines very hot on Saturday afternoon in this latitude, it develops an inclination to trounce J. Fellows, the village marshall. He is said to be a specimen of physical weakness and condensed cowardice. Usually it only requires a dozen good sized athletes to reduce him to order, but last night it took about one hundred. The battle was mostly fought with screams to which a couple of the unrescued replied with fervor.

George Green, has sold his interest in the foundry to Colonel King, and Herbert Hart is superintendent.—Change of home and business are quite the fashion. Folks move and scold as if it was the first of May.

Nearly nineteen centuries have drifted over to the great beyond, but the era for publishing a newspaper did not roll around to us until last Thursday. You may be sure there was some curiosity manifested by the oldest inhabitant, and I confess to experiencing some such sensation as seems to overwhelm nervous people, when they inspect for the first time a bran new baby. This looks exactly like the News family. It is neither too large or too small for its age, and like most youngsters long waited for, starts on its journey of life with patrons willing to defray traveling expenses.

Col. King has gathered up his share of headaches and gone to the White Mountains, hoping to exchange them for a good appetite and sunbrown.

Mrs. Eichbaum has not yet returned from Minnesota, and Mr. Lemon of Hillsdale being is west.

ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING.

Presentation of the Report and Election of Three Trustees.

The annual meeting of school district No. 7 of Tecumseh was held at the Central Building last Monday evening. The weather was oppressively hot and the attendance rather small. The meeting was called to order by the Moderator, E. B. Wood. The minutes of last year's annual meeting were read. The annual report for this year was then presented and on motion the same was accepted and adopted. Below is the report:

S. C. STACY,
Director.

Three trustees were to be chosen, two for a full term of three years in place of Lucius Lilley and S. C. Stacy whose term of office expired, and one for two years in place of E. B. Wood, who was appointed last winter by the Board to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Perley Bills. Several ballots were taken for trustees and the final result was the election of Messrs Lilley, Wood and Stacy as their own successors. As there was no new business presented, the meeting then adjourned.

The finances of the district are in excellent condition at present, as the figures show for themselves. The school census amounts to 601, an increase of 40 over last year. The foreign pupils in attendance last year numbered 47. The sum received for foreign tuitions appears above. The school buildings and grounds are in good repair, and the Board of Trustees recommended that the Central Building be re-painted during the coming year.

A Talented Lady's Views.

Mrs. C. F. Fleming, State Lecturer of Missouri, and also an artist of rare merit, whose picture of Adelaide Neilson is pronounced by the press to be the most beautiful portrait in the United States in a recent letter said: "I have been troubled with kidney disease since my childhood, and it finally culminated in chronic catarrh of the bladder. It would be impossible for me to describe how much I suffered, and I had abandoned all hope of ever being cured. I was, however, recommended to try Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and it has done me more good than the combined skill of all the physicians I have ever tried during my entire life." Such testimony is beyond question, and proves the value to all ladies of the remedy it advocates.

A Card.

Having been forced by the state of my health to leave my home and friends and the field of my life's toil to try the effects of absolute rest from business and its cares and anxieties, I wish to thank the people with whom I have lived and identified my interests so long, for their very liberal patronage, for the generous confidence they have given me as a professional man and for the constancy of their friendship that has sustained me through a long professional career.—In this connection I wish to say, and I do it with great pleasure, that I can recommend to them Dr. L. G. North as a gentleman possessing those qualities that can recommend a physician to the patronage and confidence of the community.

I. S. HAMILTON.

Branchport, N. Y.

Do Not be Deceived.

In these times of quack medicine advertisements everywhere, it is truly gratifying to find one remedy that is worthy of praise, and which really does as recommended. Electric bitters we can vouch for as being a true and reliable remedy, and that will do as recommended. They invariably cure stomach and liver complaints, Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary difficulties. We know whereof we speak, and can readily say, give them a trial. Sold at fifty cents a bottle at

C. A. Wright & Co's.

—Montgomery's Electric Medicine, so highly recommended and universally known by the Tecumseh people as a cure for billiousness and bowel complaint, will always be found at C. A. Wright & Co's and Baker & Hall's.

The Black Death.

Wonderful in its origin, in its characteristics, in its consequences, was the great pestilence known as Black Death, which swept half the people out of England in 1348. For two years previously there had been gradually spreading over the eastern parts of Europe a virulent disease, imported from Asia, which made havoc of the people in some of the finest portions of the world. So dreadful indeed had been its ravages that, according to the most respectable monkish writer of the time, many Saracens, convicted that the pestilence was a sign of God's wrath on account of their unbelief, became Christians, till, finding the Christians to be likewise afflicted, they returned to their old faith. A series of earthquakes, which shook the whole of eastern Europe, ushered in the year of Pestilence's hearts quailed for fear, and many were the steps taken—short of imbuing the towns and providing better ventilation—with a view of propitiating the divine wrath. In vain. The plague which had scourged Asia and the Greek empire crept slowly but surely westward, seemingly uninfluenced by the coldness of climate or intervention of sea. Boccaccio has written in the preface to his "Decameron" an account of the plague as it operated in Florence, which no one who has ever read it can forget. Within a few months of its slaughter of the Florentines it had swept through Spain, France and Germany, and had crossed the straits of Dover.

From June to December, 1348, there had fallen in England an almost incessant downpour of rain; the ground was damp, and the streams became polluted with surface-drainage, which was washed like compost all over the country, in default of a proper outlet into a proper receptacle. In August the first case was reported; by November the capital was reached, and from London the plague spread all over the kingdom, and, says Stowe, "so wasted and spoyled the people, that scarcely the tenth person of all sorts was left alive." This is not an exaggeration of what happened in some places; "there died an innumerable sort, for no man but God only knew how many." Between the first of January and July, 1349, there died in the city of Norwich 57,104 persons; Yarmouth buried 7,052 in the year; and other towns in the eastern counties suffered nearly as much. In the thirteen acres of Spittle Croft (the site of the existing Charterhouse), which was given by Sir Walter Manny for the burial of the dead, because London churchyards were choke full, were buried fifty thousand persons. The plague was swift in execution; those seized by it often dying within six hours, and none lasting over three days. The ties of nature seemed loosened; parents forsook their children, the dead remaining in many instances without burial, and were allowed to take their revenge upon the living by adding fearfully to the pestilential character of the atmosphere. Cattle became infected with the disease, and their bodies lay rotting on the fields untouched even by the birds of prey. How many of the people died it is impossible to say with certainty; but the most reliable accounts state that, taking England all through, half of the entire population died. The eastern counties never recovered from the ravages of the plague; places which awhile had been the seats of manufacture became obscure villages, and to this day may be seen in those counties places in which large churches that were once to small for the congregation have survived only to attest what the villages they presided over once were. Half the population! The labours of agriculture were neglected; the courts of justice were not opened; Parliament was prorogued from time to time; the whole business of the country drifted for very lack of hands to attend to it, and the course of the plague became so notorious that the Scots swore by it, by the "foul deth of the English." For a time Scotland escaped, and the Scots, taking advantage of the weakened condition of their southern foe, collected an army for the purpose of finishing what the plague had spared to do. But into the camp at Selkirk the "foul deth" came and slew five thousand men, and put a stop to the project of invasion.

All sorts of reasons were assigned for the visitation. Some declared it was a sign of God's anger at the extravagance and effeminacy of the men; others that it was because of his wrath at the gay costume of the women, who seemed to have arrayed themselves more after the fashion adopted by some women now-a-days than either after Solomon or the lilly of the field. Some said one thing and some another, but we do not hear of any one hitting the real blot, and assigning the cause to the anger of God against filthy streets, unwholesome houses, undrained towns, and utter want of ventilation. The Black Death was a wonder in its effects rather than in its causes, and was attended with supplementary wonder, that it went away without a Great Fire, which by burning down the plague-cherishing towns, might have prevented, as it did later on in London, a recurrance of the visitation. At intervals afterwards, the plague returned, though never again with such destructive power; it came and went, destroying its victims till the people found out what it was that God was angry about. Then it went away finally, leaving behind it a promise to return—a promise which holds good, at the present hour—whenever men should so tempt their fate as to provoke it by dirt and those other abominations upon which it thrives.

Our Bodies After Death.

Within a very near approach to truth, the human family inhabiting the earth has been estimated at 1,000,000,000; the annual "loss by death" is 18,000,000. Now, the weight of the animal matter of this immense body cast into the grave is no less than 634,000 tons, and its decomposition produces 9,000,000,000,000 cubic feet of matter. The vegetable productions of the earth clear away from the earth the gases thus generated, decomposing and assimilating them for their own increase. This circle of changes has been going on ever since man became an occupier of the earth. He feeds on the lower animals and on the seeds of plants, which in due time become a part of himself. The lower animals feed upon the herbs and grasses, which, in their turn, become the animal; then, by its death, again pass into the atmosphere, and are ready once more to be assimilated by plants, the earth or bone substance alone remaining where it is deposited.

A building roofed with tin is not less liable to be struck by lightning than a shingle-roofed building. If neither house were provided with a lightning-rod, the tin-roofed building, if struck, would be the safer, because the lightning would be likely to divide and spread over the metal, and find its way to the earth by several different paths on the exterior of the building, water leaders, gutters, etc. The wooden roof offers no such facility as metal for the spread or division of the electric charge, but is apt to tear its way through the building to the ground in one path.

The Ringing Rocks.

These celebrated rocks are found on the farm of Abraham Mench, in Pottsgrove Township, three miles northeast of Pottstown, Pa. They cover a space of three-quarters of an acre. In this tract bowlders are piled upon bowlders of all shapes and forms, and so promiscuously arranged that considerable agility is required to walk over them without falling. As one steps from rock to rock a ringing sound, produced by the nails in the boot-heels, is plainly heard. On rapping the stones with a hammer, quite remarkable acoustic properties are revealed. Some of them give forth a rich, full tone, which would probably vie with the best bell metal if the stones were fashioned into bells. One of them in particular, from its depth of tone, is known as the state-house bell. This was at one time among the largest of the rocks. It has been broken off, however, but still has preserved its strong, full tone. The general sound produced by striking the smaller stones resembles that of a blacksmith's anvil, some having a little clearer ring than others, and no two sounding just alike. In passing from one to another of the larger rocks one is reminded of the tapping of car wheels by the train inspectors. Thousands of people visit this natural phenomenon every summer. The rocks themselves bear evidence of this, the edges being battered off by hammer-strokes, and the sides of many having names carved upon them, some parties who were unwilling to take the time or trouble to chisel their names upon the rocks having resorted to paint, and considerable daubing has been done in various colors. The advertising fiend has not failed to put in his appearance, and we are made aware of the merits of patent medicines of the place to buy carpets and the like, upon every hand. We have not heard any satisfactory explanation of the cause of the ringing or bell-like sounds of these rocks. Some say it is owing to there being a cavern under them. This, however, can have nothing to do with it, as when the rocks are removed they still have the same sound. One large and sonorous bowlder was taken to the Centennial, and created a great deal of attention there. Another was sent to England afterwards. There is probably a metallic substance in this group of bowlders to which the ringing sound may be attributed. We have not heard, however, of any geological analysis being made. Half a mile east of the Ringing Rocks, and in the same range of hills, there is another group of bowlders which are much visited. Here a lofty pile of rocks surmounts a cavity of considerable depth, the whole being known as the "Stone House." Near by the stone house is a large bowlder, some fifteen or twenty feet high, which, from its peculiar contour, is called the "Hay Stack." Besides their acoustic qualities there is another singular circumstance about the Ringing Rocks which visitors rarely fail to notice. Many of them have very strange marks, or indentations. At some points these resemble the tracks of a horse's hoof. Others are like the track of a wagon. Some of the larger indentations are said to resemble an elephant's foot, and fac-similes of the human foot are claimed to be found among the smaller ones.

How to Keep Apples in Winter.

Apples should be perfectly dry when taken from the tree, and kept so until stored away for keeping over winter. When picking, use oval shaped half bushel baskets. The basket may be kept on the arm or on a high stool near by, or both, as convenience require. All inferior apples that come into the hand while picking, drop, being careful to pick none into the basket but sound, smooth fruit of fair size. When the basket is full carefully pour them into the bin, and when that is full at night, cover with boards to keep off the sun and rain; continue the operation of picking during dry weather until done. Never cover the apples with straw while in the orchard. It makes them too warm, and there is no danger of their being injured by frost until quite late in the season. They must be kept dry and from the sun. To keep apples nicely, a dry, airy, light cellar, and scrupulousy clean, is absolutely necessary. The sides and ceiling of the cellar should be cemented with plaster to keep an even temperature of cold, and the bottom of the cellar cemented with waterproof cement to keep out the dampness. There should be one or more windows on the opposite sides of the cellar to give free circulation of air when needed. They should be of glass, and supported by hinges at the top so that they may be opened and shut as circulation requires. In such a cellar, bins three feet wide may be constructed around the sides and wider ones through the center. These bins may be filled with apples from the bottom to the height of five or six feet, without danger of injury to the bottom apples, by the weight of the upper ones. Make the necessary partitions in the bins to keep the apples separate. Apples keep much better when stored in large quantities than if spread out in layers on shelves. When bins cannot be constructed in the cellar, the apples may be put into barrels and headed up tightly and stowed away in the cellar. In this way they usually keep tolerably well. Vegetables of no kind should be stored in the cellar with apples. In a temperature suitable for keeping the latter, most vegetables will freeze. Leaves or straw should not be put in with the fruit. They draw dampness and speck and rot the apples. Apples put away according to these instructions may be kept until late in the following spring—late keepers, until midsummer.

A WHISTLING TREE.—In the deep and almost impenetrable forests of Nubia is found a tree that utters at times the most mournful and plaintive notes. Sometimes these sounds are shrill and clear, at others die away to an almost imperceptible whisper, as if some captive spirit were complaining of its lot. The effect is singular, weird and startling, until the cause is known. The tree is a species of Acacia, and the sound is produced by cup-shaped galls or secretions of some insect. The wind in passing through the tree produces the whistling noise referred to.

"The Domestic Tyrant."

"The average man," quoth Mrs. Pardington, "is a weak and irritable domestic tyrant," and Mrs. P. is correct. Tyrannical to a fault the average man will enter the blissful paradise of a happy home, scratch himself in fiendish glee, send the baby into convulsions, and for what? Why, because he has the Itching Piles, and is too mean to buy Swayne's Ointment, which is an infallible cure for the worst cases of that annoying complaint.

Sea-Cucumbers.

The sea-cucumbers, or as they are known in the scientific world, the holothuria, are extraordinary looking creatures, which vary in size from two or three inches in length, to more than a yard. They bear some resemblance to a cucumber, being a long worm-like cylinder open at one end. Their exterior is ruffled with little projections, which are usually armed with minute sharp hooks, by which the animal can hang on to foreign bodies for a few seconds.

Many of the species are able to produce from their external pores a most irritating fluid, which causes the hand that touches them to itch intolerably. But the creature possesses a most wonderful power; when from any cause it fears death, it can eject all its teeth, its stomach, its digestive apparatus, and suffice itself to a simple membraneous sac. Dr. Johnston kept one of these animals in an aquarium; for some reason or other he neglected to feed it, and when after some days he visited it, he found all its internal apparatus thrown out on the floor of the vessel, and the holothuria itself was a shrunken, dilapidated, and empty tube. Yet it was alive, and in three months had reproduced all its organs anew. Another singular property they possess is that of being able to divide themselves into two parts, each part becoming a separate creature. When this phenomenon is in progress, the middle of the animal begins to contract, and the extremities to enlarge. This goes on until the center is but a thread; at last it snaps, and forms two distinct creatures, which in time furnish themselves with all the necessary organs. Our fishermen throw away the sea-cucumbers, which are sometimes brought up in their nets and the Southern islanders cannot even look upon them without loathing. But this is not universally the case. The Chinese relish them greatly, and "trepang," as they call the holothuria, forms a very prominent article in all the Chinese markets. The great trepang fishers are the Malays. The expertness with which they capture these creatures is marvelous. By long experience they can see a trepang at a depth of thirty yards. They then poise a harpoon made of a long bamboo, and seldom, or never, miss their aim. To prepare it, the fish is boiled, then beaten flat with stones, and finally dried in the sun. It is said that a soup can be made with it, little if at all inferior to that made from the turtle.

The synapta, a peculiar genus of the holothurias, is a native of the English Channel. It is a beautiful creature, a cylinder of which seems as if it were made of rose-colored crystal, and passing through this tube appears five narrow ribbons of white silk, which mingling together form the head. The tissues are finer than the thinnest gauze; and yet this creature lives on a sandy bottom, and it is gorged from one end to the other with sand; the sharp angles of the grains can be seen with the naked eye, and yet they do not injure the fine membranes through which they pass. The synapta has also a peculiar mode of meeting famine; just as a general turns out of a beleaguered city all the useless mouths, so does this creature cut off the useless parts of its body. It effects this by first forming a compression or ring, which gradually tightens until all that part of the cylinder which is below it drops off. A synapta has been known to continue this self-destruction until only the head was left, and in that head resided the life, which, as soon as food was supplied to it, began to reconstruct the body it had so unceremoniously rejected.

Value of Oatmeal.

Oatmeal is a food of great strength and nutrition, having claims to be better known and more widely used than it is at the present. Of much service as a brain food, it contains enough phosphorus to keep a man doing an ordinary amount of brain-work in health and vigor. All medical authorities unite in the opinion that, eaten with milk, it is a perfect food, and, having all the requisites for the development of the system, it is a pre-eminently useful food for growing children and the young generally. Oatmeal requires much cooking to effectually burst its starch cells, but when it is well cooked, it will thicken liquid much more than equal its weight in wheaten flour. The oats of this country are superior to those grown on the continent and the southern part of England, but certainly inferior to the Scotch, where considerable pains are taken to cultivate them, and it is needless to point out that the Scotch are an example of a strong and thoroughly robust nation, which result is justly set down as derived from a plentiful use of oatmeal. Dr. Guthrie has asserted that his countrymen have the largest heads of any nation in the world—not even the English having such large heads—which he attributes to the universal use of oatmeal, as universal it is, being found alike on the tables of the rich and the tables of the poor—in the morning the porridge and in the evening the traditional cake. The two principal ways of cooking oatmeal are porridge and cake (bannock) which I will describe. First, then, we will commence with a recipe for porridge: To three pints of boiling water add a level teaspoonful of salt and a pint of coarse meal, stirring while it is being slowly poured in; continue stirring until the meal is diffused through the water—about eight or ten minutes. Cover it closely then, and place it where it will simmer for an hour; avoid stirring during the whole of that time. Serve hot, with as little messing as possible, accompanied with milk, maple-syrup or sugar and cream. To make oatmeal-cake, place in a bowl a quart of meal, add to it as much cold water as will form it into a soft, light dough, cover it with a cloth fifteen minutes to allow it to swell, then dust the paste-board with meal, turn out the dough and give it a vigorous kneading. Cover it with the cloth a few minutes and proceed at once to roll it out to an eighth of an inch in thickness; cut it in five pieces and partly cook them on a griddle, then finish them by toasting in front of the fire.

—A story has recently been published of a man in Middletown, Conn., who was troubled by a disagreeable sensation in the stump left after the amputation of his leg. The severed limb was disinterred and rearranged in a more comfortable condition, and the unpleasant sensation vanished. A similar case is reported of a man who lost his leg in Virginia City, Nev. The crippled man in this instance suffered severe pain because the buried leg was packed in too narrow a box, or at least that was the feeling. His wife, unbeknown to him, had the limb placed in a more roomy receptacle, when the sufferer at once experienced comfort and peace.

Color-Blindness.

There is no human infirmity more curious than is color-blindness; and scarcely any other about which so little is known. The oddest thing about it, perhaps, is that it is not certain, or even likely, that the person who is afflicted with color-blindness is aware of the defect.

Color-blindness is an inability to distinguish colors. Those who are wholly color-blind can see no more than the forms of things; but cases of total absence of the power to perceive color are very rare. In most persons who are lacking in this respect, the infirmity extends only to certain colors. One,-man cannot perceive a red color; another green; another blue, and so on.

This partial color-blindness is not uncommon! Examinations by experts seem to show that about one in every twenty men is defective in the perception of color; and it is asserted that the defect is not so common in women as in men.

Probably not many readers of this paper are conscious that they are color-blind. Yet, if one in every twenty be correct, and four or five in every 100 [illegible] so deficient in this respect, the [illegible] proportions that [illegible] one reason that there are [illegible] in which a quick and accurate [illegible] color is necessary. The [illegible] success impossible.

There are many ways of testing the eye to find out if it is color-blind. The most [illegible] is to put into the hands of a person [illegible] assortment of various colors, and ask him to separate the pieces into red, blue, green and other colors; and then to classify them from light to dark. A man who is color-blind will usually make a mistake in assorting the colors, in the first four or five pieces given him for examination.

Another test is to see if a person can read red letters printed on a black ground. A third is to cover a blue sheet, printed with black letters, with thin white tissue paper. To the perfect vision the letters will appear a yellowish brown. If they are black letters printed on a red sheet, they will appear green under the paper.

The causes of color-bundness have been sought by scientific men, and very plausible theories have been formed with regard to them, which we have not space to give. The defect is incurable. A person who does not know colors can never be taught them, and there is no operation or instrument that will remedy the defect.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C.A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

In old times men used their power of painting to show the objects of faith; in later times they used the objects of faith that they might show their powers of painting.—[J. Ruskin.

Death sets us safely on shore in our long-expected Canaan, where there are no temptations, no danger of falling, but eternal purity and immortal joys secure our innocence and happiness forever.—[Wake.

Alas! it is not till time, with reckless hand, has torn out half the leaves from the Book of Human Life, to light the fires of passion with, from day to day, that man begins to see that the leaves which remain are few in number.—[Longfellow.

To some men nature is like some women, inasmuch as it may be necessary to thrust them into her acquaintance and imprison them there before they will learn to appreciate their worth, then, so great is the revelation, they will call themselves stupid for not loving her before.—[Good Company.

An honest private man often grows cruel and abandoned when converted into an absolute prince. Give a man power of doing what he pleases with impunity, you extinguish his fear, and consequently overturn him in one of the great pillars of morality. This too we find confirmed by matter of fact. How many heirs-apparent to grand empires, when in the possession of them have become such monsters of lust and cruelty as are a reproach to human nature.—[Addison.

A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

It has been quite the fashion of the press of late to ask: "Where do the boys spend their evenings?" and now some one turns the tables, and asks; "Where do the fathers spend their?" adding, "We certainly can always find one family in four in which the father spends his evening away from home. And this is not confined exclusively to men who love club-life or politics. A man owes duties to his wife and children which he sometimes forgets. While they lose much, he loses equality of the things that should make life a blessing."

The Leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure makes a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and vigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. Names of Countries.

The following countries, it is said, were originally named by the Phœnicians, the greatest commercial people in the world. The names, in the Phœnician language, signified something characteristic of the places which they designate.

Europe signifies a country of white complexion; so named because the inhabitants were of a lighter complexion than those of Asia and Africa.

Asia signifies between or in the middle, from the fact that the geographers placed it between Europe and Africa.

Africa signifies the land of corn or ears. It was celebrated for its abundance of corn, and all sorts of grain.

Siberia signifies thirsty or dry—very characteristic.

Spain, a country of rabbits or conies. It was once so infested with these animals that it sued Augusta for an army to destroy them.

Calabria, also, for the same reason.

Gaul, modern France, signifies yellow-haired, as yellow hair characterizes its inhabitants.

The English of Caledonia is a high hill. This was a rugged mountainous province in Scotland.

Hibernia is utmost, or last habitation; for beyond this westward the Phœnicians never extended their voyages.

Britain, the country of tin, great quantities being found on it and adjacent islands. The Greeks called it Albion, which signifies in the Phœnician tongue either white or high mountains, from the whiteness of its shores, or the high rocks on the western coast.

Corsica signifies a woody place.

Sardinia signifies the footsteps of men, which it resembles.

Syracuse, bad savor, so-called, from the unwholsome marsh on which it stood.

Rhodes, serpents or dragons, which it produced in abundance.

Sicily, the country of grapes.

Scylla, the whirlpool of destruction.

Ætna signifies a furnace, or dark or smoky.

The former ornament should be hung high enough to be out of range of such articles as the husband and wife may see fit to throw at each other while in the heat of passion. How to Make a Poultice.

Dr. Brunton, in Brain, the new London periodical, gives the following useful hints on this subject: The common practice of making poultices by mixing linseed meal with hot water and applying it directly to the skin is quite wrong, because if we do not wish to burn the patient we must wait until a great portion of the heat has been lost. The proper method is to make a flannel bag, the size of the poultice required, to fill this with the linseed poultice, as hot as it can possible be made, and to put between this and the skin a second flannel, so there shall be at least two thicknesses of flannel between the skin and the poultice itself. Above the poultice should be placed more flannel, or a piece of cotton wool, to prevent it from getting cold. By this method we are able to apply the linseed meal boiling hot, without burning the patient, and the heat, gradually diffusing through the flannel, affords a grateful sense of relief, which cannot be obtained by other means. There are few ways in which such marked relief is given to abdominal pain, as by the application of a poultice in this manner.

How an Arab Lady Perfumes Herself.

In the floor of the tent or hut, as it may chance to be, a small hole is excavated sufficiently large to contain a common champaign bottle, a fire of charcoal or of simply glowing embers is made within the hole, into which the woman about to be scented throws a handful of drugs. She then takes off the cloth or "tops" which form her dress, and crouches naked over the fumes, while she arranges her robes to fall as a mantle from her neck to the ground like a tent. She now begins to perspire freely in the hot air-bath, and the pores of the skin being thus opened and moist, the volatile oil from the smoke of the burning perfumes is immediately absorbed. By the time that the fire has expired the scenting process is completed, and both her person and robe are redolent with incense, with which they are so thoroughly impregnated that I have frequently smelt a party of women strongly at full a hundred yards distance when the wind has been blowing from their direction.

—You cannot degrade a true and good man by any wrong or injustice you do him. You may cheat him, pain him, injure his usefulness, but he is above your power of degrading.

—The two important events in the life of man are when he examines his upper lip and sees the hair coming, and when he examines the top of his head and sees the hair going.

—Let young people remember that their good temper will gain them more esteem and happiness than the genius and talents of all the bad men that ever existed.

"A Girl's Choice."

It was in a drug store of course. All interesting incidents occur in drug stores,—that is nearly all. She was pretty, with blue eyes, and golden hair, one of those kind of beauties the poet would have called an "angel," but for the fact that a colony of pimples on her fair frontispiece precluded all thought of a celestial being. Bowing timidly to the handsome clerk, she asked for "Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases," and upon receiving it vanished like the morning dew before the Summer sun.

The Red Spider.

This is a minute insect, of a bright red color, very common and injurious to house plants, its presence being a sure indication of too dry an atmosphere for the health of the plants. The leaves of a plant attacked by it turn whitish or yellowish in spots, and are covered, especially on the under side, with the fine whitish webs of the spiders, causing them to wither and fall off. Syringing and sponging the plants thoroughly in every part with water will usually destroy them, unless they are badly infested, in which case a little flour of sulphur added to the water or dusted over the plants will prove effectual. The pansy is about the only thing that is ever infested by it in the garden, whole beds of which are sometimes destroyed in very dry seasons.

The Cucumber.

The extent to which this vegetable is consumed by the inhabitants of Egypt and the Southwest of Asia, and also in European Russia and Germany, would scarcely seem credible to this country. You never see a Russian pheasant at dinner but you see a lump of black bread and a cucumber. The vegetable seems certainly a singular dish to be so national in a country with a climate like that of Russia. Some writers say that there used to be a great annual fair at Leipsic for cucumbers, when the streets were heaped up a story high with that precious article of Germany cookery. In Germany barrels of half and also full-grown cucumbers are preserved from one year to another by immersion in deep wells, where the uniform temperature and exclusion from air seem to be the preserving agents.

No human agency can so speedily cleanse the blood, clear the complexion and skin, restore the hair and cure every species of itching, scaly and scrofulous humors of the skin, scalp and blood as the Cuticura Remedies.

Bad Drainage.

The criminal carelessness or wilful neglect of builders in erecting houses with imperfect plumbing and bad drainage is a fruitful source of disease, and thousands are carried off annually with Malaria or Typhoid Fevers from this cause. The Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters will cure these diseases. The whole treatment for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

PILES! PILES!! PILES!!!

A Sure Cure Found at Last. No One Need Suffer.

A sure cure for the Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr. Williams (an Indian remedy), called Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of 25 and 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, Instruments, and Electuaries do more harm than good. Williams' Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching (particularly at night after getting warm in bed), acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for Piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

Read what the Hon. J. M. Coffinberry, of Cleveland, says about Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment: "I have used scores of pile cures, but it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave such immediate and permanent relief as Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment."

GEO. P. ROWELL & CO'S SELECT LIST OF LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

"An advertiser who spends upwards of $5,000 a year, and who invests less than $50 of it in this List, writes: "Your Select Local List paid me better last year THAN ALL THE OTHER ADVERTISING I DID."

IT IS NOT A CO-OPERATIVE LIST.

IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.

IT IS AN HONEST LIST.

The catalogue states exactly what the papers are. When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST. When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.

The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single States ranges from $2 to $80. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $625. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,080.14. The list includes 953 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 363 places of over 5,000 population, and 468 County Seats. For copy of List and other information, address GEO. P. Ague Cure

Is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders, in miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms, which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic and other poisonous minerals, form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.

We warrant it when taken according to directions.

FROM TECUMSEH TO PETOSKEY

A Ten Day's Vacation and How It Was Enjoyed.

On Monday, Aug 22d, with grip sack and overcoat in hand, we took the morning train south, and set out for somewhere to enjoy a few days' recreation. After a few moments' stop at Adrian we pushed on to Hudson, where we alighted to make a few calls. We called upon the Gazette and Post, L. H. Salsbury and T. J. Hiller. Three out of the quartette were away from home. Friend Schermerhorn was down among the Hoosiers doing missionary work, Scarrett was off in the rural districts looking after pumpkins and delinquent subscribers, while Salsbury was wrestling with law and a Justice court jury somewhere in the vicinity of Devils Lake. Justice Hiller was at home, and up to his ears in law suits and hay fever. He did not complain of dull times, having on the average about one law suit a day and two on Sunday. We got a good square dinner at the Comstock House and took the one o'clock train for Hillsdale. D. C. Le Baron was with us from Adrian to Hillsdale, having started out in the morning on a business trip west. Arriving at Hillsdale we put up at the "best house on the road," Smith's Hotel. Fred Pocklington, an old Tecumseh boy is running the bus for this hotel, and of course we made ourselves at home at once. We put in that afternoon and evening to good advantage. First took in the newspaper offices. Bro. Tallman is located in a very pleasant room "on the point," where he has plenty of light on the subject. He is putting in a new job press, and his business seems to be in a prosperous condition. Bro. Farnum's Business seems to be doing a good business also. He has formed a congeniat partnership between pills and "pi" and is running both branches with success. "Harv" Rawlson keeps the Standard well up to the standard of the past. He goes to press on Monday evening, and we dropped in at that time, when all hands are pressed into the work. His office is very similar in arrangement and outfit to the HERALD, and he is evidently enjoying a good patronage. We called at the office of the Michigan Mutual Benefit Association, and found friend Skinner flourishing. He was about starting out on a week's trip. His company he says is prospering; new members are joining daily. After supper we met Dr. J.C. Snyder, who kindly showed us about town a little. Had a pleasant interview with Col. Knickerbocker, Judge Janes and several of the leading business men of Hillsdale. Had a splendid little visit of an hour's duration with Dr. R. A. Everett. "Rob" Everett, he was called when he went to school with us at the "old University" here in Tecumseh. He is now settled in a beautiful home with an interesting family, and a lucrative medical practice. At eleven o'clock we went to the train to go west, but we were destined to wait. There had been a smash up near Toledo and no one knew when the train would arrive, if at all. So we returned to the Hotel and left faithful Fred at the depot to come up and awaken us when the train got to Hudson. DeLos LeBaron was going to Jonesville on the same train. We awoke at six o'clock the next morning and upon going down to the office, found that the train had gone through three hours before. The clerk, with tears in his eyes, related his experience of the night before. He himself, the Bus runner, LeBaron and two other drummers, pounded, hammered, kicked and scratched our chamber door at least fifteen minutes to awaken us, but to no purpose. Morpheus had his grip on and refused to let go. The neighbors on the next block were all aroused from their slumbers, and the night watchman at the depot came rushing up, supposing the hotel must be on fire. We had resolved to sue the proprietor for damages, and administer a dose of rawhide to the clerk, but after listening to his explanatory remarks, we concluded that discretion was the better part of valor, paid our bill, seized our baggage and quietly stole away. Upon arriving at the depot we found that the next train went east instead of west, but as our trip was one for recreation it made no difference about the points of compass. So we waited an hour for the train and then ran down to Pittsford to get breakfast. The hotel at Pittsford is a well kept country hotel, where we procured a wholesome breakfast and got wide awake. At half past nine another train arrived going west. We boarded this train and went to Coldwater. Arriving there we put up at our old favorite quarters, the Southern Michigan, where we always feel at home. After a good square mid-day meal we started out for some more recreation. Paid the Sentinel office a visit. Bro. Culver [illegible] in convenient rooms and his paper is improving every week in appearance, and increasing in circulation. The Democrats of Branch county have an excellent organ in the Sentinel and one which they should take pride in supporting. We then paid the Republican office a call and found Mr. Aldrich, one of the proprietors, to be one of our old Ann Arbor acquaintances. The Republican occupies a two story building about the size of the HERALD building, and the office throughout, in presses, material, and convenience is almost a counterpart of ours. The Republican is now issued as a semi-weekly, and is one one of the best conducted newspapers in Southern Michigan. It also enjoys a large job printing patronage. We then found our whilom railroad canvasser, S. S. Scovill, who conducted the T. & M. canvass here last summer. Mr. Scovill has a beautiful residence on one of the best streets in Coldwater, and is withal quite a successful horticulturalist. He has 18 varieties of grapes and 13 varieties of pears in his garden. Mr. S. is a firm believer in the T. & M. R. R. He is confident that it will be built, although he is at a loss to explain the present delay. We enjoyed an hour's ride about the village after his fast horse, and then took a freight train for Bronson. The freight was one of those quiet leisurely trains, about two hours behind schedule time, so we arrived at Bronson about eight o'clock in the evening. Went out to find Bro. Wargott, and soon hunted him out in the Journal office head over heels in work. The people of Bronson have evidently made up their minds that the Journal has come to stay, judging from the advertising and job printing patronage that Waggott is favored with. His subscription list too is increasing every week and the outlook is certainly very favorable for him. As we completed our Bronson visit so expeditiously we concluded to take the night train west and go on to Sturgis. Took the [illegible] at twelve o'clock and rode down to the depot half a mile distant. Strange to say, the express train was late. The waiting room at the depot was open and a lamp dimly burning, but no railroad official was in sight, nor was there another passenger in waiting. We paced the room, committed the show cards to memory, copied all the time tables, called to mind all the stories of midnight murders we had ever read, emptied the satchel and repacked it half a dozen times, and accomplished the whole thing in just two hours. We fully appreciated the fact that we were not sleeping at Smith's Hotel in Hillsdale. But all late trains finally arrive and at two o'clock Wednesday morning, the locomotive head light flashed down the track. We got aboard somehow, and at three o'clock alighted at Sturgis and proceeded to the Elliott House.

At Sturgis we changed roads, taking the Grand Rapids and Indiana road north; after a two hour's nap at Sturgis we took the express train on this road. It was a very cool pleasant morning and we enjoyed the ride very much to Kalamazoo, where we halted twenty minutes for breakfast. We then proceeded north, arriving at Grand Rapids at ten o'clock A. M., where we stopped off for the balance of the day. Put up at the Morton House. This is a first-class hotel with all modern conveniences, including the electric light. Upon stepping out upon the street after dinner we met Frank Howard. Frank is now living at Lowell and was attending the races at Grand Rapids as a member of the Lowell band. This band has the reputation of being one of the best in the state, and its services are much sought after. Called at the Democrat office and found Col. Messmore feeling happy. He has just purchased an entire new dress for his paper, which arrived that day, and the boys were busily engaged dupacking and laying it. The Democrat is the leading morning daily in the Grand River Valley, is ably conducted, and ranks as the principal Democratic organ in Western Michigan. The office has commodious quarters on Lyons street, which is rapidly becoming one of the business thoroughfares of the city. We spent an hour there very pleasantly. Next called at the Eagle office. The Eagle is the leading evening daily of the city and the Republican organ of the Grand River Valley. It is located in a fine building on Lyons street about one block from the Democrat. The Eagle job printing department has a complete outfit and a large patronage. While straying back to the hotel, we encountered Judge White, of Ludington, who was about to take the train for home. Judge White is an Ann Arbor classmate of ours. He is doing well at Ludington, having built up a fine reputation and a lucrative practice there. After supper we met A.D. Brown, formerly of Adrian, our old piano tuner. He is now at work in Bullock's Grand Rapids music house, which is situated in the Morton House block, and expects to stay there permanently. That evening we took in the Sangerfest. It was the closing concert of the fest, and the hall, which was a temporary structure capable of holding 3000 persons, was crowded. It was estimated that 1500 people were turned away. The program was a splendid one. Among the specialties was a cornet solo by Prof. Boos which was finely executed and brought out a roaring encore. After the concert we shook the dust of Grand Rapids from our feet and took the train north.

Arriving at Cadillac at five o'clock Thursday morning, we alighted to spend the day there and the first man we met was Dove Terry of Tecumseh. He had come up on the same train from Grand Rapids and stopped off at Cadillac to hunt up work. So we struck company right from home. We proceeded to the American Hotel and got a good breakfast, and then started out to explore the new town. Cadillac is about the same size as Tecumseh, but they do a much larger business, as there are some very heavy lumber firms there. We called at the News office to interview Bro. C. T. Chapin but did not find him as he had gone to Petoskey with the press excursion. The Northwestern Mich. Press Association had met at Cadillac the day before, and at the close of the session the members present had gone on an excursion to Petoskey and Mackinac. We regretted this slip very much as we should have enjoyed a day's visit with Chapin exceedingly. With Terry for a companion we then took a tour of the large saw mills, visiting Cummers', and Cobb, Mitchell & Co's. Also visited James Haines' planing mill. This is the most complete establishment of the kind we ever saw. Mr. Haines deals in dressed siding, flooring, mouldings, &c., selling the same at wholesale in carload lots. His mill will turn out six or eight carloads a day. The shavings are collected by blowers and conveyed into the back yard where they are burned, so that the mill is kept entirely free from shavings and rubbish. Mr. Haines has commenced work upon another large planing mill which he proposes to build on the other side of Clam Lake. The engine and boiler which he bought here and took from the Merritt & Stretch planing mill will be used in his new establishment. At three o'clock P. M. we took the train north again and proceeded to Petoskey. Just before leaving we struck Chas. H. Drury, formerly of Adrian. He is now a member of the firm of Sampson & Drury, who have started a new hardware store at Cadillac. Mr. Drury seems to be well fixed with good business prospects. We arrived at Petoskey at 8 o'clock that evening and repaired to the Occidental. The first man we met after supper was H. J. Corbus, the track master on our division of the Jackson Branch. He had gone to Petoskey to escape hay fever and was succeeding without an effort. He intended to remain there until the 10th or 15th of September.

Friday morning came with a gentle, pleasant rain which was most welcome after the dry, dusty weather of the week.

After breakfast we started out to find our acquaintances. Soon met Philip Totten, whose family now live at Petoskey, and by his help we found where the Misses Monaghan, Mrs. G. W. Marsden, Willie and Anna Pennington boarded. Manie and Janie Monaghan were boarding at Mr. E. M. Smith's, of the firm of Smith Bros. Mrs. Marsden was at Mrs. Gilbert's two doors south; Willie and Anna Pennington were at the bank house on the first block east, while Philip Totten lived on first block west. We took rooms at Mrs. Gilbert's. Then called at the newspaper offices. The Petoskey City Record is a live six column quarto sheet, well conducted and printed, and claims the largest circulation of any paper in Northern Michigan. The Emmett County Democrat is the other paper. It is located in fine rooms opposite the post office and is a well edited sheet. The newspapers of Petoskey are certainly a credit to the city. The town itself is laid out on the south shore of Little Traverse bay upon a succession of bluffs rising up from the lake. It is somewhat rough in appearance now, as the town is new, but the peculiar formation of the site affords scores of beautiful locations for residences that will overlook the bay. The city is well provided with hotels and is now putting in water works at an expense of $15,000. A large Union School Building will be erected at an early day. Petoskey is located in the center of a chain of resorts, and is destined to become a very popular watering place. "Beautiful for situation," with a cool temperature in summer and a warm one in winter, and with a climate that affords help to all classes of invalids, it will certainly become at an early day, a noted pleasure resort and health sanitarium. Bay View, the Methodist camp meeting resort, is only one mile distant on the east. We-que-ton-sing, the Presbyterian resort, Harbor Springs and Harbor point are located directly across the bay. Charlevoix and the Baptist resort are sixteen miles distant up the shore. A daily line of steamers run between Mackinac and Traverse City, touching at Petoskey, and the Buffalo and Chicago line of propellers halt at Petoskey also. In summer small steamers make several trips daily around the bay. Therefore the city has splendid water communications, and in winter it has a daily outlet over the Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R. And right here we deem it proper to state that we were very agreeably surprised in the accomodations afforded by this line. People at a distance are apt to suppose that the G. R. & I road runs nearly the entire length of its line through the woods, and hence is not well equipped, but they are grandly mistaken. Their road bed is in fine condition and their passenger and palace coaches are fully equal to those of any railroad in the west. The company have recently erected a magnificent building for their general offices at Grand Rapids. The rapid development of Northern Michigan is giving this road a great business impetus, and its lumber trade is already immense. The company still has large tracts of land unsold in the northwestern counties which afford excellent chances for settlers to buy a good home cheap. So far as our observation extends we should much prefer to start life on a good hard wood farm in Northern Michigan, than on the wind swept prairies of the western states. Persons who design purchasing a farm in a new country had better write to the Land Dept. of the G. R. & I. road at Grand Rapids for pamphlets and circulars.

But we are waxing eloquent over Northern Michigan, forgetting the thread of our story. Friday afternoon we took a boat ride to Harbor Point and Bay View. Called at Col. Church's cottage on Harbor point but did not find him at home. Saturday, all the Tecumseh party went on the Lady Washington's excursion trip to Charlevoix and Ironton. Found Miss Gussie Hall and her brother's family on the boat, they having arrived at Petoskey by the "Inland Route" the evening before. Found Alvinza Whelan and Mrs. Ed. Wiesner stopping at the Ingleside House in Charlevoix. They find the climate just the thing to keep off hay fever.

On Sunday afternoon we took a stroll with Philip Totten around the city, and examined the water works. The water will be pumped from a huge well on the shore of the lake into a reservoir on the highest bluff east of town, and the power will be furnished by a dam thrown across the Bear river. Saw the place where Petoskey lived, where his wigwam stood, and the old Indian council ground in front of the house. Returning we met J. R. Gilkey of Adrian who has been rusticating at Petoskey for several weeks, and found M. E. Saulsbury, the old supervisor of Morenci, and Dr. Williams of Hanover, Jackson county, both of whom are living near Mr. Tottens. In the evening we had a very pleasant visit with Hon. C. L. Fraser, an old Ann Arbor class mate of ours. He has been to Europe one year, and four years in Florida since leaving the University, but finally settled down in Petoskey about five years ago and bought ten acres of land which he has since platted into village lots. He is getting a fine start in life and represented his district in the last Legislature. On Monday we had a boat ride around the bay and visited the old Indian church and Aunt Margaret at Harbor Springs; called on old Chief Petoskey at his son's store. Petoskey is 103 yrs. old, and his son is a sprightly young man of 73 winters. Among the new acquaintances we found, were Mrs. A. G. Hickman and her son George from Dayton, Ohio, and we hope to meet them again at Petoskey next summer. Tuesday morning we took the 6:30 train on the G. R. & I road, and after the hottest day's travel we ever had on the railroad we arrived at Sturgis almost roasted at eight o'clock in the evening. The next morning found us on a Lake Shore train, and Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock found us home again. Some portions of the trip were very tedious owing to the sultry weather, but the days spent at Petoskey were delightful, and the trip as a whole was a very pleasant one. We are fully resolved to go again next summer and stay longer.

ONE of the leading features of the coming county fair will be the band tournament. Bands entering for the prizes should make their entry at least twenty days before the opening of the fair. One hundred dollars will be paid in premiums as follows:—1st, $40; 2d, $30; 3d, $20; 4th, $10.—The band receiving the first prize will be expected to furnish music the fourth day of the fair.

NEW advertisements are coming in with a rush. The patrons of the HERALD should read our advertising columns all through this week.

WASHTENAW county fair October 4th to 7th. The committees are at work and expect to make the fair this season a success in every respect.

MRS. J. C. MURRAY, of Jamesport, Mo., who has been spending the summer with her parents in Tecumseh will return to her western home in a few days.

DR. GRAY started yesterday for Colorado, where he intends to locate. Good luck to you Doc. and we hope you may come back and see us some day again.

THE friends of the Raisin Valley M. E. church on Wednesday eve. Aug. 31st, give a festival for the benefit of Pastor Pardington. Quite a large sum was realized.

CURRY & BOOTS have their new tonsorial parlors,—the store lately vacated by Joe Wilson,—finely fitted up. They have the nobbiest barber shop we have seen in many a day.

REV. C. C. SINK occupies the pulpit next Sabbath evening at the M. E. church, Ridgeway, by request of the Pastor, Mr. Field, who will be absent in attendance at the conference.

REV. GEORGE FIELD, Pastor of the Ridgeway M. E. church, will be compelled by chronic throat difficulty to retire from the pastorate at the coming session of the Detroit Conference.

PROF. WEDELES gave a very pleasant Piano Recital at the residence of Wm. McCowen the other evening. The Prof. plays finely and all present enjoyed the music very much. His rendition of heavy selections, without notes, was perfect and almost wonderful.

THE removal of the President to Long Branch was successfully accomplished, and his symptoms have been improving since his arrival. Let us hope that the cool sea breezes of the Atlantic will so invigorate his debilitated system as to start him on the pathway of final recovery.

PHILANDER BALDWIN, who lives on A. K. Waldron's west farm, has just received a pension, the arrears running since 1865. He went to Detroit last Monday and drew the cash in person, being the snug little sum of $1158. Philander is a happy man now, but the amount he received is no more than he deserved.

Blissfield Advance: Yesterday afternoon the fire bell had occasion to ring out its first alarm, the cause being the burning of the house of John Beemer. The fire engine was promptly on the ground, but there was a great delay in getting water and the house was totally destroyed. All of the contents were saved. The fire originated from a defective chimney. Loss about $400; insured.

W. H. SINK has returned from his trip to Wisconsin much improved in health. He went to the Hygeia Mineral Spring. Bicarbonate of lime and Bicarbonate of magnesia are the principal ingredients of the water. It is an excellent remedy in a large class of diseases; and a person can drink it in large quantities without any unpleasant effects. Mr. Sink ordered a barrel of the water shipped home, as he proposes to keep a supply on hand.

A CHINA WEDDING.

The Twentieth Marriage Anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. R. S. Pardington.

Twenty years of married life. The anniversary appropriate to this event was celebrated by Rev. and Mrs. R. S Pardington and their friends at the M. E. church in this village, on Monday evening last. Preparations for the occasion had been progressing for several days and the entire festivities passed off most happily and pleasantly. The church was trimmed with plants and bouquets, under the direction of Mrs. R. Crosby. Suspended over the pulpit was a beautiful marriage bell, made of evergreens and trimmed with white flowers, with the figures "20" thereon, presented by Mrs. Charles Lawrence and Mrs. L. Ketcham. A fruit stand of curious design, arranged by Dr. Hause and the committee, attracted much attention.

As soon as the guests were all assembled, the following program was presented in the main auditorium of the church, which was completely filled. Mr. John J. Neeley had charge of the exercises:

Organ Voluntary.
Prayer by Rev. H. Shepard.
Address by Rev. G. W. Lowe, of the First M. E. church of Detroit.

The address was admirable in tone and fitness to the occasion, and we are permitted to give it in full below:

In each human life that has been at all eventful, are days which of necessity are ever regarded as anniversary days. And whether the intervening time is made up of sunshine or shadow, of joy or sorrow, these days are pivotal points, around which with the deepest emotions, and the truest affections of the soul, we love in thought to linger.

To such a day, my dear brother and sister Pardington, you have now come; and we your friends assemble here to congratulate you, and celebrate with you this the twentieth anniversary of your married life. To my mind there is something very appropriate, very impressive, and beautiful, in thus recalling and perpetuating the memory of the day when your two lives were made one; made one, not merely as the result of a legal transaction, but by the blessing of Him, in whose name alone, this relation in the truest sense, is made to exist.

The celebrating of this important event is but in harmony with the custom of almost every nation, and people, and in every age of our world. Among the ancient Greeks and Romans, the wedding day and its recurring anniversaries, were celebrated with great pomp and show, and among many, and even in modern times, with impressive religious observances. But we meet on this happy occasion, not merely to perpetuate a custom which has come down to us from the earliest times; not merely to imitate the example of others, or because it is fashionable; but because, my dear brother and sister, of our regard for you, and the respect we would show you as the servants of Christ.

Twenty years of married life have passed and gone. Looking back over the journey you have made, and the years which have passed so happily, you observe many changes in these years. You remember the group of friends, the smiling faces, the warm kiss of affection and the "God bless you" which came from quivering lips, and with a tremulous voice, as other friends congratulated you twenty years ago. But some of them are no more on earth. The circle of friends and youthful companions has been broken. With this day you recall the scenes of that day. The picture is before you; and the mists which gather as the years go by, shall not conceal it from your vision. But as you look back from the point you have reached through these years, there is much that gladdens your hearts, and gives you courage to struggle on with patience and heroism till your sun shall go down in the west, and the end is reached.

We can scarcely suppose, that all the hopes that your young hearts cherished twenty years ago, as you entered life's journey together, have been realized; for early life is the season of great confidence and high expectation. The young mind is joyous over the prospect which lies before it, but the dream of life is never realized. The imagination is apt to take in too much, and the mind of the young is apt to be too confiding; but I need not tell you that the life which is consecrated to God, is always a success.—And need I tell you that those who are capable of setting up a firm purpose on the basis of things as they are, who mark with a vigilant eye and seize with a firm hand all the possibilities of their actual situation, shall ascend the elevations of society, and be honored of God and of men? Yes, such shall surely win in the race of life.

With the flush of youth upon your cheeks, and hearts full of hope, you left home and dear ones to enter upon the great work to which you were called of God. With this day, you naturally look back over the years that have come and gone, and at the road, in which, in the providence of God you have walked; and this tho't comes to you as the sweetest of all.—The God who called you in youth to enter upon this work of self denial, and toil, has been with you to crown your labors with abundant success.—And the successes of the past brightens the past. The souls you have won for Christ, the help and courage your words have brought to, others, ready to faint by the way, brings to you a satisfaction and peace which the homeless Itinerant and his faithful wife alone understand. So far as this life is concerned, this in a large measure is their reward. And this, my dear brother and sister, is yours to enjoy, as with this day you look back over twenty years of labor and sacrifice.

Your journey is well begun, and the road seems, I doubt not, very plain before you. It may not lead through scenes of beauty, and brightness at all times; this you can scarcely expect.—Your feet may grow weary in the way, your hearts may often be sad, and with tearful eyes you may often ask, why are these things so? You are well aware at least, that life is not all sunshine. And that a cloudless day with all the beauty it reveals to us, when sweet birds are singing, and soft winds fan our brow, and bring us the sweet perfume of flowers which bloom along our way, is by no means the emblem of even the truest life.

But it is always best to be hopeful, and look on the bright side. And this, I know, you are both inclined to do; and this is well. Sorrow may cripple, and almost crush the soul, but hope gives to such natures new life.—It "hangs the rainbow on the darkest cloud, in all the chaste sparklings of an angel from immortal glory." It turns the darkness of to-day into sunshine to-morrow; and to those who look on the bright side, hope is ever as a fascinating form before their eyes, and with a wreath of flowers to crown the child of earthly disappointments.

My brother and sister, we who have known you through the years of your married life, wonder not at the sunshine always in your home. You would have it. And, my brother, I remember when your health was failing, and the outlook in that direction was somewhat discouraging; you were still hopeful and cheerful,—and the good wife God gave you was no more willing to yield to discouragement than yourself. Such lives must flow on through many scenes of brightness. And God bless the wife who brings so much joy and brightness to the home and life,—who shares so heroically the lot of a methodist preacher, consenting to a homeless life, and the sacrifices and labor connected with such a life; who guards with such jealous care every interest connected with her husband's success.

And now, my brother and sister, while we desire for you all possible happiness and success, and earnestly pray that in the future, as in the past, your days may be filled up with usefulness, and your lives flow on smoothly and sweetly; we desire the same for your two sons whom God hath given you and of whom you may be justly proud. That the one over whom you have watched so tenderly, may be fully restored, is the desire and prayer of every heart. May he long be spared to you; and Arthur and George not only call you blessed, but be your pride and comfort in declining years, as now.

Bro. Pardington, we were classmates long ago; and much of the pleasant past comes to my thoughts to-night. We both remember the days of recreation at the dear old home we have from the beginning of our ministry known familiarly as "Aunt Emily's." But there is one thought which brings a feeling of sadness, and it is awakened as we ask, Where are the members of our class? There were ten. One has gone to his reward on high. Arthur is at his post and gives us one of the best Advocates of the church. The health of some have failed, and they have retired. Only you and I remain in the regular work. May there be a re-union in the sweet bye-and-bye. And now, my brother and sister, I bid you God speed. May you live to celebrate your silver wedding, and may we all be there; yea, your golden wedding, away on the down-hill side of life.—Should you be brought safely to that time, other friends will greet you, and other scenes surround you. Again we say, God bless you, and may your way grow brighter and brighter till the end is reached; and may you be cheered by the thought when "struggling the goal of life to win, that just beyond the shores of time, the better years begin."

Address by Rev. Wm. Grandy. In behalf of the assembled guests he extended their congratulations, and hoped that Rev. and Mrs. Pardington might be favored with many more years of pleasure and prosperity. It was full of earnest words.

Presentation of the gifts by Dr. R. B. House. His remarks were brief but exceedingly appropriate and they were well received.

Rev. Mr. Pardington responded very happily.

The guests were then invited to the chapel room below, where an elegant collation was served by the ladies of the M. E. church. Nearly three hundred and fifty guests sat down to the tables. This ended the formal portion of the festivities, but many of the friends remained and passed an hour in social converse and in admiring the beautiful presents which had been given in such profusion. The array of gifts was very large and costly, aggregating in value over $400,—a list of which is presented:

An elegant set of bed room crockery; one doz solid silver spoons; breast pin; silver pie knife; berry spoon; magnifying glass; an elegant willow rocker; marble top table; large linen table spread; twelve linen napkins; chair tidy; two breakfast cups and saucers; fruit plates and water pitcher; card case; three large vases; statuary; two vases of unique design; china bed-room set; china breakfast set; one doz. china ice cream dishes; silver bouquet holder; two silver napkin rings; scarf pin and match safe to George; gilt-edged china bed-room set; wash-bowl and pitcher; unique flower vase; french plate hand glass; gold sleeve buttons; silver butter knife; gold and silver coins; gold eye glass chain; book; silver fruit knife; feather duster; silver card receiver; box of flowers and photo; miniature cradle; a tidy.

We omit the names of the donors, hoping our readers will pardon us therefor, as we have no space available for publishing the census list of Tecumseh.

Mr. Pardington's twentieth anniversary will be a red letter day in his life's calendar. We claim the privilege of adding our congratulations to those of his church and personal friends and hope that he may be a resident among us for many years to come.

THE welcome sound of the school bell is heard again.

THE MILLS BLOCK.

The Last and Most Elegant Addition to the Business Buildings of Tecumseh.

When it became known last spring that A. W. Mills had bought the two vacant lots on the corner east of Hopkins' Photograph rooms people made up their minds at once that his purchase meant "business", and they have not been disappointed. In less than six months from the time the purchase was made an elegant two story block has arisen on the old unsightly site which has lain unimproved for years, and two more splendid stores are added to the business facilities of Tecumseh. As the block is now about finished and the two stores are occupied we consider this an opportune time to give our readers a detailed description of the property.

Mr. Mills, at the outset, did what every builder ought to do; he procured a competent architect to draft a plan and specifications for the building.—He then knew exactly how much and what kind of material would be needed, and in making his contracts for work he made the specifications in every case the basis of the contract.—Mr. A. C. Varney, of Detroit, was the architect employed and it is needless to say that this preliminary portion of the work was well done. The building is forty one feet on Chicago street by ninety feet on Ottawa street. The lower story is thirteen feet in the clear and the upper story twelve feet. A hall eight feet wide runs the entire length of the upper floor.

There are transoms over all the doors leading from this hall, and all the sash in the upper story are supported by weights. The windows are eight feet in highth, each window having but two panes of glass.

The brick are cherry red sand brick made by A. Wagner, of Dearborn, Mich. J. S. Norton & Co., of Toledo, furnished the galvanized iron work and roofing. Salmon Crane, of Tecumseh, did all the carpenter work and furnished all the lumber. A. Detroyer, of Detroit, did the mason work. Hoag & Neel, of Toledo, furnished the plate glass. The window awnings were purchased of G. W. Sellers, of Toledo.

The exterior of the block with its plate glass windows, 70x130 inches, red brick finish and elaborate galvanized iron cornice, presents a splendid appearance, and would do credit to a city of twenty thousand inhabitants, while the interior is finished to correspond. Two stores front on Chicago street. The west one, seventeen by seventy feet, is occupied by Joe Wilson, and the rooms overhead are used by him for a dwelling. The corner store, twenty-three feet by seventy in size, is occupied by Kies Bros. At the north end of the building is a store, facing Ottawa street, which Mr. Mills reserves for his own use in the book business. The front room of this store will be used as an office, and the rear part for a packing room. The latter room has a large door opening out upon the alley, so that goods can be handled from dray to packing room and vice versa with the least possible inconvenience. The room over Mr. Mills' store will be occupied by a tailor shop in connection with Kies Bros.' store.

There are six rooms over the corner store which will make a delightful residence or they can be used for offices. The building has a liberal supply of both hard and soft water on the second floor, and both floors are provided with out-door closets. None but the very best material has been used in the construction of the building. The total cost of the property, including lot, building, furnishings and everything will aggregate about $12,000, but even at that figure he will be able to rent it so as to realize a fair income on his investment.

Mr. Mills has reason to feel proud over the marked success of his business venture, and the citizens of Tecumseh owe him a vote of thanks for his enterprise. He has made his money wholly outside of Tecumseh, and has invested it in Tecumseh in substantial business improvements.—We believe he will never have cause to repent of his investment.

After making an inspection of the building, we dropped in to see Kies Brothers and look over their stock of clothing. The furniture and fixtures in their new store are of very neat design, and are a great assistance in making a fine display of their goods. The extra round windows on the east side of the store give additional light which will be a great convenience in dark weather in selecting fine goods.

he firm is putting in a stock of goods to fully correspond with the elegant store they occupy. They design to keep a full line of ready made clothing, gent.' furnishing goods, hats and caps and trunks. In addition to these they will pay more attention than heretofore to custom tailoring. Their work will be done by Jas. M. Jones, who has rooms on the second floor of the same block. Their store was finished off under their directions and expressly for their use. The public are cordially invited to call and inspect, what is claimed by the firm to be, the most novel and best appointed clothing house in the county of Lenawee.

Joe Wilson, as we have already stated, occupies the west store of the block. This store was finished off expressly for the boot and shoe trade.—The west side is fitted with shelves which are filled with fine goods, and the east side is fitted with twenty-seven drawers for boots. These drawers or apartments have drop doors and each drawer will hold one case of boots. New goods are arriving daily, and he has the largest and most complete stock he ever carried. Special attention will be given to custom work. The shop room in the rear will be in charge of James Moff, which is a guarantee that this part of the business will be kept on the top shelf. Joe wants all his friends to call and see him.

DIED.

OWEN—At her late residence in the township of Clinton, on Wednesday, Aug. 17, 1881, Mrs. Mary Owen, aged 76 years, one month and ten days.

Mrs. Owen was born in Suffield, Connecticut, July 14th, 1805. She came to Clinton in 1835, and on July 14th, of the following year, she was married to Henry Owen, formerly of Ulster county, N. Y., who came to Clinton in the year 1832. The same year they moved upon their farm west of the village of Clinton, where they continued to live in harmony for 44 years, when the marriage relation was broken by the hand of death, Mr. Owen passing peacefully over the river on Aug. 1st, 1880, just one year and 23 days in advance of his bereaved companion.

Mrs. Owen, and her husband, united with the congregational church in this village April 30th, 1843, and retained their membership until death removed them to the church triumphant. God gave to her two children, Henry C. Owen and Elizabeth Owen, now the wife of B. J. Wells, both of whom are living and deeply mourn her loss.

Mrs. Owen was a consistent christian; her many deeds of kindness toward the poor endeared her to all. Remembering the Master's injunctions, she found delight in feeding the hungry and caring for the wants of the needy. Conscious that her pilgrimage was nearly ended she improved every opportunity to minister to the needy, and faithfully performed her mission.

Notwithstanding her failing health and impaired ability to do for herself, she was ever considerate of others' feeling, and oft refrained from asking others to minister to her wants, when it would have been beneficial to her had she done so. Unconscious of the rapid approach of death, and knowing of her daughter's poor health, she was not called or did not arrive at the bedside until her mother had crossed the river.

Since the death of her husband her affections centered more than ever upon her children, whom she loved as only a mother can love. Since the hour of her widowhood she has continued to live with her son Henry, who did all in his power to make her life pleasant, and kindly ministered to her wants until the hour of her death. He has the heartfelt sympathy of all in his bereavement. The church mourns her loss while conscious she has entered into rest. The funeral services were held at her late residence, Rev. Geo. E. Wilson officiating. A large concourse of people followed her to her grave. She was buried by the side of her husband in the beautiful cemetry on the banks of the river Raisin. Thus another weary pilgrim has found rest in the grave.

A Ten Day's Vacation and How It Was Enjoyed.

On Monday, Aug. 22d, with grip sack and overcoat in hand, we took the morning train south, and set out for somewhere to enjoy a few days' recreation. After a few moments' stop at Adrian we pushed on to Hudson, where we alighted to make a few calls. We called upon the Gazette and Post, L. H. Salsbury and T. J. Hiller. Three out of the quartette were away from home. Friend Schermerhorn was down among the Hoosiers doing missionary work, Scarrett was off in the rural districts looking after pumpkins and delinquent subscribers, while Salsbury was wrestling with law and a Justice court jury somewhere in the vicinity of Devils Lake. Justice Hiller was at home, and up to his ears in law suits and hay fever. He did not complain of dull times, having on the average about one law suit a day and two on Sunday. We got a good square dinner at the Comstock House and took the one o'clock train for Hillsdale. D. C. Le Baron was with us from Adrian to Hillsdale, having started out in the morning on a business trip west. Arriving at Hillsdale we put up at the "best house on the road," Smith's Hotel. Fred Pocklington, an old Tecumseh boy is running the bus for this hotel, and of course we made ourselves at home at once. We put in that afternoon and evening to good advantage. First took in the newspaper offices. Bro. Tallman is located in a very pleasant room "on the point," where he has plenty of light on the subject. He is putting in a new job press, and his business seems to be in a prosperous condition. Bro. Farnum's Business seems to be doing a good business also. He has formed a congenial partnership between pills and "pi" and is running both branches with success. "Harv" Rawlson keeps the Standard well up to the standard of the past. He goes to press on Monday evening, and we dropped in at that time, when all hands are pressed into the work. His office is very similar in arrangement and outfit to the HERALD, and he is evidently enjoying a good patronage. We called at the office of the Michigan Mutual Benefit Association, and found friend Skinner flourishing. He was about starting out on a week's trip. His company he says is prospering; new members are joining daily. After supper we met Dr. J.C. Snyder, who kindly showed us about town a little. Had a pleasant interview with Col. Knickerbocker, Judge Janes and several of the leading business men of Hillsdale. Had a splendid little visit of an hour's duration with Dr. R. A. Everett. "Rob" Everett, he was called when he went to school with us at the "old University" here in Tecumseh. He is now settled in a beautiful home with an interesting family, and a lucrative medical practice. At eleven o'clock we went to the train to go west, but we were destined to wait. There had been a smash up near Toledo and no one knew when the train would arrive, if at all. So we returned to the Hotel and left faithful Fred at the depot to come up and awaken us when the train got to Hudson. DeLos LeBaron was going to Jonesville on the same train. We awoke at six o'clock the next morning and upon going down to the office, found that the train had gone through three hours before. The clerk, with tears in his eyes, related his experience of the night before. He himself, the Bus runner, LeBaron and two other drummers, pounded, hammered, kicked and scratched our chamber door at least fifteen minutes to awaken us, but to no purpose. Morpheus had his grip on and refused to let go. The neighbors on the next block were all aroused from their slumbers, and the night watchman at the depot came rushing up, supposing the hotel must be on fire. We had resolved to sue the proprietor for damages, and administer a dose of rawhide to the clerk, but after listening to his explanatory remarks, we concluded that discretion was the better part of valor, paid our bill, seized our baggage and quietly stole away. Upon arriving at the depot we found that the next train went east instead of west, but as our trip was one for recreation it made no difference about the points of compass. So we waited an hour for the train and then ran down to Pittsford to get breakfast. The hotel at Pittsford is a well kept country hotel, where we procured a wholesome breakfast and got wide awake. At half past nine another train arrived going west. We boarded this train and went to Coldwater. Arriving there we put up at our old favorite quarters, the Southern Michigan, where we always feel at home. After a good square mid-day meal we started out for some more recreation. Paid the Sentinel office a visit. Bro. Culver is well located in convenient rooms and his paper is improving every week in appearance, and increasing in circulation. The Democrats of Branch county have an excellent organ in the Sentinel and one which they should take pride in supporting. We then paid the Republican office a call, and found Mr. Aldrich, one of the proprietors, to be one of our old Ann Arbor acquaintances. The Republican occupies a two story building about the size of the HERALD building, and the office throughout, in presses, material, and convenience is almost a counterpart of ours. The Republican is now issued as a semi-weekly, and is one one of the best conducted newspapers in Southern Michigan. It also enjoys a large job printing patronage. We then found our whilom railroad canvasser, S. S. Scovill, who conducted the T. & M. canvass here last summer. Mr. Scovill has a beautiful residence on one of the best streets in Coldwater, and is withal quite a successful horticulturalist. He has 18 varieties of grapes and 13 varieties of pears in his garden. Mr. S. is a firm believer in the T. & M. R. R. He is confident that it will be built, although he is at a loss to explain the present delay. We enjoyed an hour's ride about the village after his fast horse, and then took a freight train for Bronson. The freight was one of those quiet leisurely trains, about two hours behind schedule time, so we arrived at Bronson about eight o'clock in the evening. Went out to find Bro. Waggott, and soon hunted him out in the Journal office head over heels in work. The people of Bronson have evidently made up their minds that the Journal has come to stay, judging from the advertising and job printing patronage that Waggott is favored with. His subscription list too is increasing every week and the outlook is certainly very favorable for him. As we completed our Bronson visit so expeditiously we concluded to take the night train west and go on to Sturgis. Took the bus at twelve o'clock and rode down to the depot half a mile distant. Strange to say, the express train was late. The waiting room at the depot was open and a lamp dimly burning, but no railroad official was in sight, nor was there another passenger in waiting. We paced the room, committed the show cards to memory, copied all the time tables, called to mind all the stories of midnight murders we had ever read, emptied the satchel and repacked it half a dozen times, and accomplished the whole thing in just two hours. We fully appreciated the fact that we were not sleeping at Smith's Hotel in Hillsdale. But all late trains finally arrive and at two o'clock Wednesday morning, the locomotive head light flashed down the track. We got aboard somehow, and at three o'clock alighted at Sturgis and proceeded to the Elliott House.

At Sturgis we changed roads, taking the Grand Rapids and Indiana road north; after a two hour's nap at Sturgis we took the express train on this road. It was a very cool pleasant morning and we enjoyed the ride very much to Kalamazoo, where we halted twenty minutes for breakfast. We then proceeded north, arriving at Grand Rapids at ten o'clock A. M., where we stopped off for the balance of the day. Put up at the Morton House. This is a first-class hotel with all modern conveniences, including the electric light. Upon stepping out upon the street after dinner we met Frank Howard. Frank is now living at Lowell and was attending the races at Grand Rapids as a member of the Lowell band. This band has the reputation of being one of the best in the state, and its services are much sought after. Called at the Democrat office and found Col. Messmore feeling happy. He has just purchased an entire new dress for his paper, which arrived that day, and the boys were busily engaged unpacking and laying it. The Democrat is the leading morning daily in the Grand River Valley, is ably conducted, and ranks as the principal Democratic organ in Western Michigan. The office has commodious quarters on Lyons street, which is rapidly becoming one of the business thoroughfares of the city. We spent an hour there very pleasantly. Next called at the Eagle office. The Eagle is the leading evening daily of the city and the Republican organ of the Grand River Valley. It is located in a fine building on Lyons street about one block from the Democrat. The Eagle job printing department has a complete outfit and a large patronage. While straying back to the hotel, we encountered Judge White, of Ludington, who was about to take the train for home. Judge White is an Ann Arbor classmate of ours. He is doing well at Ludington, having built up a fine reputation and a lucrative practice there. After supper we met A.D. Brown, formerly of Adrian, our old piano tuner. He is now at work in Bullock's Grand Rapids music house, which is situated in the Morton House block, and expects to stay there permanently. That evening we took in the Sangerfest. It was the closing concert of the fest, and the hall, which was a temporary structure capable of holding 3000 persons, was crowded. It was estimated that 1500 people were turned away. The program was a splendid one. Among the specialties was a cornet solo by Prof. Boos which was finely executed and brought out a roaring encore. After the concert we shook the dust of Grand Rapids from our feet and took the train north.

Arriving at Cadillac at five o'clock Thursday morning, we alighted to spend the day there and the first man we met was Gove Terry of Tecumseh. He had come up on the same train from Grand Rapids and stopped off at Cadillac to hunt up work. So we struck company right from home. We proceeded to the American Hotel and got a good breakfast, and then started out to explore the new town. Cadillac is about the same size as Tecumseh, but they do a much larger business, as there are some very heavy lumber firms there. We called at the News office to interview Bro. C. T. Chapin but did not find him as he had gone to Petoskey with the press excursion. The Northwestern Mich. Press Association had met at Cadillac the day before, and at the close of the session the members present had gone on an excursion to Petoskey and Mackinac. We regretted this slip very much as we should have enjoyed a day's visit with Chapin exceedingly. With Terry for a companion we then took a tour of the large saw mills, visiting Cummers', and Cobb, Mitchell & Co's. Also visited James Haines' planing mill. This is the most complete establishment of the kind we ever saw. Mr. Haines deals in dressed siding, flooring, mouldings, &c., selling the same at wholesale in carload lots. His mill will turn out six or eight carloads a day. The shavings are collected by blowers and conveyed into the back yard where they are burned, so that the mill is kept entirely free from shavings and rubbish. Mr. Haines has commenced work upon another large planing mill which he proposes to build on the other side of Clam Lake. The engine and boiler which he bought here and took from the Merritt & Stretch planing mill will be used in his new establishment. At three o'clock P. M. we took the train north again and proceeded to Petoskey. Just before leaving we struck Chas. H. Drury, formerly of Adrian. He is now a member of the firm of Sampson & Drury, who have started a new hardware store at Caddillac. Mr. Drury seems to be well fixed with good business prospects. We arrived at Petoskey at 8 o'clock that evening and repaired to the Occidental. The first man we met after supper was H. J. Corbus, the track master on our division of the Jackson Branch. He had gone to Petoskey to escape hay fever and was succeeding without an effort. He intended to remain there until the 10th or 15th of September.

Friday morning came with a gentle, pleasant rain which was most welcome after the dry, dusty weather of the week.

After breakfast we started out to find our acquaintances. Soon met Philip Totten, whose family now live at Petoskey, and by his help we found where the Misses Monaghan, Mrs. G. W. Marsden, Willie and Anna Pennington boarded. Manie and Janie Monaghan were boarding at Mr. E. M. Smith's, of the firm of Smith Bros. Mrs. Marsden was at Mrs. Gilbert's two doors south; Willie and Anna Pennington were at the bank house on the first block east, while Philip Totten lived on first block west. We took rooms at Mrs. Gilbert's. Then called at the newspaper offices. The Petoskey City Record is a live six column quarto sheet, well conducted and printed, and claims the largest circulation of any paper in Northern Michigan. The Emmett County Democrat is the other paper. It is located in fine rooms opposite the post office and is a well edited sheet. The newspapers of Petoskey are certainly a credit to the city. The town itself is laid out on the south shore of Little Traverse bay upon a succession of bluffs rising up from the lake. It is somewhat rough in appearance now, as the town is new, but the peculiar formation of the site affords scores of beautiful locations for residences that will overlook the bay. The city is well provided with hotels and is now putting in water works at an expense of $15,000. A large Union School Building will be erected at an early day. Petoskey is located in the center of a chain of resorts, and is destined to become a very popular watering place. "Beautiful for situation," with a cool temperature in summer and a warm one in winter, and with a climate that affords help to all classes of invalids, it will certainly become at an early day, a noted pleasure resort and health sanitarium. Bay View, the Methodist camp meeting resort, is only one mile distant on the east. We-que-ton-sing, the Presbyterian resort, Harbor Springs and Harbor point are located directly across the bay. Charlevoix and the Baptist resort are sixteen miles distant up the shore. A daily line of steamers run between Mackinac and Traverse City, touching at Petoskey, and the Buffalo and Chicago line of propellers halt at Petoskey also. In summer small steamers make several trips daily around the bay. Therefore the city has splendid water communications, and in winter it has a daily outlet over the Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R. And right here we deem it proper to state that we were very agreeably surprised in the accomodations afforded by this line. People at a distance are apt to suppose that the G. R. & I road runs nearly the entire length of its line through the woods, and hence is not well equipped, but they are grandly mistaken. Their road bed is in fine condition and their passenger and palace coaches are fully equal to those of any railroad in the west. The company have recently erected a magnificent building for their general offices at Grand Rapids. The rapid development of Northern Michigan is giving this road a great business impetus, and its lumber trade is already immense. The company still has large tracts of land unsold in the northwestern counties which afford excellent chances for settlers to buy a good home cheap. So far as our observation extends we should much prefer to start life on a good hard wood farm in Northern Michigan than on the wind swept prairies of the western states. Persons who design purchasing a farm in a new country had better write to the Land Dept. of the G. R. & I. road at Grand Rapids for pamphlets and circulars.

But we are waxing eloquent over Northern Michigan, forgetting the thread of our story. Friday afternoon we took to boat ride to Harbor Point and Bay View. Called at Col. Church's cottage on Harbor point but did not find him at home. Saturday, all the Tecumseh party went on the Lady Washington's excursion trip to Charlevoix and Ironton. Found Miss Gussie Hall and her brother's family on the boat, they having arrived at Petoskey by the "Inland Route" the evening before. Found Alvinza Whelan and Mrs. Ed. Wiesner stopping at the Ingleside House in Charlevoix. They find the climate just the thing to keep off hay fever.

On Sunday afternoon we took a stroll with Philip Totten around the city, and examined the water works. The water will be pumped from a huge well on the shore of the lake into a reservoir on the highest bluff east of town, and the power will be furnished by a dam thrown across the Bear river. Saw the place where Petoskey lived, where his wigwam stood, and the old Indian council ground in front of the house. Returning we met J. R. Gilkey of Adrian who has been rusticating at Petoskey for several weeks, and found M.E. Saulsbury, the old supervisor of Morenci, and Dr. Williams of Hanover, Jackson county, both of whom are living near Mr. Tottens. In the evening we had a very pleasant visit with Hon. C. L. Fraser, an old Ann Arbor class mate of ours. He has been to Europe one year, and four years in Florida since leaving the University, but finally settled down in Petoskey about five years ago and bought ten acres of land which he has since platted into village lots. He is getting a fine start in life and represented his district in the last Legislature. On Monday we had a boat ride around the bay and visited the old Indian church and Aunt Margaret at Harbor Springs; called on old Chief Petoskey at his son's store. Petoskey is 103 yrs. old, and his son is a sprightly young man of 73 winters. Among the new acquaintances we found, were Mrs. A. G. Hickman and her son George from Dayton, Ohio, and we hope to meet them again at Petoskey next summer. Tuesday morning we took the 6:30 train on the G. R. & I road, and after the hottest day's travel we ever had on the railroad we arrived at Sturgis almost roasted at eight o'clock in the evening. The next morning found us on a Lake Shore train, and Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock found us home again. Some portions of the trip were very tedious owing to the sultry weather, but the days spent at Petoskey were delightful, and the trip as a whole was a very pleasant one. We are fully resolved to go again next summer and stay longer.

ONE of the leading features of the coming county fair will be the band tournament. Bands entering for the prizes should make their entry at least twenty days before the opening of the fair. One hundred dollars will be paid in premiums as follows:—1st, $40; 2d, $30; 3d, $20; 4th, $10.—The band receiving the first prize will be expected to furnish music the fourth day of the fair.

A CHINA WEDDING.

Twenty years of married life. The anniversary appropriate to this event was celebrated by Rev. and Mrs. R. S. Pardington and their friends at the M. E. church in this village, on Monday evening last. Preparations for the occasion had been progressing for several days and the entire festivities passed off most happily and pleasantly. The church was trimmed with plants and bouquets, under the direction of Mrs. R. Crosby. Suspended over the pulpit was a beautiful marriage bell, made of evergreens and trimmed with white flowers, with the figures "20", thereon; presented by Mrs. Charles Lawrence and Mrs. L. Ketcham. A fruit stand of curious design, arranged by Dr. Hause and the committee, attracted much attention.

As soon as the guests were all assembled, the following program was presented in the main auditorium of the church, which was completely filled. Mr. John J. Neeley had charge of the exercises:

Organ Voluntary.
Prayer by Rev. H. Shepard.
Address by Rev. G. W. Lowe, of the First M. E. church of Detroit. The address was admirable in tone and fitness to the occasion, and we are permitted to give it in full below:

In each human life that has been at all eventful, are days which of necessity are ever regarded as anniversary days. And whether the intervening time is made up of sunshine or shadow, of joy or sorrow, these days are pivotal points, around which with the deepest emotions, and the truest affections of the soul, we love in thought to linger.

To such a day, my dear brother and sister Pardington, you have now come; and we your friends assemble here to congratulate you, and celebrate with you this the twentieth anniversary of your married life. To my mind there is something very appropriate, very impressive, and beautiful, in thus recalling and perpetuating the memory of the day when your two lives were made one; made one, not merely as the result of a legal transaction, but by the blessing of Him, in whose name alone, this relation in the truest sense, is made to exist.

The celebrating of this important event is but in harmony with the custom of almost every nation, and people, and in every age of our world. Among the ancient Greeks and Romans, the wedding day and its recurring anniversaries, were celebrated with great pomp and show, and among many, and even in modern times, with impressive religious observances. But we meet on this happy occasion, not merely to perpetuate a custom which has come down to us from the earliest times; not merely to imitate the example of others, or because it is fashionable; but because, my dear brother and sister, of our regard for you, and the respect we would show you as the servants of Christ.

Twenty years of married life have passed and gone. Looking back over the journey you have made, and the years which have passed so happily, you observe many changes in these years. You remember the group of friends, the smiling faces, the warm kiss of affection and the "God bless you" which came from quivering lips, and with a tremulous voice, as other friends congratulated you twenty years ago. But some of them are no more on earth. The circle of friends and youthful companions has been broken. With this day you recall the scenes of that day. The picture is before you; and the mists which gather as the years go by, shall not conceal it from your vision. But as you look back from the point you have reached through these years, there is much that gladdens your hearts, and gives you courage to struggle on with patience and heroism till your sun shall go down in the west, and the end is reached.

We can scarcely suppose, that all the hopes that your young hearts cherished twenty years ago, as you entered life's journey together, have been realized; for early life is the season of great confidence and high expectation. The young mind is joyous over the prospect which lies before it, but the dream of life is never realized. The imagination is apt to take in too much, and the mind of the young is apt to be too confiding; but I need not tell you that the life which is consecrated to God, is always a success.—And need I tell you that those who are capable of setting up a firm purpose on the basis of things as they are, who mark with a vigilant eye and seize with a firm hand all the possibilities of their actual situation, shall ascend the elevations of society, and be honored of God and of men? Yes, such shall surely win in the race of life.

With the flush of youth upon your cheeks, and hearts full of hope, you left home and dear ones to enter upon the great work to which you were called of God. With this day, you naturally look back over the years that have come and gone, and at the road, in which, in the providence of God you have walked; and this tho't comes to you as the sweetest of all.—The God who called you in youth to enter upon this work of self denial, and toil, has been with you to crown your labors with abundant success.—And the successes of the past brightens the past. The souls you have won for Christ, the help and courage your words have brought to others, ready to faint by the way, brings to you a satisfaction and peace which the homeless Itinerant and his faithful wife alone understand. So far as this life is concerned, this in a large measure is their reward. And this, my dear brother and sister, is yours to enjoy, as with this day you look back over twenty years of labor and sacrifice.

Your journey is well begun, and the road seems, I doubt not, very plain before you. It may not lead through scenes of beauty, and brightness at all times; this you can scarcely expect.—Your feet may grow weary in the way, your hearts may often be sad, and with tearful eyes you may often ask, why are these things so? You are well aware at least, that life is not all sunshine. And that a cloudless day with all the beauty it reveals to us, when sweet birds are singing, and soft winds fan our brow, and bring us the sweet perfume of flowers which bloom along our way, is by no means the emblem of even the truest life.

But it is always best to be hopeful, and look on the bright side. And this, I know, you are both inclined to do; and this is well. Sorrow may cripple, and almost crush the soul, but hope gives to such natures new life.—It "hangs the rainbow on the darkest cloud, in all the chaste sparklings of an angel from immortal glory." It turns the darkness of to-day into sunshine to-morrow; and to those who look on the bright side, hope is ever as a fascinating form before their eyes, and with a wreath of flowers, to crown the child of earthly disappointments.

My brother and sister, we who have known you through the years of your married life, wonder not at the sunshine always in your home. You would have it. And, my brother, I remember when your health was failing, and the outlook in that direction was somewhat discouraging; you were still hopeful and cheerful,—and the good wife God gave you was no more willing to yield to discouragement than yourself. Such lives must flow on through many scenes of brightness. And God bless the wife who brings so much joy and brightness to the home and life,—who shares so heroically the lot of a methodist preacher; consenting to a homeless life, and the sacrifices and labor connected with such a life; who guards with such jealous care every interest connected with her husband's success.

And now, my brother and sister, while we desire for you all possible happiness and success, and earnestly pray that in the future, as in the past, your days may be filled up with usefulness, and your lives flow on smoothly and sweetly; we desire the same for your two sons whom God hath given you and of whom you may be justly proud. That the one over whom you have watched so tenderly, may be fully restored, is the desire and prayer of every heart. May he long be spared to you; and Arthur and George not only call you blessed, but be your pride and comfort in declining years, as now.

Bro. Pardington, we were classmates long ago; and much of the pleasant past comes to my thoughts to-night. We both remember the days of recreation at the dear old home we have from the beginning of our ministry known familiarly as "Aunt Emily's." But there is one thought which brings a feeling of sadness, and it is awakened as we ask, Where are the members of our class? There were ten. One has gone to his reward on high. Arthur is at his post and gives us one of the best Advocates of the church. The health of some have failed, and they have retired. Only you and I remain in the regular work. May there be a re-union in the sweet bye-and-bye. And now, my brother and sister, I bid you God speed. May you live to celebrate your silver wedding, and may we all be there; yea, your golden wedding, away on the down-hill side of life.—Should you be brought safely to that time, other friends will greet you, and other scenes surround you. Again we say, God bless you, and may your way grow brighter and brighter till the end is reached; and may you be cheered by the thought when "struggling the goal of life to win, that just beyond the shores of time, the better years begin."

Address by Rev. Wm. Grandy. In behalf of the assembled guests he extended their congratulations, and hoped that Rev. and Mrs. Pardington might be favored with many more years of pleasure and prosperity. It was full of earnest words.

Presentation of the gifts by Dr. R. B. House. His remarks were brief but exceedingly appropriate and they were well received.

Rev. Mr. Pardington responded very happily.

The guests were then invited to the chapel room below, where an elegant collation was served by the ladies of the M. E. church. Nearly three hundred and fifty guests sat down to the tables. This ended the formal portion of the festivities, but many of the friends remained and passed an hour in social converse and in admiring the beautiful presents which had been given in such profusion. The array of gifts was very large and costly, aggregating in value over $400,—a list of which is presented:

An elegant set of bed room crockery; one doz solid silver spoons; breast pin; silver pie knife; berry spoon; magnifying glass; an elegant willow rocker; marble top table; large linen table spread; twelve linen napkins; chair tidy; two breakfast cups and saucers; fruit plates and water pitcher; card case; three large vases; statuary; two vases of unique design; china bed-room set; china breakfast set; one doz. china ice cream dishes; silver bouquet holder; two silver napkin rings; scarf pin and match safe to George; gilt-edged china bed-room set; wash-bowl and pitcher; unique flower vase; french plate hand glass; gold sleeve buttons; silver butter knife; gold and silver coins; gold eye glass chain; book; silver fruit knife; feather duster; silver card receiver; box of flowers and photo; miniature cradle; a tidy.

We omit the names of the donors, hoping our readers will pardon us therefor, as we have no space available for publishing the census list of Tecumseh.

Mr. Pardington's twentieth anniversary will be a red letter day in his life's calendar. We claim the privilege of adding our congratulations to those of his church and personal friends and hope that he may be a resident among us for many years to come.

THE MILLS BLOCK.

The Last and Most Elegant Addition to the Business Buildings of Tecumseh.

When it became known last spring that A. W. Mills had bought the two vacant lots on the corner east of Hopkins' Photograph rooms people made up their minds at once that his purchase meant "business", and they have not been disappointed. In less than six months from the time the purchase was made an elegant two story block has arisen on the old ungainly site which has lain unimproved for years, and two more splendid stores are added to the business facilities of Tecumseh. As the block is now about finished and the two stores are occupied we consider this an opportune time to give our readers a detailed description of the property.

Mr. Mills, at the outset, did what every builder ought to do; he procured a competent architect to draft a plan and specifications for the building.—He then knew exactly how much and what kind of material would be needed, and in making his contracts for work he made the specifications in every case the basis of the contract.—Mr. A. C. Varney, of Detroit, was the architect employed and it is needless to say that this preliminary portion of the work was well done. The building is forty one feet on Chicago street by ninety feet on Ottawa street. The lower story is thirteen feet in the clear and the upper story twelve feet. A hall eight feet wide runs the entire length of the upper floor.

There are transoms over all the doors leading from this hall, and all the sash in the upper story are supported by weights. The windows are eight feet in highth, each window having but two panes of glass.

The brick are cherry red sand brick made by A. Wagner, of Dearborn, Mich., J. S. Norton & Co., of Toledo, furnished the galvanized iron work and roofing. Salmon Crane, of Tecumseh, did all the carpenter work and furnished all the lumber. A. Detroyer, of Detroit, did the mason work. Hoag & Neel, of Toledo, furnished the plate glass. The window awnings were purchased of G. W. Sellers, of Toledo.

The exterior of the block with its plate glass windows, 70x130 inches, red brick finish and elaborate galvanized iron cornice, presents a splendid appearance, and would do credit to a city of twenty thousand inhabitants, while the interior is finished to correspond. Two stores front on Chicago street. The west one, seventeen by seventy feet, is occupied by Joe Wilson, and the rooms overhead are used by him for a dwelling. The corner store, twenty-three feet by seventy in size, is occupied by Kies Bros. At the north end of the building is a store, facing Ottawa street, which Mr. Mills reserves for his own use in the book business. The front room of this store will be used as an office, and the rear part for a packing room. The latter room has a large door opening out upon the alley, so that goods can be handled from dray to packing room and vice versa with the least possible inconvenience. The room over Mr. Mills' store will be occupied by a tailor shop in connection with Kies Bros.' store.

There are six rooms over the corner store which will make a delightful residence or they can be used for offices. The building has a liberal supply of both hard and soft water on the second floor, and both floors are provided with out-door closets. None but the very best material has been used in the construction of the building. The total cost of the property, including lot, building, furnishings and everything will aggregate about $12,000, but even at that figure he will be able to rent it so as to realize a fair income on his investment.

Mr. Mills has reason to feel proud over the marked success of his business venture, and the citizens of Tecumseh owe him a vote of thanks for his enterprise. He has made his money wholly outside of Tecumseh, and has invested it in Tecumseh in substantial business improvements.—We believe he will never have cause to repent of his investment.

After making an inspection of the building, we dropped in to see Kies Brothers and look over their stock of clothing. The furniture and fixtures in their new store are of very neat design, and are a great assistance in making a fine display of their goods. The extra round windows on the east side of the store give additional light which will be a great convenience in dark weather in selecting fine goods.

he firm is putting in a stock of goods to fully correspond with the elegant store they occupy. They design to keep a full line of ready made clothing, gents' furnishing goods, hats and caps and trunks. In addition to these they will pay more attention than heretofore to custom tailoring. Their work will be done by Jas. M. Jones, who has rooms on the second floor of the same block. Their store was finished off under their directions and expressly for their use. The public are cordially invited to call and inspect, what is claimed by the firm to be, the most novel and best appointed clothing house in the county of Lenawee.

Joe Wilson, as we have already stated, occupies the west store of the block. This store was finished off expressly for the boot and shoe trade.—The west side is fitted with shelves which are filled with fine goods, and the east side is fitted with twenty-seven drawers for boots. These drawers or apartments have drop doors and each drawer will hold one case of boots. New goods are arriving daily, and he has the largest and most complete stock he ever carried. Special attention will be given to custom work. The shop room for the year will be in charge of James Moir, which is a guarantee that this part of the business will be kept on the top shelf. Joe wants all his friends to call and see him.

DIED.

OWEN—At her late residence in the township of Clinton, on Wednesday, Aug. 17, 1881, Mrs. Mary Owen, aged 70 years, one month and ten days.

Mrs. Owen was born in Suffield, Connecticut, July 14th, '1805. She came to Clinton in 1835, and on July 14th, of the following year, she was married to Henry Owen, formerly of Ulster county, N. Y., who came to Clinton in the year 1832. The same year they moved upon their farm west of the village of Clinton, where they continued to live in harmony for 44 years, when the marriage relation was broken by the hand of death, Mr. Owen passing peacefully over the river on Aug. 1st, 1880, just one year and 23 days in advance of his bereaved companion.

Mrs. Owen, and her husband, united with the congregational church in this village April 30th, 1843, and retained their membership until death removed them to the church triumphant. God gave to her two children, Henry C. Owen and Elizabeth Owen, now the wife of B. J. Wells, both of whom are living and deeply mourn her loss.

Mrs. Owen was a consistent christian; her many deeds of kindness toward the poor endeared her to all. Remembering the Master's injunctions, she found delight in feeding the hungry and caring for the wants of the needy. Conscious that her pilgrimage was nearly ended she improved every opportunity to minister to the needy, and faithfully performed her mission.

Notwithstanding her failing health and impaired ability to do for herself, she was ever considerate of others' feeling, and oft refrained from asking others to minister to her wants, when it would have been beneficial to her had she done so. Unconscious of the rapid approach of death, and knowing of her daughter's poor health, she was not called or did not arrive at the bedside until her mother had crossed the river.

Since the death of her husband her affections centered more than ever upon her children, whom she loved as only a mother can love. Since the hour of her widowhood she has continued to live with her son Henry, who did all in his power to make her life pleasant, and kindly ministered to her wants until the hour of her death. He has the heartfelt sympathy of all in his bereavement. The church mourns her loss while conscious she has entered into rest. The funeral services were held at her late residence, Rev. Geo. E. Wilson officiating. A large concourse of people followed her to her grave. She was buried by the side of her husband in the beautiful cemetry on the banks of the river Raisin. Thus another weary pilgrim has found rest in the grave.

HERALD OFFICE.

Future of Our Country.

From the London Telegraph, May 18, 1880.

When, in 1876, the thirteen North American colonies put forth that Declaration of Independence which preluded the birth of a nation, the combined white population inhabiting them did not exceed 2,500,000 souls. Yet they had the courage to throw down the gage of battle to a Power with which, in Daniel Webster's words, "for purposes of foreign conquest and subjugation, Rome, in the height of her glory, was not to be compared; a Power which has dotted the surface of the whole globe with her possessions and military posts, whose morning drum beat, following the sun and keeping company with the hours, circles the earth with one continuous and unbroken strain of martial airs of England." Fourteen years later came, in 1790, the first census of population taken in the United States, and it was found that within the borders of the young nation there were not quite 4,000,000 souls. At the expiration of ten years it appeared, upon taking the second census, that the population was a little more than 5,250,000, having increased between 1790 and 1800 at the rate of 35 per cent. In a short time the tenth census of what has become a mighty people will be taken, and we risk little in saying that, in Joseph Hume's phrase, "the tottle of the whole" will show a population of at least 50,000,000, especially if the emigrants who are now pouring into the United States in vast numbers are not omitted from the calculation. In other words, the population of the great Republic in 1880 will be their population in 1776 multiplied by twenty, and, were it likely that the same ratio of increase could be maintained for another century, the mind of man would sink before the effort of imagining what it is possible for the monster Republic to be in 1980. However boundless the resources of the North American continent may be, it can hardly be expected that the second centenary of the United States will be celebrated by a thousand million human beings, and yet such would be the result of multiplying 50,000,000 by twenty. Anyhow, it is certain that a century hence no such assemblage of men speaking the same language and amenable to the same general traditions of feeling, habit and education, will ever have gathered together upon earth as will then occupy the great Western Continent.

The Agricultural Interest.

We find from the census of 1870, that there were in the United States 12,000,000 male persons engaged in all occupations. Of this number, 6,000,000 were engaged in agriculture. From the same source we learn that the total valuation of all personal and real property for the year was $30,000,000,000. Of this amount, $11,000,000,000 belonged to the agricultural interest. You see that the agriculturalists comprise one-half of the total number of persons engaged in all the various industries of the country; and that, their business has for its capital stock over one-third of the entire wealth of the country. After realizing as best we can how immense is the amount of human and monetary energy used in this business, we naturally might expect some great results. From the report of the Department of Agriculture, we learn that in 1879 the value of our crops,—corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, buckwheat, potatoes, hay, cotton, and tobacco,—was $1,904,000,000. Let us compare this amount with the value of precious metals that have been taken from American mines. From the best authority, we learn that the total value of the yield of the American mines during twenty-seven years, from 1849 to 1875, was $1,617,950,000. You notice that the value of ten of the principle products of the soil for the one year of 1879 was greater than the total value of all the gold and silver obtained from the mines during twenty-seven years of prosperous and feverishly active operations. Let us go further. If we ascertain the value of the various productions of the soil besides the ten staple commodities mentioned, and to that amount add the enormous wealth which is yearly derived from animals and the productions of animals whose sustenance the soil furnishes, we are safe to say that the gross results of the farmer's business for one year is greater than that of all the mining operations of this country since gold was discovered in California in 1849, up to the present time.

Home Education.

The following rules are worthy of being printed in letters of gold, and placed in a conspicuous place in every household:

1. From your children's earliest infancy inculcate the necessity of instant obedience.
2. Unite firmness with gentleness. Let your children always understand that you mean what you say.
3. Never promise them anything unless you are quite sure you can give what you say.
4. If you tell a child to do something, show him how to do it, and see that it is done.
5. Always punish your child for willfully disobeying you, but never punish in anger.
6. Never let them perceive that they vex you, or make you lose your self-command.
7. If they give way to petulance or ill-temper, wait till they are calm, and then gently reason with them on the impropriety of their conduct.
8. Remember that a little present punishment, when the occasion arises, is much more effectual than the threatening of a greater punishment should the fault be renewed.
9. Never give your children anything because they cry for it.
10. On no account allow them to do at one time what you have forbidden, under the same circumstances, at another.
11. Teach them that the only sure and easy way to appear good is to be good.
12. Accustom them to make their little recitals with perfect truth.
13. Never allow tale-bearing.
14. Teach them self-denial; not self-indulgence of an angry and resentful spirit.

It is not only a very expensive medicine, but will ultimately cause the patient to succumb to its powerful influence upon the nervous system. Medical Properties of Eggs.

For burns or scalds, nothing is more soothing than the white of an egg, which may be poured over the wound. It is softer, as a varnish for a burn, than collodion; and, being always at hand, can be applied immediately. It is more cooling than the "sweet oil and cotton" which was formerly supposed to be the surest application to allay the smarting pain. It is the contact with the open air which gives the extreme discomfort experienced from ordinary accidents of the kind. What prevents inflammation is the thing to be at once applied.

The egg is also considered one of the best remedies for dysentery. Beaten up slightly, with or without sugar, and swallowed at a gulp, it tends by its emollient qualities to lessen the inflammation of the stomach and intestines; and by forming a transient coating of those organs, to enable nature to resume her healthful sway over the diseased body. Two, or at most, three eggs per day would be all that is required in ordinary cases; and, since the egg is not merely medicine but food as well, the lighter the diet otherwise, and the quieter the patient is kept, the more certain and rapid is the recovery.

It is stated, within a few years, that a certain oil to be obtained from the yolks of boiled eggs is of great use in curing cuts and bruises. The oil is obtained by cooking the yolks over a fresh fire. They are stirred constantly till seemingly on the point of bursting into a blaze, when it is found that quite a quantity of oil is eliminated from each yolk; and this, strained and secured, is said to have wonderful healing properties.—American Poultry Yard.

Buck Beer.

Buck beer is demoralizing in its tendency when it moveth itself aright. It layeth hold of the intellect, and twisteth it out of shape.

My son, go not with them who go to seek buck beer, for at last it stingeth like the broaded hornet with the red hot narrative, and kicketh like the cholerie mule.

Who hath woe? Who hath babbling? Who hath redness of eyes? He that goeth to seek the schooner of buck beer.

Who hath sorrow? Who striveth when the middle watch of the night hath come to wind up the clock with the fifteen puzzle? He that kicketh against the buck beer and getteth left.

Verily, the buckness of the buck beer bucketh with a mighty buck, insomuch that the buckee riseth at the noon hour with a head that compasseth the town round about, and the swellness thereof waketh more and more, even from Dan to Beer—Sheba. Current joke in the Holy Land.

Who chamoreth with a loud voice and saith: "Verily, am not I a bad man?" Who is he that walketh nuisteadily, and singeth unto himself, "The Bright Angles are Waiting for Me?"

Who worteth not even a fractional wot, but setteth his chronometer by the wooden watch of the watchmaker and by means of a toothbrush?

Go to. Is it not he that laugeth his intellect furnist the buck beer even unto the leventh hour?

Seasoning Food.

Many people have the idea that a finely flavored dish must cost a great deal; that is a mistake. If you have untainted meat of sound vegetables, or even Indian meal to begin with, you can make it delicious with proper seasoning. One reason why French cooking is much nicer than any other is that it is seasoned with every variety of herbs and spices. These cost very little. If you buy a few cents' worth at a time you will soon have a very good assortment. The best kinds are sage, thyme, sweet majoram, tarragon, mint, sweet basil, parsley, bay leaves, cloves mace, celery seed and onions. If you wish to plant the seed of any of these first seven mentioned in little boxes on your window sill, or in any sunny spot in your yard, you can generally raise all you need. Gather and dry them as follows: Parsley and tarragon should be dried in June and July, just before flowering; mint in June and July; thyme, marjoram and savory in July, August and September; all herbs should be gathered in the sunshine, and dried by artificial heat. Their flavor is best preserved by keeping them in air tight tins, or in tightly corked glass bottles.

The Cyclopaedia War.

The month of July, 1881, witnesses the completion of the largest and most important literary work this country and the century have seen. It is the Library of Universal Knowledge, large type edition, in 15 large octavo volumes, containing 10 per cent more matter than Appleton's Cyclopædia, at less than one-fifth its cost, and 20 per cent more than Johnson's Cyclopædia, at a little more than one-fourth its cost.

Chambers's Encyclopædia, which forms the basis of the Library of Universal Knowledge (the last London edition of 1880 being reprinted verbatim as a portion of its contents), is the laborious product of the ripest British and European scholarship. It has developed through a century of Cyclopædia making; its various editions having been many times revised, in successive years, till it has come to be universally recognized, by those competent to judge, as standing at the very front of great aggregations of knowledge, and better adapted than any other Cyclopædia for popular use. It contains such full and important information as the ordinary reader, or the careful student, is likely to seek, upon about 25,000 subjects in every department of human knowledge. Chambers's Encyclopædia, however, is a foreign production, edited and published for the foreign market, and could not be expected to give as much prominence to American topics as American readers might desire. To supply these and other deficiencies a large corps of American editors and writers have added important articles upon about 15,000 topics, covering the entire field of human knowledge, bringing the whole number of titles under one alphabetical arrangement to about 40,000. Thus the work is thoroughly Americanized, and the Library of Universal Knowledge becomes at once the latest and most complete Encyclopædia in the field, at a mere fraction of the cost of any similar work which has preceded it.

Victory

For The

Revolution

To Club Agents.

Price of the 15 volumes, complete, in extra cloth binding, $15.00. In half Russia, sprinkled edges, $20.00. In half Russia, gilt top, $22.50. In full library sheep, marbled edges, $25.00.

The superlative value and importance of this great Encyclopædia lies especially in the fact that it is brought within the reach of every one who aspires after knowledge and culture. It is really a library of universal knowledge. It brings a liberal education easily within the reach even of every plowboy of the country and apprentice boy of the city. Every farmer and every mechanic in the land owes it to himself and to his children that such a Cyclopædia shall henceforward form a part of the outfit of his home. To the professional man, and every person of intelligence in every walk of life, a Cyclopædia is a necessity.

Of course the old and wealthy publishers who have grown rich (it is said that the Appletons have made a profit of nearly two million dollars on their Cyclopædia) from the sale of their high-priced publications are not pleased that their monopolies are broken and their power overthrown. Of course the book agents and booksellers who have been used to getting from 40 to 60 per cent commission for selling these high-priced books are not so well pleased to sell the Library of Universal Knowledge on 15 per cent commission, though those who are not short-sighted discover that their own interests, after all, are identical with the interests of the people, and their real profits, in the end, are increased, by the immense sales which result from meeting the people's wants. The majority of booksellers, however, are better pleased to slander than to sell this and our numerous other standard and incomparably low-priced publications. But the Literary Revolution has always looked to the people, in whose interests it is, for its patronage, and it has never looked in vain, as our more than one million volumes printed last year (this year being increased to probably more than two millions) abundantly prove. You can order the Cyclopædia directly from us, and by uniting with your neighbors and friends you can secure club rates as follows:

$10,000 Reward

A discount of 10 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering at one time three or more sets of the Cyclopædia; and a discount of 15 per cent will be allowed to any one ordering five or more sets at one time.

As a special inducement to our friends and patrons to go to work promptly and vigorously, each doing what he can for the dissemination of universal knowledge, we propose to distribute $10,000 in special premiums as follows, in addition to the regular discount to clubs:

$5,000 Reward to be distributed equally among the first 500 club agents who send us clubs of not less than five subscribers, after June 15th and before September 1st.

One of great feature of our Palace Cars is a SMOKING SALOON where you can enjoy your "Havana" at all hours of the day.

The fact that the governor has pardoned the Monroe county murderer, Rolle, is a matter of surprise at Monroe, where it is held that his was a deliberate, wilful and cold-blooded crime, for which the original sentence was none to heavy. On Friday morning last, Mr. C. W. Stearns of Clare, while waiting for the train west on the D. L. & N.R.R., took out a fine gold watch from his vest pocket, unhooked it from the chain and laid it upon the seat while he proceeded to fix a break in the chain clasp. While thus engaged the train drew up and unmindful of his treasure, he boarded the cars and started off. When about a mile away, he noticed his loss and pulling the bell cord stopped the train and got off. Returning to the depot what was his surprise to find the watch lying undisturbed in the place where he had left it. The watch was worth $250.

A correspondent to the Chicago Times from Battle Creek writes the following: There lives in what is known as the north woods, of Barry county, a most singular-looking man, who is occasionally seen upon the streets of this city. Among the neighbors he is known as "Hunter Joe," from the business he follows, which is hunting and trapping around the small lakes and rivers. His real name is Joseph Kratt. The peculiarities of this personage consists of his face, one side of which is as black as any negro's, while the other is a Caucasian's face. The line joining the two colors is as distinct as though it were painted, commencing at the root of the hair and extending down his forehead, dividing his nose, and over his chin losing itself under his collar, where this singular birthmark ends, the black side of his face only extending down to his clothing, his entire body being like a white person. He came from the south, but does not remember either his father or mother, and has no knowledge of his early life or ancestors, and as he has always lived in the woods and never associated himself with his fellow-beings, he is, of course, very ignorant of everything. It is supposed that his mother was white, and that she was frightened by a negro some time before the birth of her son. He is now about 25 or thirty years of age, and persons who know of him say that he sleeps out doors in the summer time, always living near some lake or stream where he can find plenty of wild game and fish, which supply his food. What clothes he needs he exchanges skins and game for at this city, or takes the cast off clothing of farmers at whose place he passes the winter doing chores, feeding stock, chopping wood etc., for his board and lodging, and always starting out in the woods when spring comes again. He is unmarried and never seemed to show any affection for the fair sex, preferring to live in solitude in the recesses of the forest, one of nature's children, where he will die some day, and where his bones will cause a mystery as to what foul murder was committed there. He seems totally unlike human beings in some respects, having no avarice for money, or desire to hoard up treasures. All his wants seem to be his food and clothing, and when these are satisfied he is contented as a well-fed kitten. Speculative showmen have endeavored to persuade him to go with them for exhibition, promising him a large salary, but he steadfastly refused all such offers, preferring to lead his present nomadic and romantic life.

Two Pictures.

I.

Miss Blanche Murray is a very proper young lady. Last week she caught her little brother smoking.

"You terrible thing," she hissed, "I am going to tell father on you!"

"This is only corn-silk," murmured the boy penitently.

"I don't care what it is. I am going to tell on you, and see that you don't get into that beastly, horrid, degrading habit. I wouldn't have anything to do with smokers.

II.

It is evening. Miss Murry is sitting on the front stoop with Algernon. It is moonlight, and the redolent spirits of the honeysuckle and syringa are wafting bliss to their already intoxicated souls.

"Would little birdie object to my smoking a cigarrette?"

"Not at all," replied Miss Murray, "I like cigarettes, they are so fragrant and romantic. I think they are just too delicious for anything."

"Then I'll light one."

"Do, and blow some of the smoke in my face; it is soothing and dreamily Paradisic."

Then he lights a cigarette, and they talk about the weather for two hours and a half.

A Physician of Great Prominence in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

The only absolute specific we know of for sneezing, snuffing and choking catarrh or head colds is Sanford's Radical Cure, which for the small sum of $1 affords instant relief and invariably cures.—Medical Times.

THE PRESIDENT'S WOUND!

In the issue of the Philadelphia Record on the 27th of July was published an article relating to the case of Capt. William Palmer, now Quartermaster Second Brigade New Jersey State National Guard, who was wounded at the battle of Mossy Creek, East Tennessee, in the winter of 1863. In that article the striking resemblance of the case to that of President Garfield, in many particulars, was pointed out, the authority for this statement being the brave captain himself. A still better authority is Dr. David Kennedy, then surgeon U. S. General Hospital, West Philadelphia, who had charge of the case, and performed the operation of removing the detached bone, and finally extricated the bullet. The entire treatment being perfectly successful—Capt. Painer living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr. Kennedy does not hesitate to say that many of his patients both in military and civil practice owe their lives to the wonderful healing and strengthening powers of his medicine called "Favorite Remedy." The Doctor is in possession of an autograph letter from Capt. Palmer, attesting his indebtedness for his present good health to this medicine—"Favorite Remedy" which he says has doubled the obligation which he felt to the Doctor for the treatment of the Captain's terrible wound.

While Dr. Kennedy is engaged in the introduction of "Favorite," he still continues the practice of his profession at Roundout, N. Y., performs all the minor as well as capital operations of surgery. Address as above. 4w

Clinton News: On Tuesday morning Wm. Hanke met with a serious accident at his cider mill at River Raisin. While the mill was running, a belt broke and in endeavoring to get out of the way of the flying belt, Mr. Hanke fell down an opening in the floor into an old wheel pit, cutting a gash in his head about eight inches long. Dr. A. F. Tuttle was called and dressed the wound.

Hudson Gazette: Only one resigning and none dying, Gov. Jerome felt bound to cut off the heads of the two remaining managers of the Pontiac asylum for the insane. This reduces to the private ranks Thos. F. Moore, of Madison, who has held office of some kind, from a time to which the memory of man runneth not to the contrary.

How many of us were yearly dosed with sulphur and molasses for the blood? Arthur's Elixir of Sulphur was unknown then. But the nauseating mixture is now a thing of the past, and in its place the "Elixir" is kept in thousands of families. Pleasant to the taste, effective in its results, it stands at the head of all preparations in the world as a blood purifyer. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

THE WOODSTOCK PIONEERS.

A Large and Interesting Meeting of the County Society on Wednesday, August 31st, 1881.

The eleventh special meeting of the Lenawee County Pioneer Society was held at Woodstock Center on Wednesday, August 31st. The meeting was called to order at twelve o'clock, and dinner was announced as the first thing on the program. Nearly three hundred were provided with a bountiful repast prepared by the housewives of woodstock.

After dinner the company came to order and listened to the following exercises:

Prayer—Rev. Mr. Bakewell.
Address of Welcome—President F. A. Dewey.
Music by the choir.
Admission of new members.
Address—Alvin C. Osborn.
Address—F. A. Dewey.
Music by the choir.
Address—O. Lamb, Esq.
Remarks—Justus Lowe, of Ridgeway; Lewis Sanford, Thos. Iveson, and A. L. Smith, of Woodstock.

The meeting closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Sine" by the company, all standing. We give below the list of new members taken; also the address of Mr. Osborn, and a synopsis of Mr. Dewey's address. Mr. Lamb's address was a very fine one.—As it has already appeared in full in the Adrian Times we do not reproduce it in our columns, not because we do not appreciate his effort but because we are cramped for room. For the same reason we abridge Mr. Dewey's address.

We understand that the meeting was a very interesting and successful one, and we regret very much our inability to be present. The meeting was called during our absence from home on a vacation, and was held before our return.

LIST OF NEW MEMBERS.

Garret F. Harris, Phebe Harris, Lewis Sanford, Delila Sanford, David Richmond, Sally S. Richmond, Garret A. Moyer, Angelina Moyer, Chas. H. Chapman, Rachel Chapman, Ira Morley, Betsey Morley, A. M. Sickley, Sarah M. Sickley, Joel Lane, Loretta Turpenny, Framelia McCourty, Margaret Laur, Eliza Daily, Lydia Van Vleet, Ann Parsons, Susanna D. Parker, Margaret Swartout.

ADDRESS OF A. C. OSBORN.

Ladies and Gentlemen and Pioneers: I am not a speech-maker, as other pursuits in life have claimed my attention, and it is with reluctance I now occupy a few moments of your valuable time when so many present are better prepared to entertain you. But as a pionee I will undertake to say a few words concerning early life in Michigan.

In the fall of 1824, my father started as an emigrant from Enfield, Tompkins county, N. Y., with my mother and the children, five in number to settle in Michigan. We came with our teams to Buffalo and embarked on a schooner, and in due course of time landed at Detroit, in the later part of November. A few days ago I listened to a speech by Mr. Mickley, at Devils lake. He said Detroit, in 1834 was an insignificant little town as compared with to-day. Well, when we landed there in 1824, it was as much more insignificant when compared with 1834 as the difference is between to-day and 1834. When we landed there my father and mother with their youngest child, my sister, who is here to-day, went to a hotel to spend the night, and the rest of us had to stay in the wagons to guard them, as we had run them ashore and loaded up.

Detroit then presented the appearance of a fortified town. The buildings diminutive French structures with barricaded windows and doors, and everything about suggested pioneer life and warlike times.

The next day we started for Monroe, where we intended to locate for the winter, and in the spring go on to our destination, the present site of Tecumseh. We had to travers sloughs and quagmires, and were obliged to hire a man with two yoke of oxen to help us through. When we got to the Rouge we found the old military bridge but an apology for the purposes of travel, as but little of it remained except the stringers, and our forces had to fall to and cut poles to cover it, and we got safely over after great exertion.

When we got to Monroe there was not a house to be procured for love nor money. And so, tired and dejected, we moved on a few miles until we came to a deserted and sorry-looking log cabin, the inmates of which had been murdered by the Indians, the blood stains still being plainly visible. It was a cheerless place, and in a lonely spot, but it was the best we could do, and we accepted the alternative, and made the wretched place our home, until we could build at Tecumseh, and go on there in the spring.

It is difficult on such an occasion as this to know exactly what to say. To all here, old and young, I extend the kindest greeting. By your efforts the wilderness once around us has been changed into productive and beautiful fields, happy homes, and flourishing towns. You were not lazy. We old settlers can testify to that. There are more than old settlers here. I see many whose heads are gray, many whom age has bowed to the earth; not in sorrow, for they have obtained the reward of honest labor in substantial success. They have taken their harness off and laid it aside; not boastingly, but hoping it may be worn by them who follow them, that by like slow degrees of honest labor, they too, may secure a like reward. But let me say to the young, "Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that pulleth it off."

On this day of our gathering here let us drop a tear of kindly remembrance to those who have chopped and logged and cleared, and sown and reaped their way in honest toil to the better land.

We know who have gone before. We miss them to-day; we have missed them in years gone by.

Within the cabin of our friends in the early days of our settlement we have felt the grasp of the warm hand of manly friendship, and the wife's kindly welcome never withheld. We have shared with our brother pioneers the scanty meal and divided with their children the narrow bed.

I see many here though comparatively young in years who are still old settlers. It is their duty to see that nothing stagnates around them. If they do not improve upon our work, and make their country better and richer when we are gone, they are unworthy of our parental care and labor, and should not be inheritors of what they will not improve and cannot therefore save.

I wish, as it is in the power of every man and woman, they would resolve to keep some record of something they know, and when they hear that some man is going to make a speech at an old settlers' meeting give him the record, if they do not wish to make a speech themselves, and he will give them the credit for it. And thus all their friends and the country will be wiser and consequently better for the effort

I urge upon all this duty. Then a correct history of the settlement of every township and all of the interesting events and incidents within it can be secured; so that future meetings of old settlers and young, will be of great interest and value.

There is not a farm nor a home anywhere around us but that has its history; and if we would have our posterity possess it, some one or more must labor to obtain and preserve it.

Every fallen tree, and fence and field is full of history. They tell us of labor and trials, and marriages and deaths. They all make up the aggregate of history.

We cannot tell how many of us old settlers will meet again. We are sure all here to-day will never meet again anywhere on earth. So let us now, old settlers and young, bury all of wrong we may know of each other, and remember only the good; and if we find one whose path is dark and dreary, stand not in the sunlight he needs; for the Giver of all Good will bless the man who never wrongs, but always helps his fellow man.

ADDRESS BY F. A. DEWEY.

Ladies and Gentlemen: To-day we meet as pioneers, meet all standing on the platform of equality, forgetting and forgiving all differences that may have arisen during the years gone by. I will state a few notes of my pioneer times many years ago.

When a boy of 18 years of age in the year 1829 I walked into Lenawee county on foot and alone, just 52 years ago this summer. Not one in the whole territory did I know, but came to make myself a home and assist in the arrangements for my father's family which came some three months later.

My first boarding place in Tecumseh was at a farmer's log mansion; from the blanket door a buscuit could be thrown into an Indian camp, the wild animals of the forest could be heard on all sides and the wild turkeys made the most cheerful call of all. I would like to say one word more about the log cabin; the floor was the bare earth with a large and useful fire place on one side, the chamber floor was made of elm bark, the roof of good oak shakes, not a pane of glass about the premises. The furniture was scanty, the center table was of rude construction, fashioned from a monumental oak which had stood the wild blasts of hundreds of years before this house was erected. This historic tree was cut, the stump of which formed the center board on which the snow white linen was spread, and there three times a day refreshments were placed by the lady of the mansion. It is now 52 years since I was introduced to this pioneer family and their rustic boarding house in Tecumseh, yet with cheerful scenes before me do I look to those days of genuine friendship in the wild woods.

When a few years had been passed in the region of Tecumseh, I bought land at $1.25 an acre in the township where hills and dales were plentiful, with lakes and creeks bountifully supplied with fish, in the township of Cambridge. There on the borders of a crystal lake, where the Indian's camping ground and wigwams had been built from time immemorial, my log cabin was built. It was a beautiful and refreshing morning that I left my father's house one mile west of Musgrove Evans' home in Tecumseh with an ox team, a wagon and my wife, whom I had just married in this town, and a light load started for the new home to be made in the wilderness. It was an all days journey, 15 miles west to reach the promised land, where we with cheerful anticipation and many cherished hopes, intended to make a farmer's home. When within 3 miles of the lake, on the shore of which for three quarters of a mile our land was bought, on a road which I had previously opened to let the oxen and wagon pass we made a halt and myself and wife sat down on a log to partake of a luncheon, when about two yards from our feet the well known rattle of the massauger was sounded which always brings an electric thrill to those of weak nerves. It did not take long to silence it forever.

It may not be out of place to say a few words about this town of Woodstock. The first time my fortune led me through on the line of the military road was in June 1832, little over 49 years ago, when your speaker was a drum major in the eighth regiment of the Black Hawk campaign. Cornelius Millspaw had a cabin in the west part of the town, the only resident of the township I believe then later along the Chicago road up to the year 1836. I will call to your memory those of whom we were well acquainted with full 45 years ago, but now gone down to the silent tomb, beginning at the east side of the town: Benj. Laur & wife, Jno. Briggs and wife, Thos. M. Courtie and wife, Jesse Selleck & wife, Ebenezer Selleck and wife, Nathaniel Newberry and wife, Willard Joslyn and wife, Isaac Smith and wife, Ransom Hulin and wife, Valentine Slate and wife, George Clark and wife, Wm. Western and wife, Mathew Busby and wife, Wm. Sickly, Wm. Babcock and wife, Cornelius Millspaugh and wife, David Terril and wife. Shall I omit our esteemed and valued pioneer friends Jesse Osborn and wife, who was one of the first settlers and grew the first wheat that was ground in this county, also planted the first orchard in Tecumseh and the first in Woodstock?

True to her Trust.

Too much cannot be said of the ever faithful wife and mother, constantly watching and caring for her dear ones, never neglecting a single duty in their behalf. When they are assailed by disease, and the system should have a thorough cleansing, the stomach and bowels regulated, blood purified, malarial poison exterminated, she must know that Electric Bitters are the only sure remedy. They are the best and purest medicine in the world, and only cost fifty cents.—Sold by

AROUND THE COUNTY.

RAISIN.

The farmers of Raisin are bound not to be behind their neighbors in the good work of sending aid to the fire sufferers. A public meeting was held at the town house on Monday evening last. Alex. Richards was called to the chair and James Cook was chosen secretary. A committee of two from each school district in the township, consisting of one gentleman and one lady, was appointed to solicit contributions of money and supplies. The ladies of the Presbyterian church in Raisin pledged themselves to make a lot of bed clothing for the sufferers and a purse of $35 was raised then and there to buy material for that purpose. The soliciting committees appointed are at work this week.

Morenci Observer: Our village readers may remember that not many moons ago an oily-tongued agent of "The Provident League of America," an institution located at Toledo, which offered for a small consideration splendid financial returns to its members in case of accident, sickness or death, was here several weeks and succeeded in inducing some of our citizens to invest in the concern, the fees and dues amounting to $12 or $15 each according to age. Last week John Palmer, one of the holders of a "certificate," severely sprained his ankle and sent forward his application for relief according to contract, and received the cheering intelligence that the thing had "busted"—gone where the woodbine twineth"—up the spout. The experience of the last year or so has decidedly demonstrated that all the "Mutual Aid" concerns and "Provident Leagues," which are springing up so abundantly in the cities, are glowing frauds of the first water, and should be severely let alone.

HOPE.

Men speak and dream with keen delight
Of some sure-coming better day,
To gain the happy golden height
All gladly press the crowded way
The world grows old and young by turns,
But human hope unchanging burns.

Hope leads the infant forth to life,
And gaily plumes the boyish head;
Or sprightly nerves youth to manly strife,
Nor leaves the veteran's dying bed;
And when life's o'er, even from the tomb
Hope springs to shed her brightest bloom.

All is not vain illusion—no
Mere fancy, sprung from error's brain,
Too well proclaims the life we know
A higher life than shall attain,
And, what those inward voices say
Shall never the hopeful soul betray.

The Earth-Eaters.

To "eat dirt" is naturally, as well as metaphorically, a most disagreeable and unwholesome undertaking; but to eat dirt in the literal sense and not only to enjoy it but to thrive on it, is so contrary to our ordinary ideas as to seem absolutely impossible. Nevertheless, it is perfectly true that earth-eaters are to be found among the tribes of the human race; and we will give our readers an account of these people and their usages, on the authority of the famous scientific traveler Baron von Humboldt.

In his "Aspects of Nature," it is related that in descending the Orinoco—a river which runs through Venezuela, in South America—he passed a day with the earth-eating tribe of Indians called the Otomacs. The Baron thus describes the peculiar diet and habits of the people:

"The earth which the Otomacs eat is a soft unctuous clay, a true potter's clay, of a yellowish-grey color, due to a little oxide of iron. They seek for it in particular spots on the banks of the Orinoco and the Meta, and select it with care. They distinguish the taste of one kind of earth from that of another, and do not consider all clays as equally agreeable to eat. They knead the earth into balls of about five or six inches diameter, which they burn or roast by a weak fire, until the outside assumes a reddish tint. The balls are moistened when about to be eaten. It is a proverb among the most distant of the nations living on the Orinoco, when speaking of anything very unclean, to say that it is 'so dirty that the Otomacs eat it.' As long as the waters of the Orinoco and the Meta are low, these Indians live on fish and river tortoises. During the periodical swelling of the rivers the taking of fish ceases, for it is as difficult to fish in deep river water as in the deep sea. It is in this interval, which is of two or three months' duration, that the Otomacs swallow great quantities of earth. We have found considerable stores of it in their huts, the clay-balls being piled together in pyramidal heaps. A very intelligent monk, who lived twelve years among the Indians, assured us that one of them would eat from three-quarters of a pound to a pound and a quarter in a day.

According to the accounts which the Otomacs themselves give, this earth forms their principal subsistence during the rainy season, though they eat at the same time occasionally, when they can obtain it, a lizard, a small fish, or a fern root. They have such a predilection for the clay that even in the dry season, when they can obtain plenty of fish, they eat a little earth after their meals every day as a kind of dainty. The Franciscan monk who lived among them as missionary, assured us that he perceived no alteration in their health during the earth-eating season.

"The simple facts are therefore as follows: "The Indians eat large quantities of earth without injury to their health; and they themselves regard the earth so eaten as an alimentary substance, i.e., they feel themselves satisfied by eating it, and that for a considerable time; and they attribute this to the earth or clay, and not the other scanty articles of subsistence which they now and then obtain in addition. If you inquire from an Otomac about his winter provisions, he points to the heap of clay balls stored in his hut."

Humboldt combats the idea that this clay had anything such as maize, meal, and crocodile-fat mixed with it, as some writers had asserted; and he then goes on to say: "In all tropical countries, human beings show an almost irresistible desire to swallow earth; and not alkaline earths, which they might be supposed to crave in order to neutralise acid, but unctuous and strong-smelling clays. It is often necessary to confine children to prevent them from running out to eat earth immediately after a fall of rain. I have observed with astonishment the Indian women in the village Banco, on the Magdalena river, while engaged in shaping earthern vessels on the potter's wheel, put great lumps of clay into their mouths. With the exception of the Otomacs, individuals of all other races who indulge for any length of time the strange desire of earth-eating have their health injured by it. At the mission of San Borja we saw the child of an Indian woman, who, his mother said, would hardly eat anything but earth. He was, however, wasted nearly to a skeleton."

In the Island of Java, Labillardiere saw small square reddish-colored cakes exposed for sale in the villages. On examination and inquiry, he found that the cakes consisted of reddish clay, and that they were eaten. The edible clay of Samarang was sent to Berlin in the year 1847, in the shape of rolled tubes like cinnamon, and was found to be a fresh water formation deposited on limestone, and consisting of microscopic polygastrica, etc.

Other instances are mentioned, and the Baron concludes by saying: "Thus we find the practice of eating earth diffused throughout the torrid zone, among indolent races inhabiting the finest and most fertile parts of the globe. But accounts have also come from the North, according to which hundreds of cartloads of earth containing infusoria are said to be annually consumed by the country people, in the most remote parts of Sweden, as bread-meal, and even more from fancy than necessity! In Finland this kind of earth is occasionally mixed with bread. It consists of empty shells of animalculæ, so small and soft that they do not crush perceptibly between the teeth. It fills the stomach, but gives no real nourishment. In periods of war, as, for example, during the Thirty Year's War in Pomerania, in the Lausitz, and in the territory of Dessau, and subsequently in 1719 and 1733 at the fortress of Wittenberg, chronicles and documents preserved in archives often give the intimation of earths containing infusoria having been eaten, speaking of them under the vague and general name of 'mountain meal.'"

"Do you say I have been a hard drinker all my life?" said an old toper to an acquaintance. "Yes, I do." "There's where you are mistaken. At one period I didn't touch a drop for over two years—in fact I drank nothing but milk." "Indeed! what two years was that?" "My first two."

The Leaning Tower of Pisa.

Pisa is one of those old Italian towns which occupied a prominent position and played an important part in mediæval history. It is said to have been founded about 600 years B. C., and was a town of the ancient district of Etruria. In recent times it belonged to the Grand Duchy of of Tuscany, now incorporated in the Kingdom of Italy.

Pisa is chiefly celebrated now for its Leaning Tower. This was erected about the year 1150, by the German architect, Wilhelm, of Inasbruck. It was designed as a belfry for the cathedral, and stands in a square close to the building to which it is attached. We may remark, in passing, that the erection of belfries apart from the churches was common in the early days of ecclesiastical architecture; and many instances of this peculiarity are to be found in this country.

The leaning tower is built wholly of white marble, and consists of eight circular stories, each ornamented with rows of columns, and gradually narrowing in width from the base towards the top.

The summit is a flat roof, with an open gallery, which commands a magnificent view. Its height is 188 feet, or about fourteen feet less than that of the monument in London.

The tower leans so much from the perpendicular, that a plummet dropped from the top falls at a distance of about fifteen feet from the base. The ordinary observer wonders that, with so great a deviation, it does not come to the ground; but it stands in obedience to the law of physics, by which any body of matter will maintain that position so long as a perpendicular line drawn from its centre of gravity shall fall within its base. The "centre of gravity" may be explained, to those who are unacquainted with scientific terms, as the balancing point, or point at which the entire weight of a body will be equally divided, and exactly balanced on the one side and on the other. As this point is found in the tower to fall within the space covered by its foundations, there is no reason why it should not continue to stand, as it has done, for many centuries to come.

The appearance of the tower has led many to suppose that the law above mentioned is actually violated; and, in fact, so nearly is the limit of compliance with it approached, that scientific observers have occasionally formed the same opinion by calculation, and have been forced to the conclusion that the building was held together only by the great tenacity of the mortar; but the balance of authority, as well as that of probability, is against this conclusion.

As to the cause of the inclination of the tower, opinions have also been divided. Some have attributed it to a subsidence of of the foundation, or a movement of the adjacent earth. But others have contended, with more show of reason in support of their argument, that its leaning was the original device and purpose of the architect, and that it was therefore one of those triumps of architectural skill which in the middle ages would have been cordially welcomed and appreciated. Captain Basil Hall made a series of careful investigations on the subject, and established as he believed, to demonstration, that the tower was built as it now stands. He found that the line of the tower, on the side towards which it leans, has not the same curvature as the line on the opposite side. If, he remarked, the tower had been built upright, and then made to incline over, the line of the wall on the side towards which the inclination was given would be more or less concave; but he found the contrary to be the fact, the line of the wall on the leaning side being decidedly more convex than that on the opposite side. Captain Hall had, therefore, no doubt whatever that the design of the architect was apparent in every successive layer of the stone.

These conclusions are partly supported by the remarks of another scientific observer, to the effect that the name of "the Leaning Tower" does not convey a true notion of the form of the building. It is, he remarks, in fact, a "twisted" tower, there being an irregular curvature in the building. But he conjectures that the "twist" was due to the subsidence of the foundation during the erection, and an attempt on the part of the architect to "right" the building as the work proceeded.

We may add that from the leaning tower of Pisa the great astronomer Galileo made, early in the seventeenth century, a series of observations from which he deduced the principles of the gravitation of the earth.

Humoring C[illegible]ren.

It is good to humor them in all natural manifestations and cravings of their affections. A child hungry-hearted for love is one of the saddest sights in the world. Hardly less pitiful is the condition of a little one perpetually repressed or discouraged in the sweet impulses that prompt it to give expression to its love. That way danger lies. The boy or girl will not easily go wrong whose arm is twined morning and night around mother's neck or whose head is welcomed to its cuddling place on father's shoulder. It is on the side of their affections that children are most easily held and guided, and the firmest rein is the invisible, golden cord of love. It is good to humor children in following their natural bent in all right, helpful directions. Remember that education is only the leading out powers and faculties that are within. Encourage, therefore, such inclinations toward books, studies, mechanics, music, out of door pursuits and healthful sports as shall help most truly to develop your child. As education comes more and more to include the development of a natural aptitude, it will be more and more successful. It is good to humor your children in preserving their individuality, and in fostering a true self respect. Teach them early the value of a dime and a dollar. If you can give them but five cents a week, tell them what it costs somebody in labor, and hold them strictly to their allowance.

The philosophy of early training is to make the child father to the man—mother to the woman. The homely proverb, "As the twig is bent the tree inclines," is not yet outgrown. It is as true now as in ancient times, that if some twigs are permitted to grow as they incline the tree will be a crooked one.

The following sensible suggestion clipped from an exchange is applicable to all communities, and should be pasted in the hat of every citizen: "Every citizen should constitute himself a committee of one to extend aid and courtesy to those who come among us in search of location or as casual visitors. Especially should those who intend starting in some needed branch of business receive attention and encouragement. Ofttimes the man who at first hesitates will cast his lot with a town whose citizens give him a cordial reception, for it makes him feel that he will be welcome, and with many this feeling is needed to remove the almost universal repugnance toward starting in a strange town."

Boston Baked Beans.

THE NEW ENGLAND CITY'S FAVORITE DISH.

Though Boston has acquired some fame as a large consumer of this esculent, baked beans have been from time immemorial a favorite dish throughout New England. The sturdy men and women of generations ago, who braved dangers and hardships in planting an independent colony, added strength to their sinews and muscles by eating simple food, of which baked beans were a much cherished ingredient, and of all ancient dishes none have stood better the test of time and the caprices of the appetites of the people. But it is a little singular that, while New England is so large a consumer of baked beans, and New Englanders, more especially the residents of Boston, have acquired the mystery of making them perfectly, the dish is not in much favor elsewhere, and that the knowledge of baking them properly is exceedingly limited. It may be said that one circumstance is due to the other—that is, that where it is not known how to bake beans properly, they are naturally not a popular article of diet. If the method and process of baking were patented, it could hardly be more exclusively held by New Englanders. In New York and other municipalities a contempt is often expressed for the Athenian love for baked beans, and yet not long ago a fashionable club house, on the occasion of a special gathering, sent by express to this city for forty quarts of Boston baked beans. This manner of obtaining a dish they effect to despise is frequently resorted to, undoubtedly with profit to the buyer and seller. An experienced baker of this city, being asked why baked beans were not as popular in New York as in Boston, said: "Because they don't know how to cook them. They don't soak them enough, boil them too much, and then take them out of the oven before they are half baked." "But it would be easy enough for them to learn how to cook them?" "Well, if it is, they don't learn. That much I know."

There is a lunch counter in one of the busiest sections of New York, where genuine Boston baked beans are served, which is reported to be doing a thriving business. Travelers in the West and South have noticed in the windows of restaurants in cities and towns placards announcing Boston baked beans, but, on entering and eating a dish, find but little resemblance between it and the "home article." Custom has prescribed either Saturday night or Sunday morning as the "correct time" to eat baked beans, and, the scene at the bakers then is the busiest of the week. Among the hundreds of bakers in the city there are but few who do not "put to soak" on Friday night from one to five barrels of beans, which, added to the number cooked in private dwellings, will give one a conception of how well deserving is Boston of her fame as a bean-consuming city. A well-informed gentleman estimates that the consumption of beans in Boston is about 500 barrels per week, or about 10,000 barrels per year. One reason why Boston baked beans are better than any others is that they are almost invariably baked in brick ovens over night. Besides baking a quantity to sell, the bakers, for the nominal sum of five cents per pot, receive and bake the beans that are prepared by their customers, thus materially adding to their own profit and the convenience of the public. It is a fact, certainly not universally known, that there is in Boston an establishment devoted exclusively to the baking of beans, entirely separate from a canning institution. It is the only establishment of the kind in the world, probably, and it is exceedingly doubtful whether it could live anywhere else. At all events, attempts have been made to establish similar institutions elsewhere and nothing but failure has been the result, and it is now plain enough that a bean-eating community is requisite to support a bean-baking establishment. The success of the Boston bean bakery was assured from the start, and its enterprising proprietor has climbed up the road to wealth by the bean alone, without assistance from the pole. Every night in the week the fire under the spacious brick oven is in full blast, and two teams are kept busy daily delivering the pots and their smoking hot contents. Of the customers of the bakery, fully one-half are restaurant keepers, who pay twenty-five cents for two quarts of beans, and then retail them at ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents per plate. The bakery consumes from 1,900 to 3,800 pounds of beans per week, and its oven has the capacity to bake 450 pots in a single night. It is, perhaps, worthy of note that the bakery is located in a fashionable quarter of the city, within a stone's throw of Washington street. In conclusion, it may be said that the Athenian fondness for baked beans continues to increase, rather than decrease; and that in spite of what the world may say, Bostonians intend to have them Saturday nights or Sunday mornings.—Boston Herald.

How it was Lost.

To lose by one's own ignoranec or carelessness is more mortifying than to lose by another's dishonesty. It is certainly aggravating enough to lose by both. To illustrate how little the law will help a person who does not know how to do business—and to show the importance of small details—the New York Mercantile Journal cites an actual case.

A man drew a note promising to pay one hundred dollars. He used a printed form, and did not close up the blank devoted to dollars, and after passing it as negotiable paper, somebody inserted "and fifty" after the one hundred and before the printed "dollars."

The note, thus altered, got into the hands of an innocent party, who presented it to the drawer, and the Supreme Court decided the maker of the note was liable for its face, because through negligence he did not draw a line between the word "hundred" and the printed word "dollars."

Any testimony that the drawer might offer to establish the fact that he gave the note for one hundred dollars must go for nothing, as there was nothing on the face of the note showing that it had been altered.

Evidence of any alteration on the face of the note would have changed the case. Let this be a lesson to all drawers of promissory notes. No one can be too careful in such matters.

An Established Remedy. Down's Elixir has been widely known and used as a cough remedy for fifty years. No other cough medicine has stood the test half th is length of time. The people stand by that which is good.

The only absolute specific we know of for sneezing, snuffing and choking catarrh or head colds is Sanford's Radical Cure, which for the small sum of $1 affords instant relief and invariably cures.—Medical Times.

The Local Press.

While the influence and importance of country papers have been steadily increasing, very few have paused to realize how much this has been the case, or the power they exert in moulding public opinion and swaying the destinies of the nation. To compare them with those of half a century since, is to show improvement so great as to be next to wonderful. The little, dingy, badly-printed, scissor-edited sheets, lacking the elements of taste in composition and make-up, have been superseded by those that even the watchful eye of the Cabinet can look approvingly upon; for order has succeeded a chaos of type, and the artistic in arrangement the crude concepton of what should be. They now look as the work of finished hours, not the "I don't know any better" of young apprentices, and the "I guess it will answer" of careless comps. Ink is now used, worthy of the name; old, battered, irregular fonts have been thrown aside and replaced by others pleasant to the eye, attractive and useful. Fitness of combinations has taken the place of incongruity, and good press-work that of poor, until the papers of the country contest the palm with those of cities in appearance and ability, if not in size.

And with the better order of things in the mechanical, so came one also in the brain workshop. Competition forced improvement; raising the intellectual status demanded it. As good work as was done abroad was required at home—as good editors and as wide a range of subjects. A higher place was prepared, and the country editor hastened to occupy it, or, failing, was thrust aside by others. The idea once entertained that thinking men were to be found only in the great cities and among classic scholars was proven preposterous. At the plow, with an axe in hand in the heart of great forests, at the ringing anvil, in the clattering mill, surrounded by the flowers of the prairie and the rocks of the hill-side, mind was busy and worked out the great problems of government and universal freedom as they arose, plainly and forcibly, and in the hour of need arose in the majesty of patrioism and wrote their names in blood and in graves upon the pages of history. To them, and not to theorists, to the bone and sinew of the country, is Liberty most indebted. From

"Men who their duties know,
But know their rights and knowing, dare maintain," are states formed and nations given strength and stability, and to such, more than any other, the local newspaper comes, sounding the note of warning, and leading and controlling action.

This being the case, to home publications the eye is first turned. Each has an interest in, is a part of it. Its utterances are the pulse-beats of the neighborhood—the changeful throbbing of its heart. It comes the living photograph of all in which they are the most absorbed, and which strikes the deepest to the roots of affection and self-interest. And so it becomes an instrument of mighty power—one a hundred fold to that exerted by distant presses, for every feeling and sympathy is en rapport with it, while the utterances of the "blanket sheets" are questioned and weighed with jealous distrust. Besides, it reaches and influences where no "city thunderer" is ever seen, save by accident. The reading of "mammoth" dailies and weeklies is confined, as a rule, to the counting-house merchant, banker and manufacturer. But the country paper flutters in to every hearthstone, is seized upon with avidity, read with care, treasured and discussed again and again.—Rounds' Printer's Cabinet.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that most diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. This truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure makes a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and vigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pains in the lower part of the body—for Torpid Liver—Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Gravel—Fever, Ague—Malarial fever, and all difficulties of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs.

It is an excellent and safe remedy for females during Pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhœa or Falling of the Womb. As a Blood Purifyer it is unequaled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

How to Resuscitate From Drowning.

The frequency of accidents should induce every person, whether old or young, to learn the best means known to physicians for resuscitating those who are taken from the water. Just how long a person can lay in water and not be only asphyxiated but actually dead varies, as observation proves. Prompt, intelligent and persevering means have failed to restore when they have been in the water three minutes; the same means are successful when ten or more minutes have passed. The symptoms are the same in nearly all—respiration slow, labored or absent for minutes, pulseless, sometimes heart sounds are inaudible and yet they are not apparently, dead as efforts to resuscitate often prove. The following rules, laid down by Marshall Hall, the great Scotch philanthropist and physician, are generally used by the faculty, and, as they are so easily understood and practiced, are both in this country and Europe placarded by boards of health in cities, around docks and vessels, and many a person has been saved by them. Physicians (why not everyone?) carry them in their note books and read them to nurses engaged in efforts to restore the asphyxiated, whether from drowning, gas used for illuminating purposes, from charcoal or other coal, or that found in deep wells or mines known as firedamp.

1. Treat the patient instantly on the spot, in the open air, freely exposing the face, neck and chest to the breeze, except in severe weather.

2. In order to clear the throat, place the patient gently on the face, with one wrist under the forehead, that all fluid, and the tongue itself, may fall forward and leave the entrance into the windpipe free.

2. To excite respiration, turn the patient slightly on its side, and apply some irritating or stimulating agent to the nostrils, as veratrine, dilute ammonia, etc.

4. Make the face warm by brisk friction; then dash cold water upon it.

5. If not successful, lose no time, but, to imitate respiration, place the patient on his face, turn the body gently but completely on the side and a little beyond; then again on the face, and so alternately. Repeat this movement deliberately and perseveringly, fifteen times only in a minute. When the patient lies on the thorax, this cavity is compressed by the weight of the body and expiration takes place. When he is turned on the side this pressure is removed and inspiration occurs.

6. When the prone position is resumed, make a uniform and sufficient pressure along the spine, removing the pressure immediately, before rotation on the side. (The pressure augments the expiration the rotation commences inspiration.) Continue these measures.

7. Rub the limbs upward, with firm pressure and with energy. (The object being to rid the return of venous blood to the heart.)

8. Substitute for the patient's wet clothing, if possible, such other clothing as can be instantly procured, each bystander supplying a coat or cloak, etc. Meantime, and from time to time, to excite expiration, let the surface of the body be slapped brskly with the hand.

9. Rub the body briskly until it is dry and warm, then dash cold water upon it and repeat the rubbing.

Avoid the immediate removal of the patient, as it involves a dangerous loss of time; also the use of bellows or any forcing instrument; also the warm bath and all rough treatment.

What They Knew Four Thousand Years Ago.

From one of these books, compiled after the manner of our modern encyclopædias, and the compilation of which is shown to have been made more than 2,000 years B. C., it has been ascertained, which has long been supposed, that Chaldea was the parent land of astronomy; for it is found, from this compilation and from other bricks, that the Babylonian catalogued the stars, and distinguished and named the constellations; that they arranged the twelve constellations that form our present zodiac to show the course of the sun's path in the heavens; divided time into weeks, months, and years; that they divided the week, as we now have it, into seven days, six being days of labor, and the seventh a day of rest, to which they gave a name from which we have derived our word "Sabbath," and which day, as a day of rest from all labor of every kind, they observed as rigorously as the Jew or the Puritan. The motion of the heavenly bodies and the phenomena of the weather were noted down and a connection, as I have before stated, detected, as M. de Perville claims to have discovered, between the weather and the change of the moon. They invented the sun-dial to mark the movements of the heavenly bodies, the water clock to measure time, and they speak in this work of the spots on the sun, a fact they only could have known by the aid of telescopes, which it is supposed they possessed, from observations that they have noted down of the rising of Tenus and the fact that Layard found a crystal lens in the ruins of Nineveh. The "bricks" contain an account of the deluge, substantially the same as the narrative in the Bible, except that the names are different. They disclose that houses and lands were then sold leased and mortgaged; that money was loaned at interest, and that the market-gardeners, to use an American phrase, "worked on shares;" that the farmer, when plowing with his oxen, beguiled his labor with short and homely songs, two of which have been found; and, to connect this very remote civilization with the usages of to-day, I may, in conclusion, refer to one of the bricks of this library, in the form of a note, which is to the effect that visitors are requested to give to the librarian the number of the book they wish to consult, and that it will be brought to them; at the perusal of which one is disposed to fall back upon the exclamation of Solomon, that "There is nothing new under the the sun.'—CHIEF JUSTICE DALY, in Popular Science Monthly.

A Physician of Great Prominence in thirty-sixth street, New York city was unable to even help Mr. Wm. McKee, of Patterson, N. J., suffering the agonies always attendant upon diseased kidneys. As an honest man and practitioner he prescribed and cured him by using one bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

No human agency can so speedily cleanse the blood, clear the complexion and skin, restore the hair and cure every species of itching, scaly and scrofulous humors of the skin, scalp and blood as the Cuticura Remedies.

The Scenery of Iceland.

The fiords which, bursting through the rocky barrier that guards the coast, run far up into the interior, constitute a most characteristic feature of Icelandic scenery. They have all a great similarity of form, so that the description of the general features of one one may serve equally for that of all others. Having, probably, been at first rents or chasms produced by the general upheaving of the island, their length is often very disproportioned to their breadth; some of them being scarcely two miles wide yet extending twenty-five or even thirty miles into the country, and continue still farther by narrow vales, down which the mountain rivers find their way to the sea. Lofty ridges, running out into the the ocean, and ending in precipitous headlands, separate them from each other. In the neighborhood of the Rode and Beru Fiords these assume their most magnificent appearance, attaining an elevation of nearly 4,000 feet; though their average height on other parts of the coast is only about half of that now specified. So sudden is the rise of these mountains, that it is no uncommon thing to find precipices 1,000 feet high, from the top of which a stone may be cast into the sea. The fiords are thus shut in on both sides by perpendicular walls of rock towering up to a tremendous height, whose summits are clothed with eternal snows, or veiled in dark clouds, All around seems dead; no trace of life is visible. Man and all that he produces vanish amidst the mightier works of nature. Woods and the higher classes of the vegetable creation are entirely wanting, and the naked rocks are too steep for even the hardy birch or stunted willow to fix their roots. No sound is heard save the billows dashing on the craggy shore, no motion seen but the cataracts rushing down the rugged cliffs. Such is the general appearance of these fiords, and the repulsive aspect they present; yet there does the Icelander choose his dwelling, unappalled by the rocks which threaten every moment to crush him by their fall. The island is nowhere thickly peopled, but these friths and all their connected valleys are more so than any other portion. Here grassy meadows are found in the immediate vicinity of the sea; and here, therefore, the natives can employ in conjunction both of these sources of gain which alone the severe climate leaves open to them. On their shores are the finest pastures for cattle, while their waters are a favorite retreat of the cod, the most valued of the fish caught on the coast.

"A Girl's Choice."

It was in a drug store of course. Al interesting incidents occur in drug stores,—that is nearly all. She was pretty, with blue eyes, and golden hair, one of those kind of beauties the poet would have called an "angel," but for the fact that a colony of pimples on her fair frontispiece precluded all thought of a celestial being. Bowing timidly to the handsome clerk, she asked for "Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases," and upon receiving it vanished like the morning dew before the Summer sun.

Frankfort-on-the-Main, now containing a population of about 100,000, is reported to be the richest city of its size in the whole world. If its wealth were equally divided among its inhabitants, every man, woman and child would have, it is said, 20,000 marks, or some $5,000 apiece. There are as may be supposed a good many poor people in the town, but the citizens are, as a whole, in unusally comfortable circumstances, more so probably than the citizens of any other capital in Germany or Europe. It is stated that there are 100 Frankforters worth from $4,000,000 to $7,000,000 each, and 250 who are worth $3,000,000 and upward. The city is one of the great banking centers of the globe. Its aggregate banking capital is estimated at $2,000,000,000, more than one-fourth of which the famous Rothschilds, whose original and parnte house is there, own and control. The annual transactions in bills of exchange are in excess of $100,000,000. Its general trade and manufacturing industries have greatly increased since the formation of the German Empire, to which Frankfort was originally averse, being a free city and an opponent of Prussia, until coerced, in July, 1866, by Gen. Von Falkenstein, who entered it at the head of an army and imposed a fine of 31,000,000 florins for its insubordiantion. Frankfort is such a place for conventions and assemblies of all sorts that it is apt to be full of strangers, and is consequently very expensive, and by no means satisfactory to tarry in.

A Testament Reviser's Opinion.

The eminent author, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D., who is professor of Hebrew, Latin and Greek in the University of Rochester, and was one of the revisers of the new testament, in general conversation with a number of gentlemen, a short time since, said: "I have received from the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure very marked benefit and I can most cordially recommend it to others."

HOW A LITTLE BOY FACED DEATH.—A ten-year-old boy, whose legs were recently cut off by a train of cars in this city, was too plucky to make any fuss over the incident. When the little fellow was taken home his legs hung limp but he did not complain. But the tender look he gave to those who stood by his side told plainly that he was suffering great agony. After the doctor had dressed his wounds he called his parents, sisters and brothers to his bedside, kissed one and all farewell and left a tear upon their cheeks. A second time he called his mother to his side, placed his little arms about her neck and said: "Mother, I am going to die. Please forgive me for not minding you." With this the little fellow fell back, and, as the mother said, "Yes, my angel," and took another look at his face, she found him dead and beyond all pain and suffering.—Dubuque Times.

IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.
IT IS AN HONEST LIST.

The catalogue states exactly what the papers are: When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST.—When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.

The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single States ranges from $2 to $80. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $635. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,980.14. The list includes 952 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. THE PRESIDENT'S WOUND!

A PARALLEL CASE IN ARMY LIFE.

In the issue of the Philadelphia Record on the 27th of July was published an article relating to the case of Capt. William Palmer, now Quartermaster Second Brigade New Jersey State National Guard, who was wounded at the battle of Mossy Creek, East Tennessee, in the winter of 1863. In that article the striking resemblance of the case to that of President Garfield, in many particulars, was pointed out, the authority for this statement being the brave captain himself. A still better authority is Dr. David Kennedy, then surgeon U. S. General Hospital, West Philadelphia, who had charge of the case, and performed the operation of removing the detached bone, and finally extricated the bullet. The entire treatment was perfectly successful—Capt. Palmer living to this day in the bloom of health. Dr Kennedy does not hesitate to say that many of his patients both in military and civil practice owe their lives to the wonderful healing and strengthening powers of his medicine called "Favorite Remedy." The Doctor is in possession of an autograph letter from Capt. Palmer, attesting his indebtedness for his present good health to this medicine—"Favorite Remedy" which he says has doubled the obligation which he felt to the Doctor for the treatment of the Captain's terrible wound.

While Dr. Kennedy is engaged in the introduction of "Favorite," he still continues the practice of his profession at Roundout, N. Y., performs all the minor as well as capital operations of surgery. Address as above. 4w

WOOD WANTED.

Ague Cure

Is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms, which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic and other poisonous minerals, form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinisin, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.

We warrant it when taken according to directions.

MICHIGAN'S GREAT CALAMITY.

Not since the earliest pioneer trod the soil of the lower peninsula has Michigan been called to meet such an appalling calamity as befell hundreds of her citizens by the terrible forest fires of last week. Three counties upon the Huron peninsula have been almost wholly laid waste and two others have been partially devastated by the fiery fiend. The long continued hot weather, combined with a scarcity of rain, had rendered the woods and fields as dry as tinder. Occasional fires had been raging in those counties for several days, but they had been kept under control. On Monday of last week the conflagration became general and for three days the flames swept over entire townships, destroying every living thing in their path. The fire spread with such frightful rapidity that families and settlements were surrounded and all escape cut off, before the danger was comprehended. Whole families perished in many cases, burned to death in their own homes. Houses, barns, grain, fences and growing crops were literally wiped out in a few hours. Strong men, and helpless women and children were stricken down alike. Many escaped half naked, glad to save even their lives, with all their property gone. Farmers worth many thousand dollars were made penniless in an hour. And not only did the farmers suffer, but scores of small villages also have been completely wiped out of existence. In the county of Sanilac alone the loss of life is placed at one hundred and forty, while the total loss of life is estimated at nearly three hundred. In the town of Paris, Huron Co., which was settled by a colony of Polanders, forty-one persons perished. Some saved their lives by getting into wells, while others, who tried the same means of escape, were suffocated in their supposed refuge of safety. Fully ten thousand people have suffered loss to a certain extent, and probably five thousand have lost every dollar of their possessions. The devastation produced is worse, tenfold, than the ravages of a military campaign, and hundreds of square miles of territory, which two weeks ago, were teeming with industry and enterprise, are now as desolate as the desert of Sahara.

The loss sustained appeals to the charitable all over the land, but with special force to the residents of Michigan. These houseless, homeless, wanderers are our own neighbors, relatives, and kindred. An immense charity has been forced upon us which the good people of Michigan should meet with liberality and promptness, and we believe they will prove themselves equal to the emergency. These people must be kept upon their farms and supported during the winter, or they will add a large and needless pauper population to every county in the state. It is not only the dictate of generosity and christian charity to provide for their pressing wants at once, but in the long run it will be a measure of economy also. We are glad to see that old Lenawee county is doing her duty in the present emergency. Our local columns will show what has been done, and is doing, in Tecumseh and other townships, but still it is proper to urge upon all the necessity for prompt and liberal action. There should be an efficient organization in every village and township in the county, and canvassers should visit every house to solicit aid. The plan adopted in Raisin is a good one. A central committee of two or three with a soliciting committee of two in each school district.

In response to the inquiry, "What is needed?" we would reply: Everything

What are the facts? Five thousand families are left homeless, without a roof to shelter them, clothes to wear, or food to eat. They need first of all provisions, to prevent starvation.—They need medicines, for many of them are maimed and burned severely. They not only need provisions for immediate use, but also potatoes, pork, beans and flour to carry them through the coming winter. They must have horses and cows with which to do the necessary fall work and help sustain their families, and fodder to keep them. They need new houses to shelter them from the blasts of the coming winter, and these must be built within the next two months. They must have clothing for themselves and children, and a few articles of household furniture and bed clothing. They need harness, ploughs, drags and other agricultural implements to enable them to put in their fall crops. And fifty thousand bushels of seed wheat are needed at once. If a full acreage of wheat can be sown in the burnt districts this fall, they will the sooner become self supporting. The attention of the rural towns is especially called to this fact. Every farmer can easily donate a bag of wheat, two bushels, securely tied up in a stout bag. A gift of this small amount from every farmer in Michigan would provide the necessary quantity in ten days. A careful estimate gives these figures of a few minor articles that must be provided—Twenty thousand pairs of boots and shoes, ten thousand changes of under garments, five thousand beds, ten thousand blankets, fifteen thousand sheets, twenty thousand pillow cases, five thousand mattresses, ten thousand pillows. All these articles can be readily picked up by a careful canvass through the central and southern portions of the state. The following appeals for aid have been issued which will give additional information as to the condition of the sufferers and what they require:

ANOTHER APPEAL FOR AID.

PORT HURON, Mich., Sept. 14, 1881.

To the American People:

We have to-night returned from the burnt district of Huron and Sanilac counties. We have seen the burned, disfigured and writhing bodies of men, women and children. Rough board coffins containing the dead followed to the grave by a few blinded, despairing relatives; crowds of half-starved, people at some of the stations, asking bread for their family and neighbors. We heard of more than 200 victims already buried, and more charred and bloated bodies daily discovered. Already more than 1,500 families are found to be utterly destitute and houseless. They huddle in barns, in school houses, in their neighbor's houses, scorched, blinded, hopeless. Some still wander half-crazed around the ruins of their habitations, vainly seeking their dead. Some in speechless agony are wringing their hands and refuse to be comforted. More than 10,000 people who, only one week ago occupied happy, comfortable homes, are to-day houseless, homeless sufferers. They are hungry and almost naked when found, and in such great numbers and so widely scattered that our best effort and greatest resources fail to supply their immediate wants. Without speedy aid many will perish and many more suffer and become exiles. Our people will do their utmost for their relief, but all our resources would fail to meet their necessities. We appeal to the charity and generosity of the American people. Send help without delay.

Mayor of Port Huron and Chairman of the Relief Committee.

WHAT THE FARMERS CAN DO.

PORT HURON, Sept. 12.—The following circular was issued to the Farmers of Michigan:

The terrible fires lately raging in Sanilac and Huron counties have passed over half a million acres of land, causing great loss of life and property. This loss falls chiefly upon the farming community, many of whom are entirely destitute. Their support during the coming winter may confidently be expected from a liberal people. But their future support depends mainly upon their being able to put in their fall crops. There is yet time to do this, if prompt action be taken. The undersigned have been appointed a committee to secure for them their seed grain, and now confidently ask the assistance of their brother farmers. Where second hand harnesses can be contributed they will be very acceptable. The railroad agent at your nearest station is authorized to receipt for all contributions which will be transported free of cost. Each contribution will also be acknowledged by letters from the committee direct to the donor. Upon application to the committee, bags for grain may be had, and we earnestly request you to give of your surplus what you can spare.

WM. HARTSUFF, Chairman.
JNO. P. SANBORN.
CHAS. A. WARD, Secretary.

A circular has been issued by the Adrian Relief committee urging upon every township to organize. Each local committee is requested to keep a record of all supplies sent direct, so that Lenawee county may receive the proper credit.

Literary Note.

The publishers of Rev. Dr. Robinson's "Spiritual Songs for the Sunday School" have just issued a little book containing only the hymns of that work and selling for one half the money. It will be the most desirable supplement to the large book, greatly increasing its usefulness and placing it within the reach of the largest mission-schools. The new edition is prettily bound in flexible red cloth and costs but 20 cents. The complete tune edition, bound in stiff boards, covered with red cloth, with red edges, costs 40 cents to schools in quantities.

CLINTON is hard at work for the fire sufferers. A good organization has been perfected, and the work is progressing finely. At last accounts about $350 had been raised. Clinton will do her duty.

Adrian Press: Among those participating in the reunion at Morenci, was uncle Amos Soper, of Clayton, a veteran of 1812. He was made an honorary member and enjoyed the meeting thoroughly. He was the recipient of marked attention from the boys, and was in the best of health and spirits. He went to the banquet and ate very heartily, and very likely ate too much, as it was late before the business meeting was over. He rode part way home Wednesday evening, and stayed over night at the home of a friend. Here the good people churned and he asked for a draught of buttermilk of which he drank freely. Thursday he returned home and was taken ill with dysentery and Friday evening the old veteran yielded to the summons, and his spirit went on the eternal march. He was born January 10, 1798, and was a remarkably preserved man for one who had been so often in his life exposed to hardships. His brother Ira, also a veteran of 1812, and some two and a-half years older, came to the Press office with the sad tidings, and seemed very much broken down by the event. Probably there is not another instance in the United States where two brothers are living in the same village, who were veterans of 1812.

Literary Note from the Century Co., N. Y.

There is hardly a literary man in America whose writings have been more widely read than those of Dr. J. G. Holland, nor one whose name is better known among people. It is said that nearly 600,000 copies of his books have been sold, to say nothing of the enormous sale of Scribner's Monthly, over which he presides as editor-in-chief. The Century Co., publishers of Scribner's (to be known as "The Century Magazine" after October,) will soon issue a portrait of Dr. Holland, which is said to be a remarkable fine likeness; it is the photograph of a life-size crayon-drawing of the head and shoulders, recently made by Wyatt Eaton, and will be about the size of the original picture. It is to be offered in connection with subscriptions to The Century Magazine.

A claim has recently been made that a western lad of 12 summers was the youngest telegraph operator in the country. The papers have of late contained biographical sketches of the youth, and one Eastern Journal has seen fit to publish his portrait. Wixom, Oakland county, has a telegraph operator but six years of age. His name is Chauncy Ranch. He is the son of John R. Ranch, the Flint and Pere Marquette station agent at that place. Young Ranch learned the Morse alphabet when but 4 years of age, and has continued to operate ever since on a private line that runs from the depot to his father's house, about a quarter of a mile distant.

Adrian Times: 172 copies of the laws passed by the last session of the legislature were shipped to county clerk Hunter from Lansing. Of these ten copies will be distributed to the newspapers of the county, three volumes to the public schools; to the Raisin Valley seminery, Ladies' library association, resident members of the state boards, clerk of circuit court and to the prosecuting attorney one copy each; four copies to the members of the legislature, eighty-nine to the justices of the county, forty-nine to supervisors and clerks, three to the superintendents of the poor, and nine to the county offices.

"A Girl's Choice."

It was in a drug store of course. A interesting incidents occur in drug stores,—that is nearly all. She was pretty, with blue eyes, and golden hair, one of those kind of beauties the poet would have called an "angel," but for the fact that a colony of pimples on her fair frontispiece precluded all thought of a celestial being. Bowing timidly to the handsome clerk, she asked for "Swayne's Ointment for skin diseases," and upon receiving it vanished like the morning dew before the Summer sun.

WOOD WANTED.

A few cords of dry four foot wood. Any farmer having wood of this kind to sell can find a purchaser by calling at the HERALD OFFICE.

A Card.

We desire to tender our sincere thanks to our neighbors and friends for their assistance during our late bereavement, and especially to Mr. & Mrs. Jos. Osborn for their untiring efforts to befriend us.

MR. & MRS. E. N. VESCELIUS.
MRS. HENRY MANGUS.

THE following item from the Dodgeville Chronicle shows that Frank Darling is making things lively among the Wisconsin farmers:

Last week the inhabitants of our dilapidated burg were alarmed by the appearance of what we supposed to be a lightning rod man. Of course, we expected to be duped, consequently to be equal to the emergency, we had our faculties of perception keenly edged. But we are often mistaken in our conclusions. Instead of being a lightning rod man, he turned out to be Mr. Frank Darling, the gentlemanly agent of the world renowned Howe scales. Mr. Darling handles from counter to stock scales. Farmers wanting scales can do no better than to purchase of Mr. Darling.

The new highway law, passed last winter, will not take effect until 1883, at least the main feature of it, contained in the new chapter four which provides for raising the highway tax in money and letting out the work by contract, instead of each man working out his own tax as now; unless the towns which desire the change take steps this month, by holding a town meeting and making the necessary arrangements. So those interested will take notice and act accordingly. Many people think that our roads would be worked to much better advantage by paying the highway tax in money instead of work, and then hiring the work done, as the new law makes provision for.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH. SEPT. 15, 1881.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

THESE are splendid nights for sleep.

TOM ADAMSON started for New York this morning.

MISS JESSIE SINK and cousin, of Monroe, were in town over Sunday.

VERNOR CRANE was home from St. Louis, Mo. last week and returned Monday.

J. S. KIES, of Clinton, was in town last Saturday, and favored us with a little visit.

FRED H. BURLINGAME, of Coldwater, spent last Sunday at his home in this village.

L. I. BIDWELL has his livery stable connected with Adamson's store by a telephone line.

MRS. GEO. ADAMSON, who has been suffering with inflammatory rheumatism lately, is now getting a trifle better.

HARRY ROOT finds employment with Tom Adamson. We are glad that Harry concludes to remain in Tecumseh.

THE Michigan fire committee in New York have already collected $10,000 for the fire sufferers, and more will be raised.

STRONG & MCNAIR have a new advertising card this week. They are getting on a mammoth stock of goods for the fall trade.

THE Wabash railroad will transport aid and supplies to the fire sufferers without charge, if properly boxed and packed for transportation.

W. H. TALLMAN, of the Hillsdale Democrat, has just put in a new job press which will add very much to his facilities for doing job work.

MISS KATE STEVENS is making her Tecumseh friends a short visit this week.

THE L. S. & M. S. railroad company will carry supplies to the fire suffers free of charge.

HARRY LEE has gone into the boot and shoe trade again. The little old man gives full particulars on the 8th page.

WE acknowledge the receipt of a complimentary ticket to the coming county fair from the secretary, S. B. Mann.

Detroit Evening News: Tecumseh has a new dry goods store, and the ladies are in a flutter of delight. It gives 'em another stock to select from.

FRANK BOWLSBY has been home from Chicago for a few days. He has been doing well there and is now going to start in business for himself in Milwaukee,

THE gentleman who operates the lightning axle shortener is doing a good business. He seems to have a job on hand all the time. The improvement is certainly all he claims for it.

ON and after Monday next, Sept. 19, Miss Lucy Train can be seen at the Bee Hive store in Tecumseh, where she will be pleased to see all of her old friends and serve them with good bargains in Dry Goods.

GRANT ZEIGLER who has been traveling with Haverley's Mastodon Minstrels had to leave the company in New York and came home on account of sickness. He will join them again when they return to Detroit.

MISS EDITH C. PHELPS, who occupied a position in the grammar department of the Battle Creek schools last year, goes to Hancock, in the upper peninsula, this year. She will fill a position in the High School at a salary of $600.

THE contract has been let by the Common Council for the construction of a receiving vault in the Tecumseh cemetery. The Hardwick Granite Co. take the job for $1470, and the vault is to be finished by the 15th of November next.

MR. S. F. MARSTELLER, of Clinton, will on the first day of October next open a marble and granite yard in this village at the old stand of Gray & Son, on Railroad st. We invite the attention of our readers to his card which appears elsewhere in this paper.

THE Brooklyn Exponent has been launched upon the sea of journalism, with C. W. Clough, formerly of the Clinton News, at the helm. It is a neat trim looking little craft, and is well freighted with local news and advertising. May it have a successful voyage.

MR. R. L. BEARDSLEY, late of Atchison, Kan., has been engaged as assistant in the freight office at the depot. Mr. Beardsley served on the police force of Atchison for several months, and comes to us highly recommended. He will take the position vacated by Harry Root.

WE would call attention to Dudley & Fowle's furniture ad. in this week's issue. This firm is probably the most extensive retail establishment in Detroit, if not in the state. They have seventeen show rooms full of furniture and their business last year was over a quarter of a million.

BEN REYNOLDS has lately purchased the interest in the livery business on railroad street, owned by Geo. Burroughs, and will hereafter conduct the business alone. It is safe to say that Mr. Reynolds, now owning the entire property and stock, will run a good livery stable, and people will do well to call and see him.

YOUNG garden thieves have commenced their work of plunder among fruit trees and grapes; and it is time to set bear traps and use shot guns on them. A few shot in the hides of some of these young garden burglars would bring them to a realizing sense of their condition sooner than a dozen Sunday-school lessons.

THE State Fair will open on Monday next, Sept. 19, and continue five days. Special trains will be run on the Jackson Branch during the fair, leaving Adrian each morning at 7:55 A.M., and leaving Jackson to return at 6 P. M. Tickets will be sold at all stations between Adrian and Jackson at one-half the usual rates.

THE Detroit Free Press is always an enterprising paper, but during the terrible days of the forest fires last week it surpassed itself in gathering the most complete and accurate details from day to day of the great calamity. No other paper that has fallen under our notice at all approached it in its news from the fire stricken districts.

DANIEL E. SOPER, of Newaygo, Mich., is President of the Newaygo County Agricultural Society, and he remembers one of his old friends by sending us a complimentary ticket to the fair. The fair will be held four days commencing Sept. 27th. In addition to other novel features there will be horse races, a bicycle race, base ball game and two balloon ascensions.

Co. B, of Adrian, is one of the fortunate companies selected to go to Yorktown. The battalion will leave Jackson on the 15th of October.

SIMON SHULTIS, for many years the town treasurer of Cambridge, has gone to Baden, Germany, the home of his childhood, for a two months' visit.

ELIJAH WILSON is always around when there are any new bridges to build. His latest contract is that for building the big Leroy bridge in Palmyra.

THERE will be a grove meeting at Coller's grove in Macon, near Pennington's corners, next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Preaching by Rev. H. Shepard of this village.

MR. EDWARD LOGAN, of Groveland, N. Y., Mr. Slaight, of Sparta, N. Y., and Miss Bomer, of Livingston county, N. Y., are the guests of Wm. Richard, Esq. for a few days.

WE have heard good news from Cyrus W. Wells. He and his wife rejoice in the addition to their family of a beautiful nine pound daughter. The western climate has a good effect.

S. H. MERRITT left home last week for Cadillac to enter the employ of Cobbs, Mitchell & Co. of that city.—His family will remain in Tecumseh for the present, probably through the winter.

DR. FROTHINGHAM of the University started Tuesday on a visit to the fire desolated section of the state, to render professional aid to the sufferers, and make a personal investigation of the state of affairs there.

WE are in receipt of volume one, number one, of the Educational News, published by W. B. Mumford, of Adrian, Mich. It is devoted to Lenawee county schools and educational matters in general, and should have a generous support in this county.

ALVIN C. OSBORN, of Woodstock, halted at the HERALD office last Saturday on his way to Dundee. On his return Monday he halted again and informed us that he had enjoyed a splendid visit there among old friends whom he had not seen before for 25 years.

The Lake Shore road will sell round trip tickets to attend the county fair, at one and one third fare, from the following points: Manchester, Jackson Branch; Fayette, on the Canada Southern; and Pittsford on the main line. Intermediate points are included. Tickets good to return at the close of the fair.

THE county fair will commence at Adrian on Monday, Sept. 26th, and continue for five days. The present indications are that the exhibition will be the best one ever held in this county. Extensive preparations are in progress and several new features will be introduced to make the show both useful and attractive. Arrange your business so you can spend two or three days at the fair.

GAINSLEY & CO. open their new store in the Hewitt block, to-day.—This firm comes to us from Schoolcraft, well recommended as enterprising merchants and honorable men.—They intend to carry a complete stock of goods in their line. They have their store finely fitted up and their goods very tastefully arranged. They will doubtless deserve and receive their share of the public patronage.

THE FIRE SUFFERERS.

Plans for Local Relief Adopted—Tecumseh Responding Nobly to the Call.

Last Friday a petition for a public meeting in Tecumseh to take action for extending relief to the fire sufferers, was generally signed by the business men, and accordingly President Fitzsimmons called a meeting on that evening at the Council Building.

In response to the call, a large number of our citizens assembled at the Council rooms in the evening. Col. Fitzsimmons was called to the chair and P. S. McKinnon was chosen secretary. The object of the meeting was briefly stated, which was to organize a plan for raising money and supplies to send to the sufferers in the Northern counties. On motion of Mr. Conley, a committee of three was appointed by the chairman to make inquiry as to the best and most effective way of rendering the needed assistance. Rev. C. E. Conley, H. W. Conkling and E. A. Tribou were selected as this committee. On motion of J. P. Slayton, a committee to solicit contributions was chosen as follows: Col. Fitzsimmons, J. H. Osborn, J. W. Patterson, P. S. McKinnon, J. W. DePuy, H. H. Keyser, Minor Davidson, F. C. Rector, J. D. Tallman, Z. Cook, James Colvin, Woolston Comfort. This committee was instructed to add to its membership such names as seemed desirable. The following names have since been added to the soliciting committee: Mrs. E. B. Wood, Mrs. N. M. Sutton, Mrs. P. Bills, Miss Jennie Root, Mrs. Ed. Armstrong, Mrs. C. T. Cummins, Mrs. Lydia Hamilton, Miss Carrie Hand, Miss Eva Hause, Mrs. J. F. Hicks, Mrs. C. L. Albaugh, Abe Hanford, A. W. Mills.

On Saturday morning these committees began work at once and they have met with most gratifying success. All day Monday teams were bringing in clothing and other supplies and delivering them at the Council Building, where the boxes were packed for shipment. The village has been entirely canvassed for clothing and every family responded with something, while the donations of money have been liberal.

The money subscriptions have now reached nearly $500, and will exceed that sum when the canvass is finished. A draft for $400 has already been sent to J. Jenks & Co., at Sand Beach.—Fifteen large dry goods boxes of clothing and bedding were shipped on Tuesday and yesterday to Port Huron. A careful estimate of the value of these articles as they were packed places the worth of each box at $100, and this estimate is under the actual value. One of these boxes weighed over 700 pounds. Minor Davidson collected $65 in cash outside of the village and a large amount of supplies.—Miss Cora DePuy started out in the north part of Tecumseh and the south part of Clinton townships and collected over $70; $10 in cash, 18 bushels of wheat and a lot of flour and potatoes. Mrs. Carrie Patterson, Mrs. Jehiel Davidson, Mrs. Sumner Spofford, Miss Sarah James, Miss Lizzie Thompson and Mrs. Alf. James spent two entire days at the Council Rooms mending and repairing clothing and helping pack the boxes. We found it impossible to obtain a list of the donors, as the subscription papers are in the hands of the soliciting committees, and supplies are coming in every hour. Every one gives something. Such an exhibition of spontaneous giving was never before seen in Tecumseh.

Clinton News: Rev. G. H. Drewe, formerly of Elk Rapids, has been appointed by Bishop Harris to fill the position of pastor of St. John's Episcopal church of this place, and will hold services regularly morning and evening. A subscription paper has been circulated and nearly $500 thus far has been pledged towards defraying the salary of Mr. Drewe and other incidental expenses. This paper is now in the hands of the editor of this paper, and it is hoped others will also subscribe. Mr. Drewe intends to bring his family here at once and locate here.

FRANK JOHNSON, whom we all remember as a Tecumseh boy, is now running the Wabash Restaurant in Toledo, is doing a splendid business and keeping the finest place of that kind in the city. He is located right in the central portion of the city on Summit st., and has all the conveniences to make every one welcome and happy who may come to see him. His Billiard Parlors are elegant, his Restaurant in splendid shape and his sample rooms the finest in Toledo.

LAST night about 8:30 o'clock, San Francisco time, our friend, Geo. T. Smith was married to Miss Lillie E. Spaulding, of San Francisco, Cal. Now when we received the nicely printed invitations to Geo. Smith's wedding, way off in California, it was kind of a "stem winder" on us, and we had to put the "crystals" on our eyes so to see if there could be no mistake, but we simply congratulate the happy couple and hope that George has found a "jewel" worthy to put in a solid gold case.

COUNTY FAIR.

At the county fair this fall some very important changes will be made in the arrangements of the different departments. Among these the most valuable will be the arrangement of all agricultural exhibits in what is now known as mechanic's hall. This will admit of much more system and regularity in the departments, besides greatly economizing valuable space. Mechanic's hall will be known as agricultural hall. The removal of fruits and vegetables from floral hall will create fourteen spaces sixteen feet square instead of four similar spaces formerly, for merchant's display. Two merchants will occupy each space Already a number of these squares have been engaged, and the outlook now is that even the increased space created by this rearrangement will hardly be sufficient for the accomodation of all. The increase of space is chiefly caused by the removal of the fruit racks from the center of floral hall, which leaves the increased room along the sides of the building, and gives the open hall for spectators directly through the center. Merchants are invited to look at the vacant spaces at once.—Adrian Times.

Peterson's Magazine for October is unusually good, even for that incomparable lady's book. The steel engraving, "Don't be Scared," is one of exceptional beauty; and so is the colored, steel fashion plate, with its five, charming-looking, exquisitely-dressed ladies. There are two colored patterns, with designs for fans, a line of decoration that is now all the rage. The historical novelet, "The News From Yorktown," which has attracted so much attention, is appropriately concluded in this number in time for the "Yorktown Centennial." All the stories and novelets, however, are good; in fact, in "Peterson," only the very best are given. We cannot too often refer to this magazine as altogether the cheapest and best of its kind. Where only one is taken, "Peterson" should be the one, for it fills more wants than any other. The terms are but two dollars a year. Great deductions are made to clubs, and handsome premiums are given to persons for getting up clubs, among them a beautifully bound photograph album; in short, the inducements of every kind are unprecedented. Specimens will be sent, gratis, to persons wishing to get up clubs. Address for this purpose, or for subscribing, Chas. J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Card to the Public.

I beg to announce to you that on Oct. 1st, I will open a Marble and Granite Yard at the old stand formerly occupied by Gray & Son, Railroad st., Tecumseh.

In my experience for the past seven years I have endeavored to conduct my business in good faith, and with due regard to the interests of my customers. My efforts in this particular have met with such a degree of success, as to warrant a belief that I may extend my business and occupy a larger field, and therefore in my new location I hope with increased facilities and advantages to be able to reach and satisfactorily serve a large share of customers in this and adjoining counties, and to them I offer my services, and in soliciting their favors can assure them that I will give my best attention to their interest. I will make a specialty of Red and Gray Granite, making my purchases direct from the largest quarries of America and Scotland, and of Marble monuments and headstones I will always keep my large stock both in Clinton and Tecumseh complete and at correspondingly low prices. If favored with a share of your patronage I will give my personal attention to your orders. Very Truly Yours,
S. F. MARSTELLER.

Clinton News: On Saturday last a little 6-year old daughter of F. H. Davenport, of Franklin, received a severe kick from a horse. It seems that she was playing with a kitten and at the same time with the horse. The latter stuck its nose up to the kitten's face, at which kitty took umbrage and spat and scratched at the horse, which thereupon turned and kicked at the cat, but hit the child instead, breaking down the nose and injuring the whole face. Dr. A. F. Tuttle dressed the wound, and the little girl will probably recover without much deformity.

READ what Prof. Olney of the University of Michigan says about "Gems for the Fireside." "Dr. Tiffany's book is no hyprocrite. It is just what it professes itself, "Gems" to enrich and beautify the "Fireside." The selections are excellent—no rubbish among them. It is an admirable book to lie on the table of the family room where any one dropping down for a few moments' rest can find, right at hand, a solace and a delight. Don't have it put away in the best room—for while it is good enough for any room, it is too good not to be used."

THE Brownvillites say they had a nice time at Sand Lake last Saturday.

REV. W. G. PUDDEFOOT, of White Cloud, Michigan, is in town and will occupy the M. E. church pulpit next Sunday morning.

DIED.

MANGUS—At the residence of his son-in-law, E. N. Vescelius in Macon on the 4th inst, Henry Mangus, aged 78 years.

The deceased was born in Pennsylvania, Dec. 15th, 1803. In 1820 he moved with his parents to Seneca co., N. Y., where he resided ten years. In the spring of 1830 he moved to Michigan and settled in Raisin, which township and Tecumseh have ever since been his home. Feb. 9th, 1826 he was married to Martha Call with whom he lived until her death, which took place July, 1867. About eighteen months after, he married a second wife, Sally Ann Boyce, of Adrian. He leaves four children surviving him: one son, George Mangus, and three daughters, Mrs. I. P. Keyser, Mrs. Jno. Sutfin, of Tecumseh, and Mrs. E. N. Vescelius, of Macon. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. A. De Spelder at Mr. Vescelius' home in Macon on Tuesday, Sept. 6th, and the remains were deposited in the Tecumseh Cemetery.

Three months earlier while at work in his shop Mr. Culbertson was prostrated by the great heat, then prevailing. He never rallied but lay in great weakness, yet quite conscious. Toward the end he suffered great pain at times; then after a few days of stupor he became entirely conscious but unable to speak, and so passed away.—The funeral services were held at the Presbyterian church, with which he united more than fifty years before; leading uniformly a consistent christian life. The funeral text was felt by all to be a fitting exposition of his character and conduct, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." "Uncle" Robert Culbertson was indeed a peculiarly pure man.—Always unselfish, helpful and kind; no taint of dishonor ever attached itself to his name. In all money matters his hands lay in death white as virgin snow from heaven. Unobtrusive—retiring, shrinking from publicity, blushing at the mention of his own virtues. Decided and constant, a christian man, seeking each day of his life to do to others as he would that they should do to him.

"Nor love thy life, nor hate; but what thou liv'st Live well: how long or short, permit to Heaven."

Grass as a Material for Paper.

It has been discovered that any of the common grasses make a superior article, and a patent has been issued to the discoverer. The following is the process:

"The manufacture of paper pulp and paper from paper grass is one of the novelties for which a patent has been obtained. Any of the common grasses found in the field, lawn, or meadows, may be used, and it is said that the green grass pulp produced from them make a paper of great strength and length of fibre, and possesses tenacity, softness and flexibility; and further, that this paper is even softer and more transparent than that made of linen. An advantage not to be overlooked is the one of economy, since one square foot gives in the whole year, 0.9 to 1.0 of a pound of green grass, making from 36,432 to 40,340 pounds to the acre. One pound of green grass makes one-fourth to one-sixth of a pound of fine, bleached, finished paper, or 3,711 pounds of finished paper to the acre."

"So long as the sap is in circulation and the chlorophyl, silica, and other inorganic matters are not dried in, in which event the fibre is seriously impaired for the purpose of paper, either old or young grass may be used, but to avoid danger, it is best to have the grass cut or mown before it begins to bloom."

"The first process of manufacture is to pass the grass between the rollers of the press, which crushes or loosens the fibre and squeezes out most of the sap. It is then freed from dirt by being throughly agitated or washed by other means in a large tank of water, in temperature either warm or cold. A perforated false bottom in the tank contains the grass and allows the dirt to fall into the compartment below, where a pipe gives egress to the dirt and wash water. After sufficient washing the crushed grass is boiled in an open kettle, or in a steam kettle with lye, in a proportions of a pound of caustic soda, or two-tenths of a pound of caustic potash, or six-tenths of lime to 100 pounds of grass. With an open kettle the boiling is continued from four to five hours; with a steam kettle two hours will suffice."

"From the kettle the material goes into a filtering-trough of magnesia for about thirty minutes, then is placed a second time in a solution of carbonate of soda, and finally, a second time in a solution of sulphuric acid. These operations may be repeated more or less, till the pulp is as fine and white as required, after which it is washed in clear water."

Another method is to filter the crushed pulp with water-glass, and bleach it with a solution of chloride of lime or chloride of soda. Still another is to bleach the crude pulp in chlorine gas, and finish with water-glass, after which the pulp is washed with clean water.

Feet Distortion in China.

The binding of a child's feet is not begun until she has learned to walk and do certain things for herself, as it would be difficult, if not impossible to teach her afterward. The rich bind their children's feet from the sixth or seventh year, but the poor do not begin until they are 12, or even older. Parents who have been forced by poverty to sell a daughter as a slave when she was a child, will bring her back afterward if they can, and then, no matter how old she is, they bind up her feet and marry her as a lady. But the pain of binding a full-grown foot is said to be most intense. Strong white bandages two inches wide, are manufactured for the purpose. Those worn the first year are two yards long, and about five feet in length, worn afterward. The following, according to Miss Fielde, is the method adopted: "The end of the strip is laid on the inside of the foot at the instep, then carried over the top of the toes and under the foot, drawing the four toes with it down upon the sole; thence it is passed over the foot and around the heel; and by this stretch the toes and heel are drawn together, leaving a bulge on the instep and a deep indentation in the sole, under the instep. This course is gone over in successive layers of bandage until the strip of cloth is all used and the final end is sewn down. To please a Chinawoman the "indentation" must measure about an inch and a half from the part of the foot which rests on the ground up to the instep. The toes are then completely drawn over the sole, and the foot is so squeezed upward that in walking only the ball of the great toe touches the ground. Large quantities of powdered alum are used when the feet are first bound, and always afterward, to prevent ulceration and lessen the offensive odor. The bandage is taken off only once a month. At the end of the first month the foot is put in hot water, and after it had been allowed to soak some time, the bandage is carefully unwound, the dead cuticule, of which there is so much, being abraded during the process of unbinding. When the foot is entirely unbound, it is not unusual to find ulcers and other abominations. Frequently, too, we are told, a large piece of flesh sloughs off the sole, and it sometimes happens that one or two toes drop off. When this happens, the patient considers herself amply repaid for additional suffering by having smaller and more delicate feet than her neighbors! Indeed, the desire to have small feet is so intense that girls will slyly tighten their own bandages in spite of the pain!"

A Duellist Laughed A

A man whose character for courage is established can never suffer by refusing to conform to the silly "code of honor," and his challenger will gain nothing but the reputation of a quarrelsome simpleton.

The centennial celebration of the capture of Stony Point recalled an anecdote of one of the storming party, Col. Scott, afterwards Governor of Kentucky. He was a brave man, and acquired a reputation in his adopted State of a skillful Indian fighter.

While he was governor, some fellow sent him a challenge, on account of an offense which he imagined Scott had committed against his (the challenger's) honor. The old soldier did not notice it.

The man who had given public notice of his intention to "call out" the governor was much annoyed at his silent contempt. After waiting several days he sought the governor for an explanation, and the following conversation took place:

"Governor Scott, you received a challenge from me?"

"Your challenge was delivered, sir."

"But I have received neither an acknowledgment nor an acceptance of it."

"I presume not sir, as I have sent neither."

"But, of course, you intend to accept?"

"Of course I do not."

"What! Not accept my challenge? Is it possible that you, Governor Scott, brought up in the army, decline a combat?"

"I do with you."

"Post me a coward!" exclaimed the governor with a hearty laugh. "Post away, and you'll only post yourself a liar, and everbody else will say so."

And that was the end of it.

Buckwheat in the West.

Western farmers are constantly complaining that there is no home market for their products, and that they are obliged to send everything to the seaboard states or to Europe in order to obtain money for it. The cost of transportation, they affirm, reduces the price to such an extent that there is little or no profit in farming. If they had a home market for their crops they could become wealthy in the business of producing them. They say all these things, in face of the fact that this market is supplied with turnips from Canada, cider from Ohio, corn-husks from Maryland, peanuts from Tennessee, and sweet potatoes from New Jersey.

This market is rarely supplied with the requisite amount of buckwheat, or the flour made from it. What generally passes for buckwheat flour is a mixture, in various proportions, of rye and corn meal, wheat middlings, and a small quantity of the article for which it is named. The comparatively small amount of buckwheat sold here and in other western cities comes principally from New York, Pennsylvania and Canada. There is no good reason why the West cannot produce this grain not only for home consumption, but for the supply of other sections of the country. The consumption of buckwheat would be doubled if a genuine article of flour was manufactured and put on the market in packages suited to the wants of the retail trade.

Take the seasons as they go, buckwheat is a profitable crop to raise. Only a half bushel of seed is sufficient for an acre. The average yield per acre is about twenty bushels. A machine is not necessary to cut it, and it may be thrashed economically with a flail and winnowed by pouring it through a current of air. It exhausts the soil less than any sown crop that can be produced on it. It may be raised to good advantage on land too poor to produce paying crops of corn, wheat, oats, rye, or potatoes. The crop is useful in subduing tough sod and preparing it for the growth of plants that require thorough cultivation. The ground need be prepared for it, the seed sown, and the grain harvested at times when work on the farm is not driving. It matures quicker than any field crop produced on northern farms.

A fair yield of grain is often obtained from land on which a crop of fall rye or grass has been harvested before the ploughing was done. To produce a large crop, the soil should be good. To give the best results it should be as well prepared as for a crop of corn or small grains. The reason why small crops of buckwheat are often produced are manifest. The land in which it is sown is of the poorest quality, and no pains are taken with its preparation. The seed is often several years old, and is scattered over the ground by a person unacquainted with sowing grains. An attempt is made to cover it by drawing a harrow over a lot of turf, stones and lumps of hard earth. No good crop of any kind is obtained by this kind of management.

Must Have a Scotch Hammer.

A correspondent writes of an amusing incident which occurred at Oneonta, N. Y., and says that he knows all the persons referred to, and can vouch for the truth of it. "A carpenter and joiner, in Oneonta said to his fellow-workmen: 'As soon as I can get a chance, I am going to send over home to Scotland and get a claw-hammer, one that I can work with; I can't get a decent hammer in America.' About this time a friend of his was going back to the 'auld sod,' and he commissioned him to go to the best hardware store in Glasgow and get a carpenter's claw-hammer, the best he could find, regardless of cost.' In due time the friend returned, bringing the desired tool. The party gathered around him, including some of his fellow-workmen, and he proceeded to open the package, in the meantime making the remark: 'I'll show you something to make your eyes water,' as the friend had assured him that he had brought him the kind of hammer used by the best workmen in Glasgow. He affectionately unwound the wraps, and, as he took the tool and handed it over to his friends, he said: 'There, look at that!' One of his friends did so, and read the trade-mark on the hammer: 'Made at Norwich, N. Y., U. S.' There is no more bragging about scotch hammers."—Albany Argus.

"The Domestic Tyrant."

"The average man," quoth Mrs. Pardington, "is a weak and irritable domestic tyrant," and Mrs. P. is correct. Tyrannical to a fault the average man will enter the blissful paradise of a happy home, scratch himself in fiendish glee, send the baby into convulsions, and for what? Why, because he has the Itching Piles, and is too mean to buy Swayne's Ointment, which is an infallible cure for the worst cases of that annoying complaint.
